This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at `http://books.google.com/`

BUILDING FOR LIBRARY OF CONGRESS.

COMMUNICATION

FROM THE

CHIEF OF ENGINEERS, U. S. ARMY,

TRANSMITTING

A report on the construction of the building for the Library of Congress.

DECEMBER 1, 1890.—Referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

OFFICE OF THE CHIEF OF ENGINEERS,
UNITED STATES ARMY,
Washington, D. C., December 1, 1890.

SIR: I have the honor to submit the following report of proceedings and operations for the construction of the building for the Library of Congress for the year ending December 1, 1890:

As described and partially illustrated by photograph, in my last annual report, the masonry of the entire cellar story and area walls, including the construction of the basement floor, had at that date been completed, bringing the building up to the level of the exterior surface of the ground.

During the succeeding winter season the remaining seven stationary derricks, making ten in all, together with four stationary steam engines for operating them, were set in place and made ready for use in the spring. The excavation at the east side of the building for the boiler and coal vaults and the chimney foundation was also made, while during the same period cut granite for both the court and front walls of the building continued to be delivered steadily from the quarries and cutting yards of the contractors at Concord, N. H., and Granite, Md., where work proceeded without interruption.

Regular building operations were resumed on March 20, when the construction of the boiler and coal vaults was begun. That work was continued steadily until the vaults were finished, about the 1st of June.

Stone setting and brickwork were resumed on the building proper on April 3, since which date the building operations, consisting chiefly of stone and brick work, have continued uninterruptedly to the present time and are still in progress.

The entire basement story, which is, in fact, the first story above the exterior ground, has been built. and all of the iron girders, beams, and fire-proof arching constituting the first-story floor, covering the basement story, have been put in place. This includes the main reading-room or rotunda floor. Above this floor level the court walls of the first story proper, including the rotunda but exclusive of the book-stacks, have been brought more than half way up to the second-floor level, and considerable progress has been made with the arching and vaulting in the main stair hall and approaches to the rotunda and also in the corridors of the west front. On the north front and north half of the west front the first three courses of the first-story stonework have been laid.

The accompanying photograph, compared with that contained in my last annual report, furnishes a good view of the general progress made, in actual construction on the ground, to November 21.

The office force has been busily engaged throughout the year upon the working drawings and the studies necessary to perfect all interior arrangements and equipment of the building for its purpose as a large library in every particular.

Contracts are in force for all of the dressed stone and facing bricks required to complete the exterior and court walls and those materials are being delivered with regularity.

The rate of progress of the work is necessarily quite dependent upon the supply of cut granite received, the special sizes, patterns, and fine quality of which, both in stock and workmanship, require time to produce. No serious delay, however, has thus far occurred and none is anticipated. The building has accordingly been brought to the point originally expected to be reached at this date.

Following are the quantities in round numbers of some of the work performed and materials consumed during the year.

Excavation for boiler and coal vaults	cubic yards	12,700
Cut granite set in courtyard walls	cubic feet	24,000
Cut granite set in front walls	do	69,000
Bricks of all kinds laid		6,900,000
Iron girders and beams	pounds	579,140
Cement	barrels	15,200
Sand	cubic yards	4,700

The average number of workmen employed daily on the building during the respective months of the past working season was:

March	69	August	261
April	167	September	242
May	227	October	245
June	279	November	252
July	277

While this force of men has been engaged on the building itself, it should be stated that about double the number have been constantly at work for the building at the contractors' stone quarries and cutting yards and other places.

		Girders	3.15 cents per pound.	Do.
		Punched beams	3.25 cents per pound.
		Framed beams	3.45 cents per pound.
Nov. 13	J. Edw. Chapman	Coal:
		Egg	$5.25 per ton	In force.
		Stove	$5.40 per ton

PROBABLE OPERATIONS DURING THE SEASON OF 1891.

The coming winter will be chiefly occupied in receiving cut granite from the contractors so as to accumulate a sufficient quantity for the resumption of active work on the building in the spring. At that time the work will proceed upon the first story proper, which, as above shown, is already far advanced.

By the close of the next working season it is expected that the masonry of the entire first story, including the iron and brick work of the second story floor, being the third floor from the ground level, will be completed, and that all of the walls of the court-yards, including the rotunda and book-stacks, will have been nearly finished by reaching the top of the second story; that is to say, the front walls will have reached nearly one-half their full height, while the court walls, exclusive of the rotunda, will be ready for the roof.

Contracts for most of the iron door and window frames, trimmings, and wash-boards of the cellar, basement, and first stories, and for all of the interior structure of the three main book-stacks are about to be let, and this work is also to be completed during the coming year.

LETTER

FROM

THE CLERK OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Submitting a report of the clerks and other persons employed and of the payments and issues made in the Clerk's office from the 1st day of December, 1889, to the 30th day of June, 1890.

DECEMBER 2, 1890.—Referred to the Committee on Accounts.

CLERK'S OFFICE, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D. C., December 1, 1890.

SIR: In obedience to the requirements of sections 60, 61, 62, 63, and 70, of the Revised Statutes of the United States, and in compliance with the terms of a resolution of the House of Representatives of July 24, 1868, I have the honor to submit the following report of clerks and other persons employed, and of payments and issues made in this office from the 1st day of December, 1889, to the 30th day of June, 1890, inclusive, which will be found classified in papers marked A, B, C, D, and E, and to state that the persons named as in the service of this office have been usefully employed.

Very respectfully,

EDWD. MCPHERSON,
Clerk of the House of Representatives.

Hon. THOMAS B. REED,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

SAMUEL WATSON v. UNITED STATES.

A communication from the Assistant Clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting the finding and opinion of the court in the case of Samuel Watson v. The United States.

DECEMBER 6, 1890.—Referred to the Committee on War Claims.

COURT OF CLAIMS, CLERK'S OFFICE,
Washington, December 5, 1890.

SIR: Pursuant to the order of the court I transmit herewith a certified copy of the finding and opinion of the court in the aforesaid cause, which case was referred to this court by the Committee on War Claims, House of Representatives, under the act of March 3, 1883.

I am, very respectfully, yours, etc.,

JOHN RANDOLPH,
Assistant Clerk Court of Claims.

Hon. THOS. B. REED,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

[Court of Claims. Congressional, No. 5559. Samuel Watson v. The United States. Decided January 13, 1890.]

OPINION.

Davis, J., delivered the opinion of the court.

This being a claim for stores and supplies transmitted to this court by a committee of the House of Representatives, the preliminary inquiry required by the statute (22 Stat. L., p. 485, sec. 4) has been had upon the subject of the loyalty of the person from whom the stores or supplies are alleged to have been taken. In this inquiry it appeared that the same claim was presented to the Quartermaster-General in accordance with the provisions of the act of July 4, 1864, and that the agent of that officer charged with the investigation of the claim reported as follows as to Watson's loyalty:

"I made extensive inquiry in the neighborhood where Samuel Watson, deceased, resided during the war, and am convinced, from the information I received and the testimony of Mr. Smith, a reliable witness, that decedent and his son, J. S. Watson, were loyal to the United States during the war and that decedent's children by his first wife were disloyal."

Upon the merits the agent reported adversely to the claimant, and the Quartermaster finally disallowed the claim, upon the ground that he was "unable to certify that he was convinced that the stores were actually received or taken for the use of and used by the United States Army."

Since this decision no testimony has been taken in the case, and the plaintiff relies upon the fact that the Quartermaster-General did not disallow the claim upon the ground of disloyalty, as well as upon the report of the agent of the Quartermaster-General and upon the affidavit of Smith.

In Calhoun v. The United States (24 C. Cls. R., 414) a claim sent here by a committee of Congress had been investigated by the Quartermaster-General and an adverse report upon the merits had been made by him to the Congress. No additional evidence had been taken, and the plaintiff came before us with the same record upon which the Quartermaster-General had ruled. We held as follows:

"It is manifest that the claimant has not sought to have the claim investigated since it was transmitted, nor the facts ascertained by means of such an investigation. The effort now is practically to turn the court into an appellate tribunal, to which appeals will lie from the adverse decisions of the Quartermaster-General or Southern Claims Commission.

The court then ruled adversely to that contention and dismissed the claim.

In Calhoun's case there had been a ruling in terms by the Quartermaster-General adverse to the claimant. In this case there has been no ruling in terms upon the question of loyalty, and any decision by the Quartermaster-General upon that subject can only be matter of inference. In this court, when proceeding to the examination of claims for stores and supplies in accordance with the act of March 3, 1883, there must be a preliminary inquiry as to plaintiff's loyalty and a favorable finding thereon prior to any investigation of the merits; therefore, if it be shown that any claimant has in these cases received a favorable finding on the merits, the inference is necessary that prior thereto he had received a favorable finding upon loyalty.

Such was not the case in the Quartermaster-General's Office; the investigation of loyalty was not there necessarily antecedent to the examination of the merits, but might be concurrent with it. The Quartermaster-General was to find three facts, stated in this order in the statute: He was to be convinced that the claim was just; he was to be convinced of the loyalty of the claimant; he was to be convinced that the stores were actually received or taken for the use of and used by the Army (13 Stat. at L., p. 381). An adverse decision upon any one of these points was fatal to claimant; if the Quartermaster-General ruled adversely upon one it became unnecessary for him to examine the others.

It can not be inferred, as it would be here in a similar case, that because the officer considered the facts and decided against the claim upon the merits he had, as a condition precedent to an examination of the facts, found the claimant loyal. On the contrary, it simply appears that the Quartermaster-General did not decide this question of loyalty either way.

It is the duty of the plaintiff to establish his loyalty affirmatively by competent evidence of sufficient weight to overcome the presumption of disloyalty arising from his residence and environment. This would be so in any event without statutory provision, but in addition there is an express direction to the same effect found in section 1074 of the Revised Statutes, which provides:

"SEC. 1074. Whenever it is material in any claim to ascertain whether any person did or did not give any aid or comfort to the late rebellion, the claimant asserting the loyalty of any such person to the United States during such rebellion shall be required to prove affirmatively that such person did, during said rebellion consistently adhere to the United States, and did give no aid or comfort to persons engaged in said rebellion; and the voluntary residence of any such person in any place where, at any time during such residence, the rebel force or organization held sway, shall be prima facie evidence that such person did give aid and comfort to said rebellion and to the persons engaged therein."

This statute requires consistent adherence to the United States, and the Bowman act requires loyalty "throughout the war; that is, the plaintiff must never at any time during the entire war have failed in his allegiance to the United States. Under these statutes it is not sufficient that plaintiff was at the beginning or at the end of the war favorably disposed towards the United States. The loyalty and adherence must have been continuous throughout the war, without any interruption at any time, and any one act giving "aid or comfort to persons engaged in said rebellion" will negative a contention in favor of plaintiff"s loyalty "throughout the war."

This statute (sec. 1074) was passed long before the so-called Bowman act, under which the case at bar was transmitted here, but it is none the less controlling as declaratory of the law and as giving the interpretation of the word "loyalty" when that word is found in subsequents acts of Congress.

The plaintiff here has failed by competent and sufficient proof to establish that the person alleged to have furnished the supplies or stores in question, or from whom they are alleged to have been taken, was loyal to the Government of the United States throughout the late war; and the case is dismissed for want of further jurisdiction.

SAMUEL WATSON
v.
THE UNITED STATES. } Congressional, No. 5559.

This case, being a claim for supplies or stores alleged to have been taken by or furnished to the military forces of the United States for their use during the late war for the suppression of the rebellion; the court, on a preliminary inquiry, finds that upon the evidence it does not appear that Samuel Watson, the person alleged to have furnished such supplies or stores, or from whom they are alleged to have been taken, was loyal to the Government of the United States throughout said war; and the case is dismissed for want of further jurisdiction.

This case, being a claim for supplies or stores alleged to have been taken by or furnished to the military forces of the United States for their use during the late war for the suppression of the rebellion, the court, on a preliminary inquiry, finds that B. W. Herbert, the person alleged to have furnished such supplies or stores, or from whom the same are alleged to have been taken, was loyal to the Government of the United States throughout said war.

[Court of Claims. Congressional case, No. 1533. F. W. Brown, administrator of B. W. Herbert, vs. The United States.]

At a Court of Claims held in the city of Washington on the 11th day June, A. D. 1890, the court filed the following statement of case and findings of fact, to wit:

STATEMENT OF CASE.

The claim in the above-entitled case for supplies or stores alleged to have been taken by or furnished to the military forces of the United States for their use during the late war for the suppression of the rebellion, was transmitted to the court by the Committee on War Claims of House of Representatives on the 12th day of February, 1888.

G. W. Z. Black, esq., appeared for claimant, and the Attorney-General, by Henry M. Foote, esq., his assistant, and under his direction, appeared for the defense and protection of the interests of the United States.

On a preliminary inquiry the court found that the person alleged to have furnished the supplies or stores, or from whom they were alleged to have been taken, was loyal to the Government of the United States throughout said war.

The case was brought to a hearing on its merits. The claimant in his petition makes the following allegations:

That he has a claim against the United States for stores and supplies taken by or furnished to the Army of the United States for army use at or near Charlestown, Jefferson County, W. Va., at the time hereinafter stated and by the officers named, said property being reasonably worth at the time and place the value here given, that is to say—

Item 1, 60 sheep, at $8	$480
Item 2, 22 head cattle, at $20	440
Item 3, 56 head hogs=8,400 pounds, at 10 cents	840
Item 4, 4,800 pounds of bacon at $12 per hundred, taken in August, 1864, by Nineteenth Army Corps, commanded by General Emory, of General Sheridan's army, amounting in the aggregate to	1,926

The court, upon the evidence and after considering the briefs and arguments of counsel on both sides, makes the following

FINDINGS OF FACT:

That there was taken from the farm of the claimant, in Jefferson County, West Virginia, of the property above described, commissary stores for the use of the Army under General Sheridan of the fair and reasonable value of $1,160.

AMENDED PETITION. FILED MAY 15, 1888. J. R.

The petition of Joseph Baldwin; A. M. Buffington; Henry E. Butts; C. C. Gaver, administrator of Joseph Conard; Mahlon Demory; C. C. Gaver, administrator of Lewis W. Derry; Philip Derry of Hillsborough; Mary E. Derry, Eliza V Lancaster, Laura B. Oden, Lucy D. Cogle, James W. Derry, Arthur Derry, Wilbur Derry, and Emma D. Derry, distributees of Philip Derry of Peter; Philip Fry; Harrison Hawes; Samuel Hough; Emma R. Moore, William B. Moore, Eli A. Moore, Mary B. Fritts, and Martha E. Burley, distributees of George W. Moore; George Neer; E. C. Potts and W. C. Potts, administrators of Edwin H. Potts; Frederick M. Potts; Thomas W Potts, distributee of Jonas Potts; C. C. Gaver, administrator of Henry Reed; Joseph L. Russell; C. C. Gaver, administrator of David Shriver; Richard Tavenner; John F. Waters, administrator of Levi Waters, and John F. Waters, in his own right respectfully shows:

(1) That they are beneficiaries under the bill (H. R. 2856, Forty-eighth Congress, first session) referred to this court by the Committee on War Claims of the House of Representatives on the 16th day of February, 1884, in whose cases a finding of loyalty was filed by the court on the 1st day of February, 1886.

(2) That in the cases of Joseph Conard, Lewis W. Derry, Edwin H. Potts, Henry Reed, David Shriver, and Levi Waters, all deceased, administration has been duly granted to the petitioners hereinbefore respectively named, all of which fully appears by certificate of the proper probate court, hereunto appended and marked Exhibit A.

(3) That in the cases of Philip Derry of Peter, George W. Moore, and Jonas Potts, all deceased, there has been no administration, as appears by the accompanying affidavits, marked Exhibit B.

Digitized by Google

(4) That the petitioners are, respectively, the sole owners of the claims severally herein stated, no part of which have ever been assigned, transferred, or liquidated.

(5) That prior to the reference of said claims to this court the cases of the said Joseph Baldwin, Armistead M. Buffington, Joseph Conard, Mahlon Demory, Lewis W. Derry, Philip Derry of Hillsborough, Philip Derry of Peter, George W. Moore, George Neer, Edwin H. Potts, Frederick M. Potts, Jonas Potts, David Shriver, John F. Waters, and Levi Waters, had been presented to the Southern Claims Commission, so called, and dismissed for want of jurisdiction under the following ruling. "We have not considered the 'Loudoun County Claims,' so called They are numerous; are chiefly for property taken by military necessity under the order to General Sheridan of November 27, 1864. The claims for property taken for the use of the Army are so intermingled with those in which the property was sold and the proceeds put into the Treasury that it is almost impossible to separate them. As large herds of horses, cattle, and sheep were driven off together, the claimants can not trace their property to Army use. We have therefore declined examining them, thinking Congress may make some special provision in regard to their examination and settlement." (First general report of the Commissioners of Claims, House Mis. Doc. No. 16, Forty-second Congress, second session, page 8) The cases of Henry E. Butts, Philip Fry, Harrison Hawes, Samuel Hough, Henry Reed, Joseph L. Russell, and Richard Tavenner were not presented to said Commissioners of Claims because of said ruling.

(6) That said original claimants were each and all loyal to the Government of the United States throughout the late war, rendering no aid or comfort to the rebellion, and that they were respectively the owners and possessors of the following live stock, which was seized and removed by and under the orders of Major-General Sheridan, under the circumstances and for the purposes set forth in Senate Report No. 80, Forty-second Congress, second session, a copy of which is hereto appended, marked Exhibit C; said seizure and removal occurring between the 28th day of November and the 2d day of December, 1864:

Joseph Baldwin. 5 cows, 2 yearlings, 3 horses, 2 bridles, 1 saddle	$643.00
A. M. Buffington: 3 cows, 2 hogs	152.00
Henry E. Butts: 1 cow	75.00
Joseph Conard: 3 horses	415.00
Mahlon Demory: 1 hog, 5 cattle	218.00
Lewis W. Derry; 6 cattle, 2 hogs	217 00
Philip Derry: 4 horses, 10 cattle, 18 hogs	1,010.00
Philip Derry of Peter: 35 sheep, 18 cattle, 1 horse	865.00
Philip Fry: 1 horse	150.00
Harrison Hawes: 3 horses, and cattle netting 1,000 pounds beef	550.00
Samuel Hough: 2 horses	290.00
George W. Moore: 2 horses, 2 hogs, 92 sheep	688.00
George Neer 3 horses	430.00
Edwin H. Potts. 1 cow, 1 calf	60.00
Fred. M. Potts: 2 oxen, 7 cows, 1 steer, 1 heifer	470.00
Jonas Potts: 1 mare, 1 colt, 1 cow, 1 bull, 1 calf	288.00
Henry Reed: 1 horse, 4 cows	300.00
Joseph L. Russell: 3 cows	135.00
David Shriver: 2 horses, 7 cows, 3 cattle	670.00
Richard Tavenner. 1 steer	40.00
John F Waters: 1 horse	150.00
Levi Waters: 8 cows, 2 cattle, 1 horse, 2 sheep	584.00

Wherefore the petitioners pray for such proceedings and findings by this court as by the statute in such cases is provided.

CHAS. F. BENJAMIN,
Attorney for the Petitioners.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA,
County of Washington, ss:

Charles F Benjamin, being duly sworn, deposes and says that he is the attorney in fact for the said petitioners (his several letters of attorney being here shown to said court), and that the foregoing statements are true to the best of his knowledge and belief.

[Court of Claims. Congressional No. 17. (Decided June 9, 1890.) E. J. Conard and twenty others v. The United States.]

OPINION.

Davis J., delivered the opinion of the court:

These claims, called the "Loudoun County claims," are referred to this court in accordance with the provisions of the act of March 3, 1883, called the "Bowman act," and it is objected that the court is without jurisdiction to find and report the facts therein.

November 27, 1864, Major-General Sheridan issued the following order:

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
November 27, 1864.

GENERAL: You are hereby directed to proceed to-morrow morning at 7 o'clock, with two brigades of your division now in camp, to the east side of the Blue Ridge, via Ashby's Gap, and operate against the guerrillas in the district of country bounded on the south by the line of the Manassas Gap Railroad as far east as White Plains, on the east by the Bull Run range, on the west by the Shenandoah River, and on the north by the Potomac.

This section has been the hotbed of lawless bands, who have from time to time depredated upon small parties on the line of the army communications, on safeguards left at houses, and on small parties of our troops. Their real object is plunder and highway robbery.

To clear the country of these parties that are bringing destruction upon the innocent as well as their guilty supporters by their cowardly acts, you will consume and destroy all forage and subsistence, burn all barns and mills and their contents, and drive off all stock in the region the boundaries of which are above described. This order must be literally executed, bearing in mind, however, that no dwellings are to be burned and that no personal violence be offered the citizens.

The ultimate results of the guerrilla system of warfare is the total destruction of all private rights in the country occupied by such parties. The destruction may as well commence at once, and the responsibility of it must rest upon the authorities at Richmond, who have acknowledged the legitimacy of the guerrilla bands.

The injury done to this Army by them is very slight; the injury they have indirectly inflicted upon the people and upon the rebel army may be counted by millions.

The reserve brigade of your division will move to Snickersville on the 29th. Snickersville should be your point of concentration, and the point from which you should operate in destroying toward the Potomac.

Four days' subsistence will be taken by your command. Forage can be gathered from the country through which you pass.

You will return to your present camp, via Snickersville, on the fifth day.

By command of Major-General Sheridan.

JAMES W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

Brevet Major-General MERRITT,
Commanding First Cavalry Division.

It will be noticed that the primary purpose of this order was not the supply of the Army, but injury to the enemy; General Sheridan said: "The ultimate results of the guerrilla system of warfare is the total destruction of all private rights in the country occupied by such parties. This destruction may as well commence at once, and the responsibility of it must rest upon the authorities at Richmond." The raiding troops were not to live upon the country; they were allowed to "consume" as well as to destroy "all forage and subsistence," but, as the troops were to take with them rations for the full period of their contemplated absence upon this duty, and as "forage" (and "forage" only) was specifically allowed to be gathered from the country, it is clear that it was intended that the troops should live, not upon what they found, but upon what they carried.

Forage and subsistence which the troops could not transport were to be destroyed, as were barns and mills, with their contents, while live stock was to be driven off. This order was executed and the live stock taken from individuals in the designated district were intermingled and driven within the lines, where some were afterwards slaughtered and used for food, while others were sold and the proceeds were turned into the Treasury. This course made it impracticable for any claimant to ascertain whether his stock or any part of it had been either consumed by the Army or sold for the benefit of the Government.

After the organization of the commission called the Southern Claims Commission many of the residents of Loudoun County presented their claims for losses of this nature to that tribunal, which dismissed them under the following ruling:

"We have not considered the 'Loudoun County claims,' so called. They are numerus; are chiefly for property taken by military necessity under the order of General Sheridan of November 27, 1864. The claims for property taken for the use of the Army are so intermingled with those in which the property was sold and the proceeds put into the Treasury that it is almost impossible to separate them. As large herds of horses, cattle, and sheep were driven off together, the claimants can not trace their property to army use. We have therefore declined examining them, thinking Congress may make some special provision in regard to their examination and settlement." (First general report of the Commissioners of Claims, H. R. Mis. Doc. No. 16, Forty-second Congress, second session, p. 8.)

The cases of some of the claimants herein were not presented to said Commissioners of Claims, perhaps because of said ruling.

In March, 1872, the Committee on Claims reported to the Senate, recommending the passage of an act for the relief of sufferers of this class (Forty-second Congress, second session, Senate Report No. 80), and January 23, 1873, an act was approved providing for the compensation of many of the sufferers, but in the long list in the act the names of the claimants in the case at bar do not appear, and eleven years afterward their claims were referred here for proceedings in accordance with the "Bowman act." These claims are all exclusively for live stock driven off, and it is impossible to discover in any one instance whether the stock was later consumed by the Army or sold for the Government's benefit.

If all the stock were sold and the proceeds turned into the Treasury, then claimants were given a remedy by the "captured and abandoned property act," and having neglected to pursue it, they are now barred by the limitation of that act, therefore barred by the provisions of a law of the United States, and the claims are excluded from our jurisdiction by the second paragraph in section 3 of the Bowman act. (Vance vs. The U. S., 21 C. Cls. R., 448; Payne vs. The U. S., 22 C. Cls. R., 144; Nelson vs. The U. S., 22 C. Cls. R , 159.)

If all the stock were taken under such circumstances that the seizure might be construed as a proper taking and appropriation of supplies for the use of the Army, then the remedy was to be found in the Southern Claims Commission, and as some of the claimants have not availed themselves of this remedy, their claims are also, by virtue of the same provisions, excluded from our jurisdiction. (Dodd vs. The U. S., 21 C. Cls. R., 117; Dyer vs. The U. S., 23 C. Cls. R., 418, Burwell vs. The U. S., 22 C. Cls. R., 92.) The fact that it is impossible to separate the stock sold from the stock eaten can not aid claimants, for jurisdiction of claims for loss in either event is excluded by the Bowman act.

Some of the claimants did present their claims to the Southern Claims Commission, and as to them the Commission said:

"The claims for property taken for the use of the Army are so intermingled with those in which the property was sold and the proceeds put into the Treasury that it is almost impossible to separate them."

The proof in the cases here stops at the taking That taking was not primarily intended for army supply, but for the injury and weakening of the enemy; the raid was not made to obtain food, but for destruction; and the presumption, therefore, is not the same as in cases where under orders the Army subsisted upon the country. The object was not to feed the soldiers, but to starve the guerrillas, and was similar in nature and spirit to the destruction of barns, mills, and their contents which was directed in the same order.

Claims for destruction or damage to property during the late war are excluded from our jurisdiction (Heflebower vs. The U. S., 21 C. Cls. R., 231; Myers' Admr. vs. The U. S., 22 C. Cls. R., 80; Madison Female Institute vs. The U. S., 23 C. Cls. R., 188), and it becomes incumbent upon claimants to show whether their stock was killed and wasted on the march when driven before troops supplied with rations, or whether they died by the way, or were afterwards by proper direction applied to army use, or whether they were sold and the proceeds of the sale turned into the Treasury. This has not been done; from the nature of the occurrence it can not be done.

The petition is dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

SIR: Pursuant to the order of the court I transmit herewith a certified copy of the opinion of the court in the aforesaid cause, which case was referred to this court by the Committee on War Claims, House of Representatives, under the act of March 3, 1883.

I am, very respectfully, yours, etc.,

Hon. THOMAS B. REED,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

[Court of Claims, Congressional, No. 1622. Philip Raiford, administrator of estate of Mrs. Margaret B. Raiford, deceased, v. The United States.]

MOTION BY DEFENDANTS TO DISMISS FOR WANT OF JURISDICTION.

Richardson, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a claim for stores and supplies alleged to have been taken for the use of the Army during the rebellion, transmitted to the court by the Committee on War Claims of the House of Representatives under the Bowman act, February 20, 1887.

It appears by the order of transmission that the claim is that of the "heirs of Robert Raiford, deceased."

With the order the committee transmitted the original petition to Congress of "Maggie R. Lofton et al., heirs of Robert Raiford and Margaret B. Raiford," alleging that they were citizens and residents of Marshall County, Miss., and when the claim accrued were residing in that county, and asking compensation for stores and supplies taken by and for the use of the Army of the United States, for which a claim had been filed, in the name of "Margaret B. Raiford," before the Quartermaster-General, under the act of July 4, 1864, and rejected for want of jurisdiction.

The petition to this court is by the admistrator of Margaret B. Raiford, deceased, filed May 2, 1887, and sets out a claim for stores and supplies taken from her in Marshall County, Miss., where she resided during the late war.

Two petitions are returned upon the claimants' call by the War Department from the Quartermaster-General's Office, where they appear to have been filed in May, 1868, and rejected for want of jurisdiction, for the reason that the claims originated in Mississippi, a State declared to be in insurrection during the rebellion.

Those petitions were in the name of Margaret B. Raiford, who therein set out that she was a citizen of Shelby County, Tenn., and that the stores and supplies were taken from her in that county.

Digitized by Google

The claimant's brief in this court on the question of loyalty proceeds upon the grounds that the property was that of Robert Raiford, husband of Margaret B. Raiford, and that it was taken from his plantation in Mississippi during his lifetime.

From the evidence taken on behalf of the claimant and referred to in the brief of the counsel, it appears that at the breaking out of the war Robert Raiford resided with his family on a plantation in Mississippi; that he went to Memphis, Tenn., before the close of the war, and died there in about one year. He left his family in Mississippi, where his widow resided until her death, after the war, and where his children still reside, and where he was himself buried. It is in evidence that he never changed his domicile.

With all the confusion and inconsistency in which the claim has been presented to the Quartermaster-General, to Congress, and to this court, we are called upon, by motion of defendants, to decide whether or not the court has jurisdiction of the case as one which was presented to another tribunal in season to prevent its being forever barred.

The Commissioners of Claims had jurisdiction "to receive, examine, and consider the justice and validity of such claims as shall be brought before them of those citizens who remained loyal adherents to the cause of the Government of the United States during the war, for stores and supplies taken or furnished during the rebellion for the use of the Army of the United States, in States proclaimed as in insurrection against the United States, including the use and loss of vessels or boats while employed in the military service of the United States" (act of March 3, 1871, ch. 116, 16 Stat. L., 524). All claims not presented on or before March 3, 1873, were declared to be barred forever thereafter (act of March 3, 1873, ch. 236, § 2, 17 Stat. L., 577).

The Quartermaster-General and Commissary-General had jurisdiction "of all claims of loyal citizens in States not in rebellion, for quartermaster stores actually furnished to the Army of the United States, and receipted for by the proper officer receiving the same, or which may have been taken by such officers without giving such receipt," and that jurisdiction was extended to the State of Tennessee and to the counties of Virginia which became the State of West Virginia (act of 1864, July 4, ch. 13, Stat. L., 381; R. S., second edition, §§ 300 A 300 B; act of 1875, February 18, ch. 80, Supplement to R. S., p. 137, par. 7). All claims not presented and filed prior to January 1, 1880, were declared to be forever barred (act of March 3, 1879, ch. 287, § 3, Supplement to R. S., p. 480, 481).

The petitions and other papers in the case before us leave it doubtful as to whose claim is intended to be pressed in this court.

If it be a claim accrued to Mrs. Margaret B. Raiford for stores and supplies taken in Mississippi, where she resided during the rebellion, as alleged in the petition to this court, it should have been presented to the Commissioners of Claims, and never having been so presented, it is forever barred.

It appears that Mrs. Raiford presented her petition to the Quartermaster-General for the same property, alleging that she resided in Shelby County, Tenn., and that the property was taken from her in that county. The Quartermaster-General found that the claim originated in Mississippi, as now appears to be the fact, and her petition was dismissed for want of jurisdiction. That presentation to a tribunal without jurisdiction can not avail in this case to take the claim out of the statute bar.

If the claim intended to be presented here is that accrued to the husband, Robert Raiford, as seems to be assumed by the claimant's counsel in his brief on the question of loyalty, in which he asks the court to pass upon the loyalty of Mr. Raiford as the person from whom the stores and supplies were taken, and as the Committee on War Claims by their reference seem to have intended, then the claim is barred, since it was never presented to either the Commissioner of Claims or the Quartermaster-General (McLemore's Case, 21 C. Cls., R. 327; Fowler's Case, 25 C. Cls. R.).

Therefore the claim here presented, whether it be that of the husband or the wife, having been forever barred by the statutes referred to, is not within the jurisdiction of this court, as restricted by the Bowman act of March 3, 1883, ch. 116, § 3 (22 Stat. L., 485).

The motion is allowed and the claim is dismissed.

PARMENUS T. TURNLEY VS. THE UNITED STATES.

Letter from the Assistant Clerk of the Court of Claims transmitting a copy of the findings of fact and opinion of the court in the case of Parmenus T. Turnley against the United States.

DECEMBER 9, 1890.—Referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

COURT OF CLAIMS, CLERK'S OFFICE,
Washington, December 8, 1890.

SIR: Pursuant to the order of the court I transmit, herewith a certified copy of the findings of fact and opinion of the court in the aforesaid cause, which case was referred to this court by the Committee on Military Affairs, House of Representatives, under the act of March 3, 1883.

I am, very respectfully, yours, etc.,

JOHN RANDOLPH,
Assistant Clerk Court of Claims.

Hon. THOS. B. REED,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

[In the Court of Claims. No. 300. Congressional case. P. T. Turnley vs. The United States.]

PETITION.—FILED MARCH 24, 1886.—J R.

To the honorable the Court of Claims:

I. Your petitioner, Parmenas T. Turnley, respectfully represents that he is a citizen of the United States; that he entered the military service of the United States as a cadet of the Military Academy of West Point on or about the 1st day of July, 1842, and was graduated therefrom on or about the 1st of July, 1846, and was assigned as a brevet second lieutenant to the second regiment of United States Infantry, and joined said regiment in New Orleans and proceeded with the same to active duty in Mexico, and in October, 1846, was promoted to a full second lieutenant to the first regiment of infantry, then in active service of the war with Mexico, and he so continued till the final close of the said war; that petitioner continued in the active military service of the United States on the western frontiers till about the 17th of September, 1863, at which time your petitioner held the rank of captain and assistant quartermaster in the U. S. Army.

II. Petitioner says: That on said 17th day of September, 1863, having been found by the Army returning board to be physically disqualified for the performance of the active duties of his office, and this finding of said returning board having been approved by the President of the United States, he, said petitioner, was placed upon the retired list of the Army of the class of which disability results from "long and faithful service," or "from some injury incident thereto," by Special Orders No. 417, dated War Department, Adjutant-General's office, Washington, D. C., September 17, 1863.

III. Petitioner says: That about February 1, 1865, he visited Washington for the purpose of expediting the settlement of his accounts, and that while there he was sent for by General Charles Thomas, at that time acting quartermaster-general of the U. S. Army.

Digitized by Google

Petitioner went to see General Thomas as requested, and General Thomas explained the object of the interview. He (General Thomas) expressed himself dissatisfied with the management of the affairs of the quartermaster's department in Colorado and throughout the district of the plains; he knew of no officer then available who had such knowledge of the western frontier as would enable him to straighten out matters in that department and correct abuses then prevailing.

Petitioner's long and capable service on the western frontier, General Thomas said, had suggested him (petitioner), as a proper person to control and reform the quartermaster's department in the District of the Plains. But the Department had no power to order a retired officer to duty. He, General Thomas, therefore sent for petitioner to ask him if he felt physically able to perform the duties above set forth in this interview, and if he did, to ask him, said petitioner, if he would apply for service as due form of law provided. Petitioner felt that he understood entirely the affairs pertaining to the quartermaster's department in the District of the Plains; that few men, if any, understood the people, resources, climate, and the general needs of the Department in that section as well as he; his health had somewhat improved by rest and travel, and therefore petitioner expressed to General Thomas his appreciation of the confidence reposed in him, as to integrity as well as ability, and represented that he, petitioner, while not feeling able for the regular duties of active service again, he did feel able to perform the duties set forth and explained in this interview as given above, and consented to ask for service, as the technicality of the law required, to the end that he might be sent by General Thomas to the District of the Plains; it being specifically stated by General Thomas that said service should be restricted to the District of the Plains, with his office at Denver City, Colo.; and that petitioner did so tender service, and that the said tender of service was officially accepted by General Charles Thomas, Acting Quartermaster-General, on the 24th day of March, 1865, and petitioner was assigned to duty in Colorado in an official communication, dated War Department, Quartermaster-General's office, Washington, March 24, 1865.

IV. Petitioner says: That on the acceptance of the tender of service as aforesaid, it was intended by the Department, and petitioner was definitely instructed to that effect, that he was to be the chief quartermaster at Denver, where (General Thomas expressed the hope), "petitioner's experience, judgment, and integrity would enable him to reduce the affairs of the department to regularity and order," but that on reaching his post of duty he soon found that other and more onerous duties were intended for him by certain commanding officers in the District of the Plains, duties for which his depleted physical condition wholly incapacitated him, that he was both physically and mentally unable to perform said duties; that from overwork and the high electric state of the atmosphere at Denver, Colo., he grew ill and was admonished by his physician, Dr. Hamilton, since deceased, that he must leave Colorado and seek rest and relaxation by the seashore, that being the only means by which said physician could offer any hope of recovery. That he at various times between the 21st day of May, 1865, and the 26th day of September, 1865, represented the sad condition of his health to the proper authorities, and asked to be relieved from duty in Colorado, to all of which appeals no attention was paid, and that on the 26th day of September, 1865, when from his torturous physical suffering his judgment was so impaired as to render him incapable of weighing his language or appreciating the full meaning and application of which his words might be susceptible, and was in fact of unsound mind. He caused to be written and did sign and send to the Adjutant-General of the U. S. Army a communication in words and figures as follows:

CHIEF QUARTERMASTER'S OFFICE,
DISTRICT OF THE PLAINS,
DENVER, C. T., Sept. 26th, 1865.

General L. THOMAS,
Adjutant-General, U. S. A., Washington, D. C.:

I have the honor to tender hereby and by these presents my resignation from the Army of the United States, to take effect "immediate" and "unconditional."

P. T. TURNLEY,
Capt. and Asst. Quartermaster, U. S. A.

Petitioner says: That the wording of said letter of resignation was made with especial reference to an Army custom, and he believed and does still believe a regulation which he believed to be then in force and observance, that local commanders could not give immediate relief without instructions from Washington, except when the application for relief was accompanied by resignation to take effect "immediate and unconditional." And as petitioner believed his life depended upon a speedy change of atmosphere and rest from worrying and perplexing cases, he designed to so word his application for relief as to come within the custom, and regulation as he thought (though he had no books or time for reference) then in force and observance for immediate relief, and that he understood and intended said resignation to work his immediate relief from active service of the Army only, and that he did not intend nor expect it to in anywise affect his status on the retired list. That having once been found disqualified for active service, and placed on the retired list as-aforesaid under the law, no involuntary service could be exacted of him, and that the service authorized by law for him as such retired officer could not be exacted if he had reasonable ground for thinking himself unable to perform it, by reason of the causes for which he had been originally retired, as in this case he did believe and know.

Petitioner says: That when rest and a change of atmosphere had (after months of acute suffering, many times his life being despaired of) measurably restored his health, he applied at Washington for his retired pay, which he supposed to be there awaiting his order, and found to his very great surprise that his name had been stricken from the retired list of the U. S. Army, under an alleged voluntary surrender on the part of petitioner of all his rights and privileges as an officer of the U. S. Army on the retired list; that his resignation from active duty in the special service which he, at the urgent request of General Thomas, voluntarily assumed, and which he had faithfully performed to the best of his ability, and which he only considered leaving when so prostrated by disease that he could not perform the duties thereof, had been construed by the War Department as applying to his retired status as well, and his name had been dropped from the retired list.

Petitioner files as part hereof his memorial filed in Congress, with all the exhibits printed with the same, and prays the court to find all the facts material to this case, and to report said facts, and the law arising upon the same and relating thereto, to the Congress of the United States of America, in order that such legislation may be had as will restore petitioner to his said place on the retired list of the Army, and set aside his alleged resignation, and he will ever pray.

Parmenas T. Turnley, being duly sworn, deposes and says, that he has read the foregoing petition and knows the contents thereof; that the statements therein made from his own personal knowledge are true, and that the facts therein stated upon information and belief, believes to be true.

[Court of Claims. Congressional Case, No. 300. Parmenus T. Turnley v. the United States.]

FINDINGS OF FACT.

This case having been heard before the Court of Claims, the court, upon the evidence, finds the facts to be as follows:

I. The claimant entered the military service of the United States as a cadet July 1, 1842, and continued in said service on the active list of the Army until he was retired as hereinafter stated.

April 29, 1862, he applied for six months' leave of absence on account of ill health.

June 20, 1862, having received no reply to this application, he tendered his resignation from United States Army on account of ill health. Subsequently leave was granted as follows:

WAR DEPARTMENT,
ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, September 25th, 1862.

6. Leave of absence is hereby granted to Capt. P. T. Turnley, assistant quartermaster, U. S. Army, with permission to go beyond the seas, pending the settlement of his accounts and final action upon his resignation.

By order of the Secretary of War.

E. D. TOWNSEND.
Assistant Adjutant-General.

It does not appear that any action was taken upon his said resignation; but on July 22, 1863, he was ordered before a retiring board and thereafter was placed upon the retired list, as appears by the following order:

WAR DEPARTMENT,
ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, September 17th, 1863.

Captain P. T. Turnley, assistant quartermaster, U. S. Army, having been found by a board of examination to be physically incompetent to discharge the duties of his office, and the President having approved the finding thereof, he will be placed on the retired list of officers of the class of which the disability results from long and faithful service or from some injury incident thereto.

By order of the Secretary of War.

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

II. February 6, 1865, the claimant made the following report to the Department:

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, Feb. 6th, 1865.

General M. C. MEIGS,
Quartermaster-General U. S., Washington, D. C.:

GENERAL: Inclosed herewith is a copy of Special Orders, No. 417 dated War Department, Sept. 17th, 1863, placing me on the retired list of officers "of the class of which the disability results from long and faithful service or from some injury incidental thereto."

My complaint was what doctors called "gastritis," causing extreme debility, and was superinduced by fourteen years of constant service on the extreme frontiers, where I had intense mental care and exercise, being at the same time deprived of the proper variety of physical exercise and nourishing food.

By two years' proper application of these remedies, I have the honor to report my health and strength entirely restored, and that I am now fully competent and ready to resume my active duties if the public service requires it.

Your reply is awaited at this place.

I am, general, respectfully,

P. T. TURNLEY,
A. Q. M., U. S. A.

In reply to this report the claimant received the following order:

WAR DEPARTMENT,
ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, March 22d, 1865.

Captain P. T. Turnley, assistant quartermaster, U. S. Army, will proceed immediately to Denver City, Colorado Territory, and relieve Captain C. L. Gorton, assistant quartermaster of volunteers, in his duties at that post.

By order of the Secretary of War.

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

In compliance with this order the claimant proceeded to Denver, whence he reported as follows:

DENVER CITY, May 25, 1865.

To Maj. Gen. M. C. MEIGS,
Qr. Mr. General, U. S., Washington City, D. C.:

I am here per Special Order No. 139, dated War Department, March 22, 1865, and letter from your office dated March 24th. I find Capt. Westbrook, A. Q. M., from Utah, here by order of Gen'l Connor, to relieve Capt. Gorton, A. Q. M., and Gen'l Connor designs Capt. Turnley, A. Q. M., for Julesburg, or Indian campaign. This is not according to my orders, nor what I expected, nor what I desired. Your further instructions are asked for in answer by telegraph.

P. T. TURNLEY,
A. Q. M.

I stated in a communication of 22d that I was here waiting the return of Capt. Gorton, A. Q. M., to receive his property, &c. He has not yet arrived, tho' Capt. Westbrook, A. Q. M., from Utah, is here, and is going on to relieve Capt. Gorton. I shall await your further instructions, or those of the chief qr. mrs. of the department and division.

It was sixteen years' service, nearly the whole of it field duty on the plains, that destroyed my health, and not one week's leave of absence was extended to me in that whole time; finally, when in 1862 I sought medical advice in Europe, and was absent one year for that purpose, I was retired from active service; then having recovered my health and reported for duty, tho' retired and overslaughed and deprived of promotion, yet I willingly proceeded to duty as ordered, to Denver City Depot. On my arrival here, however, to find myself booked for a slavish, hot, and disagreeable Indian campaign, with low rank and nothing higher to be hoped for, is not to my mind just or to be expected for a retired officer. I will await, therefore, with all confidence in your never-failing judgment in this as in other cases of official duty.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obt. servt.,

P. T. TURNLEY.

III. The following correspondence relative to the claimant's rank and duties took place at their respective dates:

CHIEF QUARTERMASTER'S OFFICE,
DISTRICT OF THE PLAINS,
Denver City, C. T., July 24th, 1865.

To His Excellency ANDREW JOHNSON,
President of the United States:

SIR: I have the honor respectfully to represent that I left my home in Dandridge, Jefferson County, East Tennessee, in June, 1842, and traveled on foot to the National Military Academy, at West Point, New York; that I graduated there and received my diploma in 1846; joined my regiment immediately and marched with it throughout the Mexican war. At the close of that war I went on duty on the Rio Grande; thence (in 1850) up that river to New Mexico and Arizona; thence (in 1854) on to the Upper Missouri in the Sioux Indian country; thence (in 1857) to Oregon; thence (in '57) to Utah, where I remained till 1861, the beginning of our national troubles. I was thus in Utah nearly three years, during which time I did not see my own wife and children, who remain all the while at their home in Chicago, and to visit them and recover my prostrate condition in health and strength, I received my first leave of absence since first entering the Academy, thus making nineteen years' constant service. Tho' extremely feeble, I crossed the mountains in midwinter, and reached my home in Chicago and accompanied Mr. Lincoln to Washington City; where, in April, my leave of absence was revoked, and I ordered to duty—first with Gen'l Butler, then with Fremont in Missouri, then with Grant, on the Mississippi, Ohio, and Cumberland Rivers, until September, 1862, when I was fast sinking with the excessive labors I was performing.

I again received a leave (see paper No. 1). Availing myself of this respite, I sought quiet and ease and proper food (my wife alone with me), but in less than ten months a board retired me from active service (see papers 2 and 3). Then, in February last, I was again ordered to duty (see papers 4, 5, and 6), which I am now performing; and, in connection with said duties, etc., I most respectively represent that the ten months' leave was not a fifth part of what almost every Army officer has had within nineteen years; that my debility and prostration was not constitutional, but was solely the result of my constant mental efforts and physical labors on extreme distant frontiers with the rudest diet; that my recovery and return to duty is evidence of this; that by the action of retiring board I was placed below all those in my corps whom I ranked for years; that I am now under and junior to officers in my corps who graduated ten years after I did, and whose services are counted by months, instead of the years that I have served. I therefore most respectfully represent that I desire to be placed on the roster of my corps where I would have been had no retirement been made; or, if this can not be done, then I have the honor to request that your excellency will consider this communication a tender of my resignation, and that your excellency will accept the same unconditionally and immediately.

I have the honor to be, respectfully,

PARMENUS TAYLOR TURNLEY,
Captain, Assistant Q'rmaster U. S. Army, 19 Years' Service.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE,
August 16, 1865.

Respectfully referred to the honorable Secretary of War, with the request that the application of Capt. Turnley to be placed upon the roster of his corps be granted, if not inconsistent with the interests of the service.

ANDREW JOHNSON,
President U. S.

Respectfully referred to the Quartermaster-General U. S. Army for remark.

QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., August 24, 1865.

Brig. Gen'l L. THOMAS,
Adjutant-General U. S. A.:

GENERAL: I have the honor to return herewith communication of Capt. P. T. Turnley, of July 24th, 1865, relative to his position on the roster of the regular Army, referred by the Adjt. General to this office for remark on the 17th inst.

Captain Turnley served in the early part of the war until he reported that his health had failed him. He tendered his resignation and was granted leave of absence.

In the ordinary routine he appeared before a retiring board and was retired, remaining out of active service from July, 1862, to March 22, 1865—that is, during the greater part of the active movements and operations of the great war just successfully concluded.

Officers of the Q'rm'r's Dept. who have taken active part in the war have been promoted to higher rank in the line of the Army, and the vacancies made by their promotion have been filled by regular promotion, according to the rules of the service.

Having been restored to health, Captain Turnley asked to be placed on duty instead of remaining on the retired list and rendering no service to the Government.

In this he showed a proper sense of his duty as a soldier and a citizen, and he has been placed on duty in an important position at Denver City, in which I have been obliged to request the interference of the War Dept. to retain him, as the commanding general of the district or dept. in which he served was by him reported to desire to take him to another post, where, in the opinion of this Dep't, he would be less useful.

His promotion should be governed by the rules of the service, and doubtless the Adjutant-General has followed these rules in placing his name on the roster.

I do not think it would be just to reduce any of those who, having had health and opportunity to continue in active service through the war, have fairly won the promotion which they have received.

Whether Captain Turnley will be entitled by seniority to promotion on occurrence of the next vacancy or not depends upon the laws and regulations regulating promotion in the regular Army.

His services are now important, and he should not be allowed to resign.

Very respectfully, your ob't servant,

M. C. MEIGS,
Qr. Mr. General, Brevet M. G.

ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, Oct. 3, 1865.

Capt. P. T. TURNLEY,
U. S. Army, Denver City, C. T.:

SIR: In reply to your communication of the 24th July, '65, requesting that your name may be placed on the roster of your corps as if you had not been retired, I am directed by the Secretary of War to inform you that your request has not been favorably considered. Your resignation, tendered in the same communication, can not be accepted at present.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. F. CHALFIN,
Asst. Adj't Gen'l.

IV. Before the claimant received the reply to his letter of July 24, 1865, addressed to the President, as set out in Finding III, he tendered his resignation in the Army. The resignation, recommendations, and acceptance are as follows:

CHIEF QUARTERMASTER'S OFFICE,
DISTRICT OF THE PLAINS,
Denver, C. T., Sept. 26th, 1865.

General L. THOMAS,
Adjt. Gen'l U. S. Army, Washington City, D. C.:

I have the honor to tender hereby, and by these presents, my resignation from the Army of the United States, to take effect "immediate and unconditional."

B'vt. Major-General E. UPTON,
Comd'g District of Colorado:

GENERAL: Having tendered my resignation from the U. S. Army "unconditional and immediate," I have the honor to apply for a leave of absence until my accounts can be closed and settled by the U. S. Treasury Department.

P. T. TURNLEY,
A. Q. M., U. S. A.

HD. QRS., DIS. COL., Oct. 1st, 1865.

Captain Turnley informs me that he intended to resign when in Utah in 1860, but the war soon after breaking out, he was induced to delay till such time as he could retire without prejudice to the service. For important private reasons which Capt. Turnley has made known to me, I respectfully recommend that his resignation be accepted, and that leave of absence be granted him till his accounts are settled.

E. UPTON,
Bt. Maj. Gen., Com'd'g.

HEADQUARTERS U. S. FORCES, KANSAS AND TERRITORIES,
Denver, Oct. 2d.

For reasons stated to me, in person, by Capt. Turnley, I approve his resignation, to take effect on settlement of his accounts, and recommend that a leave of absence be given him to enable him to make such settlement.

Denver, C. T., October 24th, 1865.

Major-General JOHN POPE,
Comd'g Dep't of the Missouri, Saint Louis, Mo.:

GENERAL: I have the honor to forward to you herewith my resignation from the Army of the United States, to take effect "immediate and unconditional" with the favorable endorsements of Br'v't Major-General Upton, comd'g this district, and of Major-Gen'l Dodge, comd'g forces in Kansas and Territories, and I have to ask your favorable endorsement, and then the same be forwarded to the Adj't Gen'l of the U. S. Army.

I have, also, to apply for a leave of absence, until my accounts may be settled, and my resignation accepted; and I have my family with me, and the winter being near at hand, I beg you will let me know your action as soon as possible, by telegraph, as children and women can not well travel if delayed late in winter.

I am, general, very truly, your obd't serv't,

P. T. TURNLEY,
A. Q. M., U. S. A.

Respectfully returned to the Adjutant-General U. S. Army.

Captain Turnley has written to me in regard to the condition of his father's estate in East Tennessee, where his father was lately threatened with death; an aged man, and I presume that he is now so desirous of leaving the service that it would be better to let him go. His knowledge of affairs on the plains was useful to the Department and his integrity inspired its confidence.

I recommend that his resignation be accepted, to date from the 31st of December next, and that he have a leave of absence until that time to enable him to settle his accounts.

SPECIAL ORDERS, No. 609.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, November 21st, 1865.

1. Leave of absence is hereby granted to the following officers:
Captain P. J. Turnley, U. S. Army, until December 31st, 1865.
2. The resignation of Captain P. T. Turnley, U. S. Army, has been accepted by the President, to take effect December 31st 1865, on condition that he receive no final payments until he shall have satisfied the Pay Department that he is not indebted to the United States.
By order of the Secretary of War:

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

V. At the time the claimant tendered his resignation as set forth in Finding IV, he was suffering from a prostrating dysentery and carbuncles, whereby he had become much debilitated in body and mentally depressed. He was extremely nervous and irritable, and anxious to be relieved from a service from which he was consciously unfit. For this relief he had made several urgent requests to his official superiors in the Department of Missouri, but had received no reply.

VI. Under said acceptance of claimant's resignation, as captain and assistant quartermaster, U. S. Army, claimant has been held by the military authorities and the accounting officers to have had his relations to the Army, both active and retired, wholly served, and claimant has been denied all rights, pay, and salary incident to his rank as a "captain U. S. Army retired."

To the claimant's applications for restoration, made in 1878 and 1880, the following answers were returned:

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, November 5th, 1878.

SIR: Referring to your letter dated the 4th ultimo, enclosing the petition of Parmenus T. Turnley, late captain and assistant quartermaster, United States Army, retired, for his restoration to the retired list, I have the honor to inform you that, after careful examination of the case, it is not believed that the Executive can afford the relief asked without a special act of Congress. I return herewith the papers enclosed in your letter.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

GEO. W. MCCRARY,
Secretary of War.

W. M. JONES, Esq.,
Attorney at Law, Des Moines, Iowa.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, May 11, 1880.

SIR: I am in receipt, by your reference under date of the 30th ultimo, of letter of the 10th ultimo from the honorable Thomas Drummond, judge of the circuit court of the United States for the northern district of Illinois, urging the restoration to the Army of Colonel P. T. Turnley, late captain United States Army, retired, and, in reply, have the honor to state that the Executive is powerless to comply with your wishes in this matter.

The power to restore Colonel Turnley to the Army is possessed by Congress only.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ALEX. RAMSEY,
Secretary of War.

Hon. DAVID DAVIS,
U. S. Senate.

VII.—Stipulation of counsel.

It is hereby stipulated and agreed that in the above cause the following facts may be admitted as evidence for plaintiff, to wit: That the proper official designation of a captain in the Quartermaster Department, U. S. Army, in all communications between his military superiors and himself, is "captain and assistant quartermaster, U. S. Army," and that the same of a captain on the retired list of the Army is "captain, U. S. Army, retired." It is further admitted that the pay per annum of a mounted captain, U. S. Army, retired, after twenty years' service, is $2,100.

Assistant Attorney.

Attorney for Plaintiff.

CONCLUSION OF LAW.

Upon the foregoing findings of facts the court decides as conclusion of law that the claimant is not entitled to recover.

OPINION.

Scofield, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This case was originally referred to the court by the Committee on Military Affairs of the House of Representatives, under the provisions of the act of March 3, 1883 (22 Stat., 485), known as the Bowman act. But the claimant subsequently filed a petition under the general jurisdiction of the court to recover pay as a retired officer of the Army, at the rate of $2,100 a year, from December 31, 1865, to the time of filing his petition, or so much thereof as the court, under the statute of limitations, might be authorized to consider.

The claimant was an officer of the regular Army of the United States, on the active list, from July 1, 1842, to September 17, 1863, at which time, having the rank of captain and assistant quartermaster, he was placed upon the retired list.

February 6, 1865, he reported to the Quartermaster-General that "his health and strength were entirely restored, and that he was ready to resume his active duties if the public service required it." On the 22d of March following he was ordered to proceed to Denver, Colo., and relieve Captain Gorton, and on May 25, 1865, he reported his arrival at that place.

September 26, 1865, he tendered his resignation in the Army, which, November 20, 1865, was accepted by the President, to take effect December 31, 1865. Thereupon his name was dropped from the Army Register, and he received no pay after that date.

He now contends that his resignation related only to active service and not to his position on the retired list, and that its acceptance left him still a "captain in the U. S. Army, retired," entitled to retired pay. As this contention is based upon the form of resignation and acceptance, they are here inserted entire:

CHIEF QUARTERMASTER'S OFFICE,
DISTRICT OF THE PLAIN.
Denver, C. T., September 26th, 1865.

General L. THOMAS,
Adjt. Gen. U. S. Army, Washington City, D. C.:

I have the honor to tender, hereby and by these presents, my resignation from the Army of the United States, to take effect "immediate and unconditional."

Respectfully,

P. T. TURNLEY,
Captain and Asst. Qr. Master, U. S. Army, Graduate of 1846.

ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, Nov. 20, 1865.

Captain P. T. TURNLEY,
U. S. Army, Denver City, Colorado Territory:

SIR: Your resignation has been accepted by the President of the United States, to take effect the thirty-first day of December, 1865, on condition that you receive no final payments until you shall have satisfied the Pay Department that you are not indebted to the United States.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. F. CHALFIN,
Asst. Adjt. Genl.

It is admitted that the proper designation of this officer while on the active list or while performing active duties was "captain and assistant quartermaster U. S. Army," and when on the retired list and not on active duty was "captain U. S. Army, retired." It will be seen that the claimant signs his resignation as "captain and assistant quartermaster, U. S. Army, graduate of 1846," and the notice of the President's acceptance is addressed to him as "captain, U. S. Army."

We do not think that the title which the claimant appended to his name in signing his resignation operated as a limitation upon the clear and unambiguous words of the resignation itself. "Resignation from the Army of the United States, immediate and unconditional," could mean nothing less than an entire severance of his army connection. The claimant himself seems to have so understood it at the time, for in a few days after he wrote General Upton, his superior officer, that he had tendered his "resignation from U. S. Army," and requested leave of absence. October 24, 1865, in a communication to General Pope, inclosing his resignation, he calls it "my resignation from the Army of the United States," and asks for leave of absence. His request for leave and his resignation passed through the same channels on their way to Washington and the leave was finally granted and the resignation accepted on the same day. In sending forward this resignation and request for leave General Upton makes this indorsement:

"Captain Turnley informs me that he intended to resign when in Utah in 1860, but the war soon after breaking out, he was induced to delay till such time as he could retire without prejudice to the service. For important private reasons, which Capt. Turnley has made known to me, I respectfully recommend that his resignation be accepted and that leave of absence be granted him till his accounts are settled."

General Dodge, through whose hands the resignation and request for leave passed, indorsed on the recommendation: "For reasons stated to me in person by Captain Turnley, I approve his resignation." General Meigs forwarded his resignation and request for leave with the following recommendation:

"Captain Turnley has written to me in regard to the condition of his father's estate in east Tennessee, where his father was lately threatened with death; an aged man, and I presume that he is now so desirous of leaving the service that it would be better to let him go. His knowledge of affairs on the plains was useful to the Department and his integrity inspired its confidence.

"I recommend that his resignation be accepted, to date from the 31st of December next, and that he have a leave of absence until that time to enable him to settle his accounts."

In all this correspondence there is no intimation that the claimant understood that he was simply resigning from active service. Leave of absence was sufficient for that purpose. It is hardly possible that an officer of his education and experience in the Army could have understood that the language of his resignation, so many times repeated, meant anything less than a total severance from the Army. Certainly, he must have so understood the President's acceptance, for pay ceased at that date; it does not appear, however, that he then expressed surprise or made any protest. The first notice of discontent appearing in the record is his application for restoration made about thirteen years afterward.

It is further said that the claimant, at the date of his resignation, was not in his right mind, and that the paper is therefore void. It is true that he was much out of health, debilitated and depressed in mind and body, but it appears that he was attending to his official duties. He had his family with him, and was surrounded by military friends both above and below him in rank.

The idea of severing his connection with the Army was not new. He had it in contemplation just before the rebellion. He actually did resign in 1862, but his resignation was not then accepted. He was granted leave of absence instead and subsequently placed on the retired list. In his communication to the President, July 24, 1865, a little over two months before the final resignation, he complained of his comparatively low rank in his corps, and requested promotion to the rank he would have held if he had not been retired, and adds: "If this can not be done, then I have the honor to request that your excellency will consider this communication a tender of my resignation, and that your excellency will accept the same unconditionally and immediately." At that time he was in good health, but wished to resign unless he could be promoted. He was then only forty-three years of age and, although on the retired list, he was liable, whenever his health would permit, to be ordered to active service. He might well have considered that at his time of life, if entirely severed from the Army, he might find occupation more remunerative than Army pay, in which he would be reasonably sure of good health.

While in the service the claimant appears to have been an excellent officer; but in passing upon his legal status the court can not consider his personal merits.

The petition will be dismissed.

[Court of Claims, December term, 1885. No. 651. Congressional case. Mary O. Williams vs. The United States.]

PETITION—FILED SEPTEMBER 10, 1886.—J. R.

To the honorable the Court of Claims of the United States:

Your petitioner, Mary O. Williams, respectfully represents that she is a citizen of the United States, residing in Shelby County, State of Tennessee, where she resided during the late war of the rebellion; that at different times during said period the United States forces, by proper authority, took from your petitioner quartermaster stores of the value of $850, and appropriated the same to the use of the United States Army, as follows:

1 fine mare	$200
1 fine horse	250
2 mules	400

Your petitioner states that she was the absolute and bona fide owner of said property.

Your petitioner further states that her claim for compensation for said stores was presented to the Quartermaster-General, under the act of Congress approved July 4, 1864, in the name of Robert Williams, and was by said officer disallowed about June, 1881, on the ground that the Quartermaster-General was not convinced of the loyalty of the claimant.

Your petitioner, knowing said decision to be unjust, petitioned the Congress of the United States for relief, and on or about the 30th day of July, 1886, said petition was by the Committee on War Claims of the House of Representatives referred to the honorable Court of Claims, under section 1 of an act of Congress approved March 3, 1883, entitled "An act to afford assistance and relief to Congress and the Executive Departments in the investigation of claims and demands against the Government."

Digitized by Google

Your petitioner further states that her said claim has not been assigned or transferred, and she is the sole owner thereof; that it is correct and just; that she did not give any aid or comfort to the late rebellion, but was throughout that war loyal to the Government of the United States.

Wherefore your petitioner prays that when the facts shall have been ascertained as to her loyalty and the justice of her claim the same may be reported to the House of Representatives of the United States or to the said Committee on War Claims, as provided in said act of March 3, 1883.

[Court of Claims. Clement Calhoon vs. The United States. Congressional, No. 1923.]

This case, being a claim for supplies or stores alleged to have been taken by or furnished to the military forces of the United States for their use during the late war for the suppression of the rebellion, the court, on a preliminary inquiry, finds that Clement Calhoon, the person alleged to have furnished such supplies or stores, or from whom the same are alleged to have been taken, was loyal to the Government of the United States throughout said war.

[In the Court of Claims. December Term, 1886-'87. No. 1923. Congressional case. Clement Calhoon vs. The United States.]

PETITION.—FILED MAY 4, 1887.—J. R.

To the honorable the Court of Claims of the United States:

Your petitioner, Clement Calhoon, respectfully represents that he is a citizen of the United States, residing in La Rue, on the border of Nelson County, State of Kentucky; that he resided during the late war of 1861 at the same place, in the county of La Rue, and State of Kentucky, and that his post office address was New Haven, county of Nelson, State of Kentucky; that he has a claim against the United States for supplies and stores taken by or furnished to the Army of the United States for Army use, at or near New Haven, in said county, stated at $870, viz:

1864, December 30—
For 800 bushels corn, at $1	$800
For 2 tons straw, at $10	20
For 200 shocks fodder, weighing 5 tons, at $10	50
Total	870

Your petitioner further states that his claim for compensation for said property was presented to the Quartermaster-General under the act of 4th July, 1864, with such vouchers, proofs, and papers as he had showing the taking and use of the property, and was by said Quartermaster-General, U. S. Army, rejected and disallowed about 1880 on the ground that the proofs were not made by a United States officer showing the taking and use of the property, etc.

Your petitioner, knowing said decision to be unjust, subsequently petitioned the Congress of the United States for relief, and said petition was, by the Committee on War Claims of the House of Representatives, referred to the honorable Court of Claims, under an act of Congress approved March 3, 1883, entitled "An act to afford assistance and relief to Congress and the Executive Departments in the investigation of claims and demands against the Government."

That no assignment or transfer of said claim, or of any part thereof or interest therein, has been made, except as stated herein; that he is justly entitled to the amount herein claimed from the United States after allowing all just credits or offsets; that he never gave any aid or comfort to the rebellion, but was throughout that war loyal to the Government of the United States, and that he believes the facts herein stated to be true.

Wherefore your petitioner prays that when the facts shall have been found by this honorable court the same may be reported back to the Committee of the House of Representatives from which the case was transmitted.

CLEMENT CALHOON.

P. E. DYE,
Attorney for Claimant.

Personally appeared before me the undersigned, Clement Calhoon, who, being duly sworn, says that the statements contained in the foregoing petition by him subscribed are true to the best of his knowledge, information, and belief.

[Court of Claims. Congressional case, No. 1928. Decided May 6, 1889. Clement Calhoon v. The United States.]

OPINION.

Nott, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The claim presented by this case was investigated by the Quartermaster's Department under the act 4th July, 1864, and received an unfavorable report from the Quartermaster-General upon the merits. Some of the evidence upon which he acted consisted of ex parte affidavits, but the testimony of the claimant and one witness was taken in the presence of an agent of the Quartermaster's Department, who cross-examined, or had the opportunity of cross-examining, the witnesses. The claim ultimately went to Congress, and was transmitted to this court by the Committee on War Claims of the House of Representatives. Since its transmission here no evidence has been taken by either party. It is now submitted on the two depositions taken in the presence of the agent above referred to.

The first section of the Bowman act authorizes a committee of either House to transmit to this court a claim pending before it "which involves the investigation and determination of facts." This is the purpose and the only purpose for which the law authorizes the transmission of a claim, "the investigation and ascertainment of facts." A committee is not authorized to transmit a claim under the Bowman act for any other purpose whatsoever; nor is the court authorized to take any other action in regard to a claim than such as is involved in the ascertainment and investigation of the facts.

It is manifest here that the claimant has not sought to have the claim investigated since it was transmitted, nor the facts ascertained by means of such an investigation. The effort now is practically to turn the court into an appellate tribunal to which appeals will lie from the adverse decisions of the Quartermaster-General or Southern Claims Commission. To this it must be answered that the court has been invested with no such appellate authority, and that the proper appellate tribunal for such appeals, and the only tribunal to which they will lie, is Congress. If, upon the evidence before them, either the Southern Claims Commission or the Quartermaster-General erred, Congress can award a new trial or otherwise rectify the wrong.

It must be now understood that this court is without authority to sit in review of the decisions referred to, and that where a claimant does not pursue his remedy of an investigation of the facts by judicial means in this court his claim must be dismissed.

Accordingly the order of the court is that the claim in the present case be dismissed and the fact of its dismissal be reported to Congress.

REPORT OF SECOND COMPTROLLER IN RELATION TO CERTAIN CLAIMS INCLUDED IN HOUSE EX. DOC. NO. 314, FIFTY-FIRST CONGRESS, FIRST SESSION.

December 9, 1890.—Referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Treasury Department,
December 3, 1890.

Sir: Referring to your communication of July 23, 1890, inclosing copy of House Report No. 2750, in relation to certain claims included in House Executive Document No. 314, Fifty-first Congress, first session, and to the reply of the Department thereto of August 4, 1890, I have the honor to transmit herewith the final report upon the claims by the Second Comptroller, dated the 2d instant, for your information.

Respectfully, yours,

W. Windom,
Secretary.

Hon. J. G. Cannon,
Chairman Committee on Appropriations,
House of Representatives.

Treasury Department,
Second Comptroller's Office,
Washington, D. C., December 2, 1890.

Sir: I have to acknowledge, by reference to me from you, the receipt of a letter from the Hon. J. G. Cannon, chairman of Committee on Appropriations, House of Representatives, dated July 23, 1890, reading as follows:

I have the honor to hand you herewith a copy of House Report No. 2750, this session, with reference to certain claims included in House Executive Document No. 314, which has been referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and to request that you will, after having had the same examined by the accounting officers of the Treasury, report to the committee whether you recommend that appropriation be made for the payment of the claims embraced in said Executive Document No. 314.

Your indorsement upon that letter of date July 24, 1890, is as follows:

Respectfully referred to the Second Comptroller for examination, as contemplated by the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, House of Representatives, and for report as to whether any facts are disclosed that would in his judgment affect the validity of the claims referred to, or preclude the Secretary from recommending an appropriation for their payment.

I have the honor to report that I have caused the said claims, so far as they relate to this office, to be examined, and in my opinion the claims embraced in the accompanying report marked Exhibit A and Exhibit B should be appropriated for and paid. There are no facts disclosed in the evidence or record that will, in my judgment, affect the validity of the claims or preclude the Secretary from recommending an appropriation for their payment.

The other claims referred to in the said letter and your indorsement, accompanying my report and marked Exhibits C and D, should, in my opinion, not be appropriated for, nor should payment be made, because the facts disclosed by the record and the evidence as to the claims marked Exhibit C (although these facts are not new) affect the validity of the claims and are such as, in my judgment, preclude the Secretary from recommending an appropriation for their payment; and as to the claims in Exhibit D the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Mouat (124 U. S. R., 303) holds that claims of this character should not be paid.

My reasons for these conclusions are fully given in the accompanying report on each claim and class of claims.

The claims specified in said Report No. 2,750 as claims allowed and reported by the Sixth Auditor have been referred to that officer, together with a copy of said letter and indorsement, with the request that he examine them and report to you.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully.

B. F. GILKESON,
Comptroller.

Hon. WILLIAM WINDOM,
Secretary of the Treasury.

EXHIBIT A.

The following claims are just, due, and unpaid, and should, in my opinion, be appropriated for by Congress:

Louis Von Hoffman et al., $18,430.65.

There seems to be some confusion in this case as to whom the money should be paid. This arises from the fact that a question exists as to whether a certain sale made by the trustees appointed by the court, to Oscar Von Hoffman, is such as would entitle him to receive rent from the date of such sale.

It appears by an affidavit of W. H. Newman that Oscar Von Hoffman purchased the property for the firm of Louis Von Hoffman & Co.; that said firm was composed of several members, all of whom subsequently disposed of their interest to the firm of Louis Von Hoffman & Co. It is claimed that W. H. Newman became the sole owner of the claim by certain assignments. Newman is now dead.

In view of these facts, I recommend that an appropriation be made to the heirs of William H. Newman, deceased, and Louis A. Von Hoffman & Co., to be paid by the Secretary of the Treasury as the interests of the said heirs of W. H. Newman and the late firm of Louis A. Von Hoffman & Co. shall hereafter be legally made to appear. This will enable all parties to present their claims to the Department, and have them settled before payment is finally made.

The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, $32,788.48, for transportation service rendered in the fiscal year 1861—from April 23 to May 19—while the road was in the possession of the United States, and by agreement operated in connection with the Annapolis and Elk Ridge Railroad, by the military authorities of the United States.

Eliza Taylor, mother of James Carrol Taylor, deceased, seaman on gunboat Tyler, $17.43. The amount stated is the sum that was due the seaman at the date of his death. As it has never been paid, it should be now paid.

St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba Railroad Company, $13.20.

This is a balance of a claim of $5,139.30 allowed to the said company as 50 per cent. of land-grant earnings previously withheld. The sum of $5,126.10 has been paid; the balance, $13.20—two items, one of $6, sleeping-car berths for three officers and transportation for two invalid pensioners, $7.20—should be appropriated for and paid.

Inland and Seaboard Coasting Company, $24.13.

A bill for services rendered the Quartermaster's Department, from September, 1877, to December, 1879, seems to be correct and should be paid.

Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad Company, $178.64.

There was, at the time this service was rendered the United States by the above company in May and June, 1879, an agreement that it should be treated, so far as its services to the Government were concerned, as though 156 miles of its road were land-grant. In conformity with that agreement the earnings of that 156 miles of the road were held up and deducted out of the amount of the total earned. The amount thus deducted was $357.29.

Under the decision of the courts and the rule adopted for settlements with land-grant roads, this company is now entitled to 50 per cent. of that amount, or $178.64 retained. Therefore an appropriation should be made for it.

Morgan's Louisiana and Texas Railroad and Steamship Company, $334.05.

This is for transportation of freight between New Orleans and San Antonio in September, 1880, and February, 1881. The bill is for $387.81, $53.76 of which was over land-grant portion of the road, and is deducted. Hence the balance should be paid.

Frank T. Eastman, lieutenant, Fourth Infantry, $10.50.

This officer, in obedience to an order from his superior, traveled from Omaha, Nebr., to Salt Lake City, Utah. Instead of procuring transportation from the Quartermaster's Department, as it was his duty to do, he obtained mileage from Major Staunton, amounting to $70.50; but as the route from Omaha to Ogden was over the Union Pacific Railroad Company, it was not proper for this officer to pay his fare on that road; he should have procured transportation over it. He was compelled to refund the $70.50 to Major Staunton: The Utah Central is not a bond-aided or land-grant road, and having paid his fare over that road he is entitled to have it, as well as his sleeping-car fare, paid. Therefore this claim of $10.50 should be paid.

William J. Jarrell, $13.25.

This is for quartermaster stores furnished the quartermaster of the Twenty-third Kentucky volunteers during the late war. The quartermaster of that regiment, Lieut. W. W. Air, gave vouchers for the property, which are presented for payment. The amount should be paid.

George Peoples, $14.

This is for transporting two men, belonging to the Army, from Bismarck, Dak., to Fort Yates, Dak., by stage, and was made up, on a regular transportation request and should be paid.

Catharine Ransom, administratrix of Giles T. Ransom, deceased, assistant engineer on the steamer General Bragg, $105.33.

This man was an assistant engineer on the United States steamer General Bragg, and died in the service. The amount above stated was due him at the date of his death and should be paid.

B. F. GILKESON,
Comptroller.

EXHIBIT B.—NAVY CLAIMS.

I have reëxamined the claims embraced in House Report 2750, Fifty-first Congress, first session, at page 5, commencing with No. 6046 and extending down to and including No. 6107. These claims are for difference between actual expenses and mileage for officers of the Navy while traveling under orders, and were allowed under the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of the United States vs. Graham (110 U. S. R., 219). These claims were settled by the accounting officers and reported to Congress in House Ex. Doc. 55, Forty eighth Congress, second session, pages 26, 27.

By the act of March 3, 1885 (23 Stat., 477), Congress refused to make appropriation for their payment.

On March 2, 1886, by direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, these accounts, with others, were reëxamined. A report of that examination was published in House Ex. Doc. 210, Forty-ninth Congress, first session, pages 32, 33.

By the act of August 4, 1886 (24 Stat., 303), there was appropriated $10,673.79 to pay the claims reported on page 33 of the last above-mentioned documents.

It was held by Comptroller Maynard, July 11, 1885, that under the provisions of section 7 of the act of July 17, 1862 (12 Stat., 594), when an officer was furnished with transportation by orders of the Navy Department or a superior officer, mileage could not be allowed, as the officer in that case did not travel at his own expense.

That decision has since been modified; and if the claims of the following-named officers for difference between actual expenses and mileage were settled under the present rulings, they would be allowed the amounts set opposite their names:

The above claimants filed their several claims for amounts paid upon the loss of the several steam vessels hereinafter mentioned.

Some of these claims were considered by Hon. J. M. Brodhead, while Second Comptroller, and disallowed. All of them were afterwards examined, considered, and allowed by Hon. W. W. Upton while Second Comptroller. All were afterwards examined and disallowed by Hon. I. H. Maynard while Second Comptroller. They were afterwards submitted to Hon. S. Butler, while Second Comptroller, who refused to take jurisdiction. They are now referred to me for examination and report by the Secretary of the Treasury, upon a reference to him by the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations of Congress.

I have the honor to submit the following facts and conclusions:

I have not taken the trouble to point out and designate the particular vessels each insurance policy was on, because the facts and circumstances surrounding the loss of each vessel are practically the same, and the decision of one settles all.

I have below given a summary of the facts surrounding the loss of each vessel, so that the committee can determine for themselves the correctness of my conclusions:

The steamer Osceola was chartered by the Quartermaster's Department October 19, 1861, to transport a cargo of Government freight from New York to such port as should be designated by the assistant quartermaster at Old Point Comfort. The owners assumed all marine risks. While prosecuting the voyage she had contracted to perform she was destroyed in a storm by being driven ashore. She was in possession of the officers put on board of her by her owners at the time of the loss. The officers and crew had the exclusive control of her navigation.

The steamer Wm. L. Ewing was, on the 23d day of November, 1864, while at St. Louis, ordered by Captain Metcalf, assistant quartermaster, to receive on board a cargo of military stores. This was done, and it was agreed that the compensation the boat was to receive should be $410 per day. While the first order might have been an impressment, it is quite clear that a contract was finally entered into before the troops and stores were received on board. While the steamer was on the voyage from St. Louis to Cairo, the port to which it was bound, under the command and control of her owners and officers and crew, she struck some obstruction in the river, sunk, and was lost.

The Steamer Forest Queen.—This boat was impressed into the service December 16, 1862, and remained in the service until the latter part of August, 1863. About March 1, 1863, a contract was made between Captain Lyman, assistant quartermaster, and the master of the boat, by which her future service was performed under a contract. It was then agreed that the owners should receive $275 per day for her services, both those rendered before and after the contract. This steamer being one of those which passed the Vicksburg batteries, she was ordered to Cairo to disembark the furloughed men then on her, and to go to St. Louis or any other place desired. She was taken to St. Louis for repairs. The Government agreeing to pay $4,000 on her repairs, Captain Metcalf entered into a contract with the owners to do the work at that price on the 24th of September, 1863. The boat had been turned over to the owners before that time. On the 4th day of October, 1863, she was destroyed by fire, at St. Louis, while undergoing repairs.

The Steamer Neptune was navigating the Ohio, Cumberland, Tennessee, and other Western rivers. About the 1st of February, 1862, her master contracted to transport a part of the Seventy-eighth Ohio from Cincinnati to Paducah. While on the way down the river she was met with an order to transport the troops on board to Fort Donaldson. After landing the troops she took on board a cargo of rebel prisoners, who were delivered at Cairo. The master took the boat to Louisville, and took on board a cargo of Government freight and transported it to Nashville. On the return trip from Nashville the boat ran against one of the railroad piers at Clarksville, Tenn., and was lost. The steamer was being controlled and navigated by the owners and their officers and crew.

The steamer Champion.—This steamer was navigating the Mississippi and other Western rivers, especially between St. Louis and New Orleans and intermediate points.

On the 21st of September, 1863, the master of the boat, upon arrival at Memphis, was ordered to unload such freight as he had on board, and take on board a cargo of Government stores and proceed to Vicksburg, one of the ports he was in the habit of visiting in his regular business. The boat was loaded, and just as it was about to back out into the river to go to the woodyard to get fuel it was discovered to be on fire. It was totally destroyed. The evidence shows that the fire originated in the hold, and also that the hatches had been shut down for more than a half day before it is said the fire was discovered. It seems to be almost impossible that the fire should burn in the hold of the vessel for that time without the owners, officers, and crew in possession having discovered it. It certainly does not indicate that the vessel was lost without fault or negligence of the owners.

The steamer D. G. Taylor.—This steamer was regularly employed in the carrying trade on the Ohio and other Western rivers. About the 1st of February, 1864, while at Louisville, the master received an order to unload whatever private freight the boat might have aboard, and take on board a cargo of Government freight for Nashville. The owners and officers at the same time advertised for passengers and private freight for Nashville. They remained in control of the vessel. While loading she was discovered to be on fire on the night of the 5th of February, 1864, and was destroyed. It was agreed between the quartermaster and owners that the per diem wages of the vessel should be fixed after she made one trip. The fire that destroyed the vessel was first discovered by some person on another boat at the landing. The evidence clearly shows that the officers and crew were both careless and negligent, and that the boat was destroyed because of such carelessness and negligence of the owners, their officers and crew.

The steamer Louisville struck a snag in the Missouri River near Decatur, Nebr., about May 24, 1864, and was lost, while on a trip down the river to Rulo to transport a cargo of corn from that place to Fort Union. The evidence shows that about the 1st of May, 1864, the master and owners contracted with Captain Parsons, assistant quartermaster, to take 2,121 sacks of corn from Rulo to Fort Union. The owners took on so much private freight at St. Louis that when the vessel arrived at Rulo it was decided by the master and other officers that the water was too low to take on board the corn. They then gave a receipt for it as though shipped, and put it in a warehouse and insured for themselves. The boat then proceeded on her voyage to Sioux City. Upon arriving there without the corn, General Sully ordered the master to go back to Rulo and get the corn and bring it up as he had contracted. In attempting to reach Rulo the vessel was lost.

Each of the above vessels was being navigated and controlled by its respective owners or by a master and crew placed on the vessel by its owners or agents. The owners or agents had in each case taken out insurance on their respective vessels. When the loss occurred, in each case (except the Osceola), as soon as it took place a protest was made to save the insurance. In each case the loss was covered by the insurance policies held by the owners on the respective vessels, and each insurance company paid the loss or risk it had taken. It is, in my opinion, evident that the respective owners of these vessels, at the time of loss, regarded such vessel as in the service of the owners. It is also to me clear that the United States were not the special owners of either of the vessels lost as herein set out. The insurance companies paid only what they contracted to pay, and what they received full consideration for paying in the event of the happening of the events insured against in their several policies.

In my opinion these claims should not be paid.

B. F. GILKESON,
Comptroller.

EXHIBIT C—CHARTER PARTY.

The following claims are for sums alleged to have been erroneously deducted from the earnings of the several steam vessels hereinafter named for time lost when making repairs when vessels were under charter parties to render service to the United States during the late rebellion:

Randolph Barton, trusees of the Powhatan Steamboat Company, for earnings of the steamer George Peabody, $19,175.

Elizabeth P. Richardson, administratrix, for earnings of steamer Massachusetts, $[illegible]00.

Appleton Sturgis, administrator for steamer Achilles, $600.

Edward Ray and John Brewster, trustees, etc., for the steamer Edwin Forest, $440.

The New York and Boston (Baltimore) Transportation Line, for steamer Octorara and steamer Elizabeth, $1,400.

The New Haven Steamboat Company, for steamer South America, $5,200.

James A. Gray and Sally Coblens, executors, for steam tug Telegraph, $1,500.

Cornelius F. Sayre, administrator, steamer West End, $1,900.

Edward Ray and John Brewster, trustees, for steamer Fairy Queen, $200.

Stephen and Condit Transportation Company, for steamer Maryland, $800.

Randolph Barton, receiver, for steamer Pioneer, $1,600.

William A. James, administrator, for steamer Suwanee, $6,000.

R. Loper Baird and Preston K. Erdman, assignees, for steamer Thomas Sparks, $2,900.

Nathaniel McKay, Alfred D. Foster, administrators, and Samuel Bell and Anna B. Hunt, administrators, for steamer C. W. Thomas, $1,100.

George W. Burton, administrator; Edward Burton and Walter E. Penrose, administrators; C. Ingersoll, Harry Ingersoll, and E. Ingersoll, executors: and Henry Virden, for the steamer America, $750.15.

James M. Sipple, administrator, and others, for schooner Allen Midleton, jr., $265.82.

Nathaniel McKay and Alfred D. Foster, administrators, for steamer Argo, $2,027.50.

William H. Foster, receiver, for steamer Mississippi, $3,900.

Thomas Clyde, for steamer Tallaoca, $450.

The Commercial Transportation Company, for steamer Commerce, $2,730.

George H. Power, Margaret Loper, Henry Acker, and George Murrell, administrators, and Milton Martin, for steamer Monitor, $5,975.

The Baltimore Steam Packet Company, for steamer Thomas A. Morgan, $1,900.

The Baltimore Steam Packet Company, for steamer Georgia, $10,216.67.

Robert A. Morgan, for steamer Jenny Lind, $870.

These claims are of like character. They are presented by owners of vessels employed by the Quartermaster's Department, under charter parties, for services to the United States. These charter parties were all entered into in 1861, 1862, and 1863, and all the services rendered and paid for during those years. At the completion of each contract and service a full settlement was had and the amount found due paid to the owner or agent of each vessel when it was discharged from the service. These settlements were accepted by the respective owners and agents at the time; the amount said to be due by the Quartermaster's Department accepted and receipted for and acquiesced in for twenty years. After the lapse of this long time (all these claims were filed in 1882 and 1883) the Government is asked to reopen these settlements and pay these claims. Since the settlements in 1861, 1862, and 1863 a majority of the original persons who contracted for the use of these vessels have died. The corporations who owned others have ceased to exist, hence these claims are now presented by trustees, assignees, administrators, executors, &c.

All of these claims have been examined and allowed by Second Comptroller W. W. Upton, and once examined and disallowed by Second Comptroller I. H. Maynard. They have also once been presented to Second Comptroller S. Butler, who refused to take jurisdiction of the matter. These examinations and decisions were made in the order stated. They are here now by reference by the chairman of the Appropriation Committee of Congress to the Secretary of the Treasury, and by him referred to me for examination and report. There are no new facts or new evidence submitted.

Without discussing the question whether I have jurisdiction to consider and determine the questions involved in these cases, in the ordinary sense in which these terms are used in reference to cases pending in this office, I hold that I have the power conferred upon me by the reference of the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations to make the examination and report called for, and shall take up no more time discussing my authority or jurisdiction.

The charter party under which each of these vessels was employed contained substantially this clause: "That the said vessel now is, and shall be kept and maintained during the whole of the voyage mentioned in this contract, tight, staunch, strong, and well and sufficiently manned, victualed, tackled, appareled, and ballasted and furnished in every respect fit for merchant service, at the costs and charges of her owners."

And also this clause: "Does agree to employ said vessel on the voyage or voyages aforesaid, and that as freight or hire of the said vessel during the time of this contract he will pay or cause to be paid the full and just sum of $350 per day for each and every day said vessel may be employed."

In these charter parties the owners of the vessels usually assumed the marine risks, unless the vessel was ordered south of Cape Henry, the south cape of Chesapeake Bay, and the United States the war risks and the marine risks while south of Cape Henry. The owners also undertook to be responsible for the ordinary wear and tear of the vessel. It is quite clear, from the evidence in these claims, that none of the repairs required to be made on these vessels during the time they were engaged by the Quartermaster's Department under charter parties were made necessary because of any injury received while taking a war risk, or the marine risks assumed by the United States when entering into said charter parties. But, upon the contrary, it is very apparent that the repairs which were required to be made to the vessels were the result of ordinary wear and tear of the vessels and machinery while in the service of the owners, such as any vessel is likely to require in any regular and ordinary prosecution of its carrying business. There is no evidence that these vessels or either of them assumed, took, or encountered any other risks than a merchant vessel would in the prosecution of its ordinary business.

In my opinion these repairs were expenditures the owners contracted to make at their own expense, and if it was necessary that the vessel should be laid up for these repairs the loss of time was one of the expenses assumed by the owners. It was as much an expense as the purchase of the material and labor.

The second clause I have quoted from the charter parties confirms me in this opinion. The Government only contracted to pay the owners of the vessels for the days actually employed. These vessels were not in the service of the United States in the sense that made the Government the owner for the voyage or the time of service. The Government occupied the position of hirer or freighter. The owners had the exclusive control of the navigation of the vessels. They were manned and supplied by the owners.

For these reasons I am of the of the opinion that none of these claims should be paid. There is, in my opinion, no legal or equitable claim in favor of the owners against the Government for the sums claimed.

B. F. GILKESON,
Comptroller.

EXHIBIT C—MISCELLANEOUS.

The Annapolis and Elk Ridge Railroad Company, $9,720.

This claim is made up of differences between the tariff rates of the company and rates fixed by a convention of railroad managers held in Washington in May, 1862. The claims of the company were all settled at the time and should not now be opened.

These accounts, which seem to be indicated in the accompanying claim, should, in my judgment, contain all the information necessary to establish the correctness of the settlements made or expose any errors therein.

No clerical errors are alleged in the settlements heretofore made; it is a simple question as to whether they shall now be disturbed, reopened, new rates applied, and new accounts stated and paid. No information is at hand which, in my opinion, warrants the accounting officers in extending any peculiar or exceptional consideration to this company differing from that accorded to the railroad companies generally.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company, on its own line	$12,730.49
As lessee of the Camden and Amboy Railroad and Transportation line	1,120.55
As lessee of the New Jersey Railroad and Transportation Company	467.96
Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore Railroad Company	188.18
Northern Central Railway Company	371.75
	14,878.93

The items of which these claims are made up consist of, as claimed by the companies, clerical errors, erroneous computations, misinterpretations, etc.

It must be remembered that this service was rendered from 1861 to 1866–'67; that payment was made to the several companies soon after the service was rendered. Since that time the accounts have been gone over and reviewed in 1861, 1868, 1871 and 1872, and 1883, when errors were discovered and double payments previously made to the company refunded to the Government, and in 1883 the sum of $49,892.97 was paid by the company to the Government for war tax against the New Jersey Railroad and Canal Company. It must be presumed that the accounts of the company with the Government were re-examined at the time of each of these demands and errors, if found, corrected. It can not be presumed that the company paid out such large sums of money without examination and verification of the accounts. Therefore it is fair to assume that the items were settled upon a basis agreed upon between the officers of the company and the Government at the time the settlements complained of were made. If these items of account were settled upon a compromise when originally paid by the United States, they should not now be disturbed. In my opinion such was the case. Therefore no appropriation should be made.

EXHIBIT D—NAVY CLAIMS.

If the accounts of the following-named claimants were settled at the present time, under the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of the United States vs. Mouat (124 U. S. R., 303), there would be nothing due the claimants.

No. 6086, E. K. Bordman, pay clerk	$348.26
No. 5997, B. P. Minmack, rear admiral's clerk	380.00
No. 6092, John G. Sankey, pay clerk	105.37

OTHER ASSETS.

Of the other assets of the company of uncertain value, fully described in the report of the Commissioner for the year ended December 1, 1883, Mis. Doc. No. 10, Forty-eighth Congress, first session, the sum of $15,511.69 has been recovered on the judgment against H. L. Cranford et al., equity No. 4465, $511.69 through attachment proceedings and $15,000 by compromise.

A decree for $6,227.49, with interest from January 1, 1889, has been obtained in the case of The Commissioner vs. the District of Columbia, equity No. 8680, covering, among others, the remaining tax-lien certificates on hand and herein enumerated. This decree, however, has been to some extent anticipated by the conversion of a part of the tax-lien certificates under the provisions of the act of June 2, 1890.

Nominal offers have been received for a quitclaim deed to the company's banking house at Jacksonville, Fla., sold under a judgment recovered against the Trust Company by Jonathan C. Greeley, mentioned in former reports, and for the $14,250 free-land bonds of the Florida, Atlantic and Gulf Central Railroad Company; but both of these offers have been declined, on account of their insignificance in amount.

The decree in the lower court, in the case of The Company vs. Robert Stevens et al., involving the collection of certain judgments of the Trust Company against S. S. Smoot, which was adverse to the Trust Company, has been affirmed by the court in general term.

A final dividend of $32.01 in amount has been collected on the company's claim against the estate of Jay Cooke & Co., and some progress has been made in the case of The Commissioner vs. Leonidas Scott.

JUDGMENTS.

The following judgments have been revived during the year:

No. 14852, Law vs. Charles R. Douglas, for $1,800.
No. 15991, Law vs. L. H. Douglas et al., for $561.52.
No. 16139, Law vs. Joseph Daniels, for $8,471.77.
No. 5328, Equity vs. Silas L. Loomis, trustee, et al., for $2,776.01.
No. 4118, Equity vs. Robert Williams, for $4,143.74.

OUTSTANDING CHECKS.

A large number of checks, issued in payment of dividends declared by the several Commissioners, have never been presented for payment. They are mostly for very small amounts, but aggregate the sum of $8,016.07, issued as follows:

By Hon. J. A. J. Creswell et al., Commissioners	$3,590.37
By Hon. John Jay Knox, late Commissioner	4,263.37
By Hon. H. W. Cannon, late Commissioner	99.12
By Hon. William L. Trenholm, late Commissioner	63.21
Total	8,016.07

As few of these checks are likely ever to be presented for payment the amounts will inure to the benefit of the United States unless Congress shall otherwise direct.

CONCLUSION.

In conclusion, I beg to recommend to Congress the removal of the bar contained in the act of February 21, 1881, against the payment of dividends not presented within two years of their declaration, and to submit herewith draft of a bill designed to carry out this suggestion:

A BILL authorizing the Commissioner of the Freedman's Savings and Trust Company to pay certain dividends barred by the act of February twenty-first, eighteen hundred and eighty-one.

Be it enacted, etc., That the Commissioner of the Freedman's Savings and Trust Company be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay from the funds in his hands available for that purpose, to all claimants otherwise legally entitled thereto, who have not yet received them, the sixty-two per cent. in dividends heretofore declared in favor of the depositors of said company, notwithstanding the limitation for the payment of such dividends contained in section eight of an act entitled "An act amending the charter of the Freedman's Savings and Trust Company, and for other purposes," approved February twenty-first, eighteen hundred and eighty-one.

By reference to the claims and dividends uncalled for and barred under the act of February 21, 1881, as shown by Statement No. II of the appendix, it will be seen that although the large sum of $184,494.13 is reported, only 2,411 claims, calling for $17,481.10, were presented for examination and audit under the provisions of the act of February 17, 1883, between February 21, 1881, and May 12, 1885, a period of over four years.

Digitized by Google

Since May 12, 1885, only 200 claims barred by the act of February 21, 1881, calling for $3,450.07 to pay the full 62 per cent. in dividends declared, have been presented for payment.

It is evident from this showing that the greater portion of the sum of $167,013.03 now barred by the act of February 21, 1881, which, however, represents an average to each claimant of about $4.49 only, will never be called for.

I think it probable that $10,000 or $15,000, in addition to the $3,450.07 already called for, will cover the full amount necessary to pay the 62 per cent. in dividends on all claims now barred, likely to be presented for payment, should said bar be removed by Congress.

Upon my estimate it would require $6,988.49 to cover the claims provided for by the act of February 17, 1883; $3,450.07 to cover the barred claims already presented or called for, and from $10,000 to $15,000 additional to cover those likely to be called for, if the provisions of law now barring them should be removed—an aggregate of $25,438.56. While the remaining assets are not at all likely to admit of the declaration of another dividend, in my opinion they are sufficient for the purpose indicated. It is moreover eminently just and proper that all claims presented should be put upon the same footing and the full amount of the five dividends paid.

E. S. LACEY,
Commissioner.

The SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

51st Congress, 2d Session. } HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES. { Mis. Doc. No. 27.

R. VON BALSAN, ADMINISTRATOR OF HENRY VON BALSAN, DECEASED, vs. THE UNITED STATES.

Letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the finding of the court in the case of R. Von Balsan, administrator of Henry Von Balsan, against The United States.

DECEMBER 11, 1890.—Referred to the Committee on War Claims.

COURT OF CLAIMS, CLERK'S OFFICE,
Washington, December 10, 1890.

SIR: Pursuant to the order of the court I transmit herewith a certified copy of the findings of court filed in the aforesaid cause, which case was referred to this court by the Committee on War Claims, House of Representatives, under the act of March 3, 1883.

I am, very respectfully, yours, etc.,

JOHN RANDOLPH,
Assistant Clerk, Court of Claims.

Hon. THOS. B. REED,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

[Court of Claims. Congressional No. 532. R. Von Balsan, administrator of Henry Von Balsan, deceased, vs. The United States.]

This case, being a claim for supplies or stores alleged to have been taken by or furnished to the military forces of the United States for their use during the late war for the suppression of the rebellion, the court, on a preliminary inquiry, finds that Henry Von Balsan, the person alleged to have furnished such supplies or stores, or from whom the same are alleged to have been taken, was loyal to the Government of the United States throughout said war.

Filed February 6, 1888.

[Court of Claims. Congressional Case No. 532. R. Von Balsan, administrator of Henry Von Balsan, vs. The United States.]

At a court of claims, held in the city of Washington, on the 24th day of December, 1888, the court filed the following

STATEMENT OF CASE:

The claim in the above-entitled case for supplies or stores alleged to have been taken by or furnished to the military forces of the United States for their use during the late war for the suppression of the rebellion, was transmitted to the court by the Committee on War Claims of the House of Representatives on the 19th day of February, 1886.

G. W. Z. Black, esq., appeared for claimant, and the Attorney-General by Lewis Cochran, esq., his assistant, and under his direction, appeared for the defense and protection of the interests of the United States.

On a preliminary inquiry, the court, on the 6th day of February, 1888, found that the person alleged to have furnished the supplies or stores, or from whom they were alleged to have been taken, was loyal to the Government of the United States throughout said war.

The claimant, in his petition, alleges that the following-described property was taken from said Henry Von Balsan, of whose estate he is administrator, as stores and supplies for the use of the Army of the United States in Florida during the late war of the rebellion:

Lumber in dwelling house, value of	$3,000
Lumber in two outhouses	500
Fences	500
Live oak and pine timber	2,000
Two acres of timber for fort	10
	6,010

The case having been brought to a hearing on its merits on the 20th day of December, 1888, the court, upon the evidence and after considering the briefs and arguments of counsel on both sides, makes the following

FINDINGS OF FACT:

It does not appear how much of said property was taken as alleged, or what was the value thereof.

BY THE COURT.

Filed, December 24, 1888.
A true copy.

[Court of Claims. Congressional, No. 1548. John D. Conard vs. The United States.]

This case, being a claim for supplies or stores alleged to have been taken by or furnished to the military forces of the United States for their use during the late war for the suppression of the rebellion, the court, on a preliminary inquiry, finds that John D. Conard, the person alleged to have furnished such supplies or stores, or from whom the same are alleged to have been taken, was loyal to the Government of the United States throughout said war.

Filed, April 9, 1888.

[Court of Claims. Congressional case, No. 1548. John D. Conard vs. The United States.]

At a Court of Claims held in the city of Washington on the 4th day of February, 1889, the court filed the following:

The claim in the above-entitled case for supplies or stores alleged to have been taken by or furnished to the military forces of the United States for their use during the late war for the suppression of the rebellion was transmitted to the court by the Committee on War Claims of the House of Representatives on the 24th day of February, 1887.

G. W. Z. Black, esq., appeared for claimant, and the Attorney-General, by Lewis Cochran, esq., his assistant, and under his direction, appeared for the defense and protection of the interests of the United States.

On a preliminary inquiry the court on the 9th day of April, 1888, found that the person alleged to have furnished the supplies or stores or from whom they were alleged to have been taken was loyal to the Government of the United States throughout said war.

The case was brought to a hearing on its merits on the 10th day of January, 1889.

It appears that the claimant alleges in his petition that during the war of the rebellion there were taken from him as stores and supplies by the Army of the United States for their use, at his homestead in Jefferson County, W. Va.—

1,000 pounds of bacon, valued at	$125
2 fat cattle	96
25 fat hogs	600

for which he alleges he has not been paid.

FINDINGS OF FACT.

The court, after examining the evidence and considering the briefs of counsel on both sides, are unable to find that any property was taken from him as alleged for which he has not been paid.

At a Court of Claims held in the City of Washington on the 20th day of February 1888, the court filed the following:

FINDINGS OF FACT.

The claim in the above entitled case for stores or supplies alleged to have been taken by or furnished to the military forces of the United States, for their use during the late war for the suppression of the rebellion, was transmitted to the court by the Committee on War Claims of the House of Representatives, on the 27th day of May, 18-6.

Gilbert Moyers, esq., and Luther M. Pike, esq., appeared for claimant, and the Attorney-General by W. I. Hill, esq., his assistant and under his direction, appeared for the defense and protection of the interests of the United States.

On a preliminary inquiry the court on the 23d day of May, 1887, found that the person alleged to have furnished the supplies or stores, or from whom they were alleged to have been taken, was loyal to the Government of the United State throughout said war.

The case having been brought to a hearing on its merits on the 16th day of February, 1888, the court upon the evidence, and after considering the briefs and arguments of counsel on both sides, find the facts to be as follows:

I.

During the year 1862 the claimant was residing on his plantation near Prairie Grove, Washington County, Ark., the battle-field of Prairie Grove being part of his plantation. General Heron's command after the battle was encamped on and around said plantation, and the claimant alleges that there were taken from him on or about December 7, 1862, from said plantation, by that portion of the Army of the United States under command of said General Heron, the following stores and supplies for its use:

400 bushels wheat, $400; 1,500 bushels corn, $1,200	$1,600
15,000 pounds beef, $1,312; 1 pair mules and harness, $310	1,622
200 yards domestics, $40; 4,500 pounds pork, $450	490
1 gray mare, $100; 1 sorrel mare, $100	200
1 mare, $170; 1 pair sorrel horses, $300	470
1 bay mare, $100; 15 sheep, $30	130
1 gray horse, $100; 3 cattle, $100	300
500 pounds bacon, $100; 8,000 rails, $200	300

While the court is satisfied that the military command under General Heron, thus encamped, did much damage on the claimant's plantation and destroyed some property, and may have used some, it does not appear from the evidence what, if any, of the above-described property was taken for the use of the army.

Filed May 31, 1887.

[Court of Claims. Congressional case No. 359. William T. Manson, vs. The United States.]

At a court of Claims held in the city of Washington on the 11th day of June, 1888, the court filed the following

FINDINGS OF FACT:

The claim or matter in the above-entitled case was transmitted to the court by the Committee on War Claims of the House of Representatives on the 4th day of March, 1885. E. B. Hay, esq., appeared for claimant, and the Attorney-General, by Felix Brannigan, esq., his assistant, and under his direction, appeared for the defense and protection of the interests of the United States.

The case having been brought to a hearing on the 5th day of June, 1888, the court, upon the evidence and after considering the briefs and arguments of counsel on both sides, finds the facts to be as follows:

I.

The claimant is now, as he was during the late war, a citizen of the city of Knoxville, Tenn. In September 1863, the said claimant was engaged in the bakery business at said place and furnished bread to the soldiers of the United States stationed at said place as hereinafter stated.

Digitized by Google

II.

On the 9th day of September, 1863, the said claimant and Capt. P. D. Boyd, commissary of subsistence in the service of the United States, entered into an arrangement by which the said claimant was to furnish bread to the Army upon the following conditions and terms: He, the said claimant, was to use the ovens built by the Confederate authorities upon his premises in the manufacture of bread, and to furnish the Government a pound of bread for every pound of flour furnished by the Government. The Government was to furnish to said claimant all other articles needed in the manufacture of the bread, such as could not be purchased from private parties. If in the prosecution of the work the claimant was not able to procure the service of a sufficient number of bakers to do the work, then a detail of soldiers was to be made, the claimant to pay the soldiers for such service.

III.

During the progress of the arrangement it was found impossible for the Government to furnish the flour as heretofore stated, and because of such inability it was proposed and accepted that the claimant should furnish the flour at the price paid by the Government for flour during the time covered by the arrangement. On the 17th day of November, 1863, the Government took possession of the bakery and said arrangement or contract ceased.

IV.

In the latter part of November 1863, the said claimant presented a bill to the Commissary Department as follows:

November 30, 1863.

For $143\frac{22}{196}$ barrels of flour, at $7 per barrel	$1,007.65
For $547\frac{73}{196}$ barrels of flour, at $7 per barrel	3,835.20

On said bill so presented there was allowed and paid the sum of $3,672. The allowance of said amount was based on an estimate of the value of flour by the Commissary Department during the time in which said flour was furnished. At the time of said payment the claimant protested against the deduction of $1,170.85, but in consequence of his embarassed financial situation he was induced to accept the same.

On the 13th day of August, 1869, the Commissary-General referred the disallowed balance to the officer who had passed the same, and on the 1st day of October, 1869, upon a report of said officer, the Commissary-General disallowed the amount.

V.

In January, 1870, claimant filed a claim for 20,134 rations of soft bread furnished at said place in December, 1863. On the 18th day of March, 1870, the Commissary-General of Subsistence reported on that claim that, not being convinced that it was a just claim, he declined to recommend it for settlement under the law.

On the 13th day of February, 1872, claimant filed a claim in the Subsistence Department in which he claims that under said agreement he had furnished 753,586 pounds of bread and had only received in return 524,074 pounds of flour, leaving a difference of 229,512 pounds of flour.

Upon said claim the Commissary-General says: "From the facts as presented I am not able to recommend any additional payment to the claimant."

That opinion was concurred in by the Third Auditor, who recommended that the claim be dismissed.

At the time the claimant receipted for said $3,672 he protested that it was not sufficient, but, as stated above, he was necessitated to do so by his embarassed circumstances.

It does not appear that in the allowance of said amount of $3,672 the Commissary Department did not allow the said claimant "the price paid by the Government for flour during the time covered by the arrangement." The rations claimed for as set forth in Finding IV relate to the arrangement as to baking bread mentioned in Findings II and III. It does not appear that any bread was furnished by claimant under any other agreement or contract.

[In the Court of Claims. Congressional No. 4551. Henrietta G. Youngs and Fannie H. Youngs, executrices of the estate of Thomas F. Youngs, deceased, vs. The United States.]

To the honorable the Judges of the said Court:

The claimants' petition respectfully showeth as follows:

I. During the late war Thomas F. Youngs and Byam K. Stevens were copartners in trade, under the style of "Thomas F. Youngs & Co.," doing business in the city of New York. Both partners were citizens of the United States, and resided in New York during the late war.

II. In September, 1862, the said firm owned ninety-nine bales of cotton, situated in Nashville, Tenn., which had been lawfully acquired while Nashville was within the Federal lines.

III. In September, 1862, the cotton was taken by the military authorities of the United States, and used in strengthening the fortifications of Nashville. On the fifth of September, 1862, sixty-seven bales of it were delivered to James St. Clair Martin, chief of engineers, and on the twenty-fourth of September, 1862, thirty-two other bales were delivered to Frederick H. Kennedy, aid-de-camp of Brigadier-General Negley, the said officers giving receipts therefor, and the cotton was used in strengthening the fortifications.

IV. Nniety-seven bales of the said cotton were returned to Thomas F. Youngs & Co. in damaged condition; two bales never were returned.

V. A board of officers was subsequently convened to report upon the claim of the said firm, with others of like character, and reported that the claim was fully supported by testimony, and that Byam K. Stevens was entitled, for the two bales not returned, to five hundred and thirty ($530) dollars, and for damages to the rest of the cotton in the sum of one thousand six hundred and forty-five ($1,645.25) dollars and twenty-five cents, amounting in the aggregate to two thousand one hundred and seventy-five ($2,175) dollars, and recommended that eighteen ($18.75) dollars and seventy-five cents should be deducted from this sum for damage done to said cotton before its use by the United States.

The said report was disapproved by Major-General Rosecrans, on the ground that the cotton had increased in value during the period of its detention by the United States.

VI. The said firm of Thomas F. Youngs & Co. was subsequently dissolved. It is believed that in the settlement of its affairs the said claim became the property of Thomas F. Youngs. Moreover, it appears that Byam K. Stevens made an assignment of his interest in it to one Chapman, and the said Chapman subsequently assigned it to Thomas F. Youngs.

VII. The said Thomas F. Youngs died in the year 1884, and the claimants have duly received letters testamentary as executrices of his estate.

VIII. No assignment or transfer of this claim, or any part thereof, or interest therein, has been made, except as hereinbefore stated.

The claimants and the said Thomas F. Youngs and the said Byam K. Stevens and the said Joseph H. Chapman have at all times borne true allegiance to the United States and have not in any way voluntarily aided, abetted, or given encouragement to rebellion against the said Government.

The claimants are justly entitled to the amount herein claimed, after allowing all just credits and offsets, and she believes the facts stated in this petition to be true.

This claim has been referred to this court by the Committee of War Claims of the House of Representatives, under the Bowman Act.

Your petitioners therefore pray that it may be reported to Congress that they are entitled, as executrices aforesaid, to the sum of two thousand one hundred and fifty-six ($2,156.50) dollars and fifty cents.

On the thirty-first day of May, 1888, personally appeared before me Fannie H. Youngs, one of the subscribers to the above petition and made oath that the matters and things in the above petition set forth are true to the best of her knowledge, information, and belief.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto subscribed my name and affixed my notarial seal.

[Court of Claims. Congressional Case No. 752. Reformed Church, Sharpsburgh, Washington County Md., vs. The United States.]

At a Court of Claims held in the city of Washington on 31st day of May, 1887, the court filed the following:

FINDINGS OF FACT.

This case was referred to the Court of Claims April 19, 1886, by the Committee on War Claims of the House of Representatives under the provisions of the act of March 3, 1883 (22 Stat. L, p. 485), known as the "Bowman act."

May 24, 1887, the case was heard by the court; P. E. Dye, esq., appearing for the claimants, and Lewis Cochran, esq., assistant attorney for the United States.

The petition of the claimants set forth that they have a claim against the United States for rent of their church for a United States hospital after the battle of Antietam, in 1862, and for property taken by and used for the Hospital Department of the United States in the months of August, September, October, November, and December, 1862, and June and July, 1863, that their claim stated by items, is as follows:

1. For rent of church used as United States hospital for six months, at $70.	$420.00
2. For carpets used and expended, as replaced by Griffith & Co	31.25
3. For voucher, J. D. Middlekauff	60.00
4. For voucher, B. F. Cronise	73.83
5. For voucher, James Wilson	20.00
6. For voucher, B. F. Cronise	15.64
7. For voucher, Hiram S. Seiss, painting	110.00
8. For voucher, Snyder & Piper, fence	67.00
9. For voucher, Adam Smith, glass, etc	3.50
10. For voucher, Matthew Gray, washing	5.00
Total	806.22

Digitized by Google

This, in the opinion of the court, constitutes a claim "growing out of the destruction or damage to property by the Army or for use and occupation of real estate at the seat of war."

It appears from the evidence that after the battle of Antietam all the churches and vacant buildings in Sharpsburgh were taken possession of and used by the United States Army as hospitals for the wounded.

By the first clause of section 3, of the Bowman Act, the court is deprived of jurisdiction over such cases.

"The existence of an express or implied contract would be equally fatal to jurisdiction by the court, inasmuch as the last clause of section 3, of the Bowman Act withhold jurisdiction of any claim, * * * now barred by virtue of the provisions of any law of the United States," while section 1069, of the Revised Statutes, provides that "every claim cognizable by the Court of Claims shall be forever barred unless the petition setting forth a statement thereof, and filed in the court * * * within six years after the claim first accrued." If the claim were based on a contract, express or implied, it comes within the general jurisdiction of the court provided in section 1059 of the Revised Statutes.

The claim originated in 1862, and was therefore more than six years old on March 3, 1883.

The petition of the claimant is dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

The case having been brought to a hearing on the 10th day of December, 1888, on a motion by defendants to dismiss for want of jurisdiction, the court, upon the record and after considering the briefs and arguments of counsel on both sides, finds that the claim is for the use and occupation of certain real estate in New Orleans, La., by the forces of the United States Army under General Butler from the time said city was captured and taken possession of by said forces in April, 1862, to the close of the war of the rebellion, and that said use was in the operations of said military forces while occupying said territory as aforesaid.

And the court decides as a conclusion of law that it is without jurisdiction by reason of the provision of the third section of the Bowman Act (act of March 3, 1883), ch. 22, ch. 116 (22 Stat. L., p. 485), which enacts "that the jurisdiction of said court (of claims) shall not extend to or include any claim against the United States * * * for the use and occupation of real estate by any part of the military or naval forces of the United States in the operation of said forces during said war (of the rebellion) at the seat of war." The motion is allowed, and the claimant's case and petition is dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

On a preliminary inquiry the court on the 21st day of March, 1887, found that the person alleged to have furnished the supplies or stores, or from whom they were alleged to have been taken, was loyal to the Government of the United States throughout said war.

The case having been brought to a hearing on its merits on the 20th day of March, 1888, the court upon the evidence, and after considering the briefs and arguments of counsel on both sides, finds the facts to be as follows:

I.

The said decedent during the late war resided in Fayette County, Tenn.

II.

It is alleged by said claimant that at different times during said war the military forces of the United States for their use took from said decedent stores and supplies of the value of $5,256.50. The said claim was presented to the Commissary-General under the act of Congress approved July 4, 1864, and by said officer disallowed on the ground that said officer was not convinced of the justice of the claim.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE BOARD OF MANAGERS OF THE NATIONAL HOME FOR DISABLED VOLUNTEER SOLDIERS, FOR THE FISCAL YEAR ENDING JUNE 30, 1890.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives in Congress assembled:

The Board of Managers of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers makes the following report of that institution for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890.

During the year there have been two vacancies caused by death, viz, General John A. Martin, ex-governor of Kansas, second vice president of the Board, who died on October 2, 1889, and General John F. Hartranft, ex-governor of Pennsylvania, who died on October 17, 1889. These vacancies were noted and remarked upon in the last annual report.

A third vacancy is caused by the death of Colonel Leonard A. Harris, of Ohio, first vice president of the Board, who died July 5, 1890, just after the end of the fiscal year. The loss to the Board of Managers and to the Home by the death of Colonel Harris is exceedingly grave.

He had served on the Board for twelve years. He gave to his duties the strictest attention, and his experience in the conduct of similar institutions, his extreme sympathy for the disabled soldiers, his business qualifications, and his administrative experience as the mayor of Cincinnati, joined to his long service on the Board of Managers, cause his loss to be a particularly severe one for the Board. His genial disposition and ready wit had endeared him to every member of the Board.

The terms of the three members above mentioned would have expired on April 21, 1894. It is respectfully recommended that the vacancies be filled.

The terms of W. B. Franklin, of Connecticut; J. C. Black, of Illinois; and T. W. Hyde, of Maine, expired on April 21, 1890. These vacancies also should be filled, although by the terms of the organic law of the Home the present incumbents serve until their successors are appointed by Congress.

The ordinary duties of the Board have been performed during the year, and the branches of the Home have been visited and inspected, and the accounts audited and examined as required by law.

The supplies of the Home have been purchased by contract with the lowest bidders. They have been of excellent quality. The materials for bedding and clothing have been procured in the same way, and have been made up by the labor of the members and their families. The members have been comfortably clothed, housed, and fed, and no complaints have been made on these matters, except as to food. These complaints, as well as all others, have been few in number, and when made were investigated by the Board, and when found to be well founded the correction has been immediately applied.

NEW BRANCHES.

Four barracks of the Marion (Indiana) branch of the Home were sufficiently completed in April last to justify their occupation by disabled soldiers, and the number present at that branch at the end of the fiscal year was 405. This occupation, although the branch was in a crude and unfinished state, was a great relief to the overcrowded older branches.

By the end of the fiscal year two other barracks were virtually finished, making six in all.

Congress has appropriated in the act, approved August 30, 1890, for this branch, for two additional barracks, a hospital, mess hall, storehouse, and laundry, the sum of $108,500. All of these buildings are under contract and the work has been commenced. They will be completed by September 15, 1891. This branch will then be capable of caring for over one thousand members.

By the same act there was appropriated by Congress, for the Pacific branch, the sum of $132,500 for hospital, mess hall, waterworks, a barrack, headquarters, and library. These works will all be commenced during the fall and will be completed within a year. The capacity of this branch will then be sufficient for about 900 men.

MEMBERSHIP.

The average number present in the whole National Home for the year ending June 30, 1889, was 11,727. For the year ending June 30, 1890, the corresponding number was 12,935, an increase of 1,208, or 10.30 per cent. The average present and absent for the same time was 16,383, and the whole number cared for was 19,372. The average number present in the State homes for the year ending June 30, 1890, was 4,516, so that there was an average number of 17,451 soldiers supported for the year in the national and State homes.

The deaths during the same years in the National Home were, for 1889, 793, and for 1890, 847, an increase of 7 per cent.

The average age of the members cared for in the Home for the year is 57.32 years, and the average age of those who died was 59.79 years.

In the report of the Board of Managers for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, the following statement is made:

> The Board of Managers has in several reports called the attention of Congress to the fact that, as the management of the Home has been kept in the control of Congress, no other department of the Government is responsible for it, and consequently no department, bureau, or office in Washington is interested in its welfare. The whole business of the corporation is done by the Board of Managers, and the Board is anxious that its doings shall be carefully watched by Congress, and any mistakes that it may make be corrected by law. It therefore again respectfully invites such investigation of its proceedings and management as Congress may consider proper.

The House of Representatives of the Forty-eighth Congress, by resolution of May 26, 1884, authorized an investigation of the Home by the Committee on Military Affairs. In its report the committee states:

> The general spirit of the laws establishing these Homes exhibits the intention of our people. They are to be Homes for the country's defenders, not asylums for the helpless poor whom society, by the laws of its existence, is bound to support.

* * * * * * *

Digitized by Google

The Board of Managers is very clear and decided that in the local administration the inmates are to be made to feel that the Home is what the name implies, and not a poor house or military garrison.

* * * * * * *

If the policy of maintaining these Homes upon the basis of existing law is to be persevered in additional branches must be provided, and it is the conclusion of your committee that the maximum number of beneficiaries of the Homes will not be reached earlier than 1895.

No other investigation of the Home has been made by Congress, except that authorized by the House of Representatives of the Forty-first Congress, July 5, 1870.

Supplement to Revised Statutes of the United States, page 155, paragraph 4, requires the Board of Managers to furnish the Secretary of War on the 1st day of August (since altered to the 1st day of October) estimates in detail for the support of the Home for the next fiscal year, and directs the Secretary of War to include the estimates in those for the War Department. It also directs that no money shall be drawn from the Treasury for the use of the Home except on quarterly estimates and on quarterly requisitions by the Board of Managers upon the Secretary of War based on such estimates, for the support of the Home for a time not exceeding one quarter. It also directs the Board of Managers to render quarterly accounts of its receipts and expenditures to the Secretary of War. These laws have been faithfully obeyed.

Since 1880 three new branches of the Home have been established and the accommodations of the Home have been so much enlarged that the average number of members present has increased from 5,603 in 1880 to 12,935 in 1890. Whether the policy of enlarging the capacity of the Home is good or bad, Congress is responsible for it, and the laws authorizing all of the three additional branches were initiated by the proper committees of Congress.

It has been stated, to show the extravagance of management of the National Home, that a Confederate Home in one of the States is supported for $125 per man per annum, and that persons in the same State who are indigent are supported as well as the disabled soldiers are supported in the National Home for $100 per annum.

Any statement based upon the theory that the National Home should be supported at no greater cost than are asylums for the indigent is misleading, and tends to degrade the crippled veterans of the Home. The Home is not for paupers too indolent or degraded to work for their own living. It is for men who, in their careers as healthy, able-bodied men, have been halted by wounds or diseases, in the vast majority of cases, caused by their service to the country. They should not be ground down in the Home furnished by their country's gratitude to the same cost of living as that in a poorhouse. In the language of the committee above quoted, the members "are made to feel that the Home is what the name implies, and not a poorhouse."

So the Board of Managers has had pride in feeding, clothing, and housing the members of the Home with the liberal allowance turned over to it by Congress, so that every member may feel that in belonging to it he is receiving a grateful appreciation from his country and that he is really "at home." Congress has in express terms annually appropriated money "for necessary expenditures, for articles of amusement, boats, library books, magazines, papers, pictures, and musical instruments, librarians, and musicians," and this fact alone shows that it has been its intention to provide liberally for these "wards of the nation," and makethem as happy as possible under their painful circumstances, and not to make a meager allowance, merely sufficient to keep body and soul together.

The reports of the Branches show that, so far as the funds will permit, theatrical and musical entertainments and lectures are given to the members free, in halls built with their own money.

Reading rooms are furnished at each Branch, in which magazines and newspapers from all parts of the country are furnished, and libraries in which books interesting to the members are placed. There are also rooms in which various games are played.

There are many other conditions about the Branches that show that they are homes, and not asylums in the ordinary meaning of the term.

The most cursory inspection of any one of them by an unprejudiced person will convince him that it is an institution in which the health, moral and physical, the self-respect, and comfort of the members are consulted as much as possible.

These objects can not be attained at the rate of $100 per man per annum, or for any sum near that amount.

The financial statistics of the Home show that the average annual cost of maintenance of each member of the Home, beginning with the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880 (that being the first year in which the accounts correspond with the official fiscal year), and including the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, is $135.85. This amount includes all expenses except those of construction, which are not properly chargeable to maintenance. Table K, on page 25, contains the statistics from which this information is obtained.

These statements can be proved or disproved by a Congressional investigation. But it is not likely that any material diminution of annual cost per man can be made. On the contrary, it is the opinion of the Board from careful observation that the expenses must increase. Until lately the labor of all kinds in the Home has been done by the members, but their increasing infirmities in many cases make idleness compulsory, however willing they may be to work.

Civilians at materially higher rates of pay must now be employed and their number will increase. All hospital attendance and nurses have been taken from the members until within a year. Now the experiment of employing women nurses is in course of trial, with every prospect of making it a success, but at an increased cost.

The hospitals, too, are continually increasing in size, and number of patients and the cost of maintenance of men in hospital is much greater than that of those outside for obvious reasons.

As the members grow older changes in diet must be made, which may or may not increase the cost of ration.

AID TO STATE AND TERRITORIAL HOMES.

The act of Congress approved March 2, 1889, appropriated $300,000 for aid to these Homes, coupled with the proviso that no State under this appropriation should be paid a sum exceeding one-half the cost of maintenance of each soldier or sailor by such State.

The sum of $296,881.96 has been paid the various States under this appropriation, being the whole amount appropriated, less $3,118.04, the cost of executing the law. There has also been paid the States, under the urgent deficiency act, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1889, the sum of $44,272.39, so that the whole sum paid for aid to State Homes in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, is $344,272.39. Table L, page 25, gives the details of this disbursement. From this it appears that an average of 4,516 men were supported at these Homes for that fiscal year, and that the amount due the States on this account was $378,704.38. There is, therefore, due the sum of $81,822.62, which is a deficiency, and for which an appropriation will be asked at the proper time. The average annual cost of these Homes is $167.74 for each man. The most costly is that of Nebraska, whose annual cost for each man is $268.40, and the least costly is that of New York, whose annual cost for each man is $139.46.

PENSIONS.

Although 6,649 of the members of the Home are already pensioners, as shown by table N, page 33, the time is not far distant when every member will probably be a pensioner under the operation of existing law.

The Board of Managers is required by the law to pay to each pensioner the whole amount of his pension, under such regulations as the Board may establish. It is therefore necessary to have a personal account kept with each pensioner, involving a good deal of clerical work, and the increased number of pensioners will materially increase this work.

The question as to what amount of pension should determine a man's admissibility to the Home is one that for good reasons should be left indeterminate.

The table of contents indicates the reports of the various Branches for the fiscal year. The governors have given their impressions to the effect of the sale of beer in the Branches to the members upon the morals and discipline of the Home, and attention is particularly called to the governors' statements. They are unanimous in opinion that the sale of beer to the members in the Home benefits them physically and morally, enables them to save a little money for their families, and injures the illicit grogshops just outside the limits of the Branches. The Board has given up all hope of breaking up these vile dens, which spring up like poisonous weeds. Prosecutions are of no avail; when one grogshop is closed others kept by worse men, are at once started.

A detailed report of the inspection of the National and State Homes has been made by General W. W. Averell, assistant inspector-general, and is appended to this report.

The table of contents contains all information necessary for an easy reference to all tables, reports, etc., transmitted with this report.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE BOARD OF MANAGERS OF THE NATIONAL HOME FOR DISABLED VOLUNTEER SOLDIERS, JULY 9, 1889.

BOSTON, July 9, 1889.

The Board met in regular quarterly session at the Brunswick Hotel, at 11 a. m.

Present: Col. L. A. Harris, first vice president; General John A. Martin, second vice president; General M. T. McMahon, secretary; General John C. Black, General Thomas W. Hyde, General William J. Sewell, Col. John L. Mitchell, General John F. Hartranft.

In the absence of the president of the Board, Col. L. A. Harris, first vice president, presided.

Letters were read from the President of the United States and the Secretary of War explaining that official duties prevented their attending the meeting.

The minutes of the last meeting were submitted and approved.

The acting president submitted estimates for the quarter ending September 30, 1889, which, after careful revision, were agreed upon as follows:

Central Branch:
General	$197,445.25
Commissary building	7,768.00
		$205,213.25
Northwestern Branch:
General	66,748.29

Improvement roads	200.00
		57,970.21
Southern Branch:
General	89,528.77
Extension dining room	9,000.00
		98,528.77
Western Branch:
General	73,925.29
Completing quarters	833.60
Paint shop	1,383.00
		76,141.89
Pacific Branch:
Maintenance		22,500.00
Marion Branch:
Construction		75,000.00
Aid to State Homes		100,000.00
Outdoor relief and incidental expenses		7,878.75
Total		$710,981.16

Whereupon the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That the Board of Managers of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers estimate and appropriate out of the moneys which may be provided by law the sum of $710,981.16 as necessary to meet the current expenses of the six branches of the National Home for the quarter ending September 30, 1889, and for construction and repairs, aid to State homes, outdoor relief, and incidental expenses of the National Home; and that the acting treasurer be and he is hereby authorized and empowered to take such means as may be necessary to obtain the sum of $710,981.16 from the Treasury of the United States, and to receipt therefor in the name and behalf of the National Home.

On motion of General Black, it was resolved that the special estimate of $9,000 submitted for extension of the dining hall at the Southern Branch be referred to General W. J. Sewell, local manager, with power to expend said sum, if, in his judgment, it seems advisable.

On motion of General Sewell, it was resolved that $5,000 be added to the appropriation for subsistence at the Southern Branch for the quarter ending September 30, 1889, to be applied in payment of existing indebtedness contracted in previous quarters on account of subsistence.

On motion of General Black it was resolved that the sum of $1,383 be appropriated for a paint shop at the Western Branch, and ordered to be included in the estimates.

On motion it was resolved that the governor of the Northwestern Branch be directed to notify General Jacob Sharpe, late governor of the Home, that the quarters now occupied by him at the Home are required for the use of the commissary of subsistence.

The acting president announced the resignation of R. H. Grube, first assistant surgeon at the Central Branch.

On motion the resignation was accepted and W. H. Negley, present second assistant surgeon, was appointed first assistant surgeon, and the acting president authorized to appoint a second assistant surgeon for that branch, subject to the confirmation of the Board.

The acting president reported that, under authority heretofore given by the Board, he had appointed Capt. W. W. Rowley, commissary of subsistence at the Northwestern Branch.

A vote being taken the action of the acting president was confirmed, and Captain Rowley duly elected commissary of subsistence at that branch.

Application from Surgeon McIlvaine, assistant surgeon of the Northwestern Branch, for increase of salary, was presented to the Board, and referred to the acting president for report at the next meeting.

The application of the surgeon of the Northwestern Branch to be allowed two internes in the hospital at that Branch was referred to the local manager, with power.

Colonel Mitchell offered the following resolution, which was adopted:

Resolved, That $1,000 be appropriated from the post fund of the Northwestern Branch for the purchase of steam heating apparatus, organ, etc., for the new chapel; this amount to be expended under the direction of the local manager.

The account of Colonel Mendell, U. S. A., of $400 for services rendered to the Board in connection with the water supply at the Pacific Branch was presented by the acting president and ordered to be paid out of the improvement fund of that Branch.

The acting president brought before the Board the matter of the compensation of Mr. Llufrio, a clerk in the Auditor's office, Washington, who appeared as a witness in the case of the Home against General B. F. Butler.

A communication from the Second Comptroller was read to the Board, and, after full consideration, it was resolved that the secretary of the Board be directed to bring the matter again to the attention of the Second Comptroller, with a view to obtaining, if possible, a modification of his ruling in the premises.

General Sewell presented a contract for the supply of water at the Southern Branch, which was read and ordered on the minutes, as follows:

Whereas William B. Franklin, President of the Board of Directors for the Southern Branch of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, and William J. Sewell, local manager of the same, have been empowered by the Board of Managers of the aforesaid Southern Branch Home, to enter into negotiations with the Hampton Water Company for the supply of the said Home with water (see page 224 of the printed minutes of the proceedings of the said Board of Managers at the November meeting, A. D. 1888);

Now, therefore, this indenture, made this 1st day of July, 1889, between William Thompson, treasurer of the Southern Branch of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, party of the first part, and the Hampton Water Company, as is evidenced by the signatures of C. T. Holtzclaw, president, and H. R. Booker, secretary, of the said company; and also by the seal of the said company being affixed thereto, party of the second part;

Witnesseth, That the said Hampton Water Company, for, and in consideration of the yearly sum of $6,000, doth covenant and agree with the said party of the first part, that it, the said party of the second part, shall and will supply the said Southern Branch Home with water from their system of gang wells, located east of the said Home, connecting with the water-main of the said Home, and delivering in the said Home, under pressure, 200,000 gallons of potable water per day. And for any additional quantity above the said number of gallons, the said company agrees to supply the same, at the rate of 10 cents per 1,000 gallons, payable as the said party of the first part may elect. And the said party of the second part doth hereby further covenant and agree to and with the said first party, that the pressure under which the said water shall be delivered shall be sufficient to supply every part of, and throw a fire stream on the roof of, any building of the said Home which is now, or shall at any time during the continuance of these presents be erected on the grounds of the said Home.

And the said party of the first part, in his capacity of treasurer of the said Home, for and in consideration of the above-named covenants, made by the said party of the second part, doth covenant and agree that he will well and truly pay to the said Hampton Water Company the yearly sum aforesaid, viz, the sum of $6,000, for the period to be determined by the circumstances and agreements hereinafter set forth, that is to say:

Should Congress make the necessary appropriations for the support of the branch of the Home at Hampton, Va., from year to year, this contract shall be renewed for one year, from the 1st day of July, 1890, and yearly for four years thereafter, so that the whole term for which the terms of this agreement shall last will be five years, from the 1st day of July, 1889. Should Congress fail to appropriate money for the support of the Branch of the said Home, situated at Hampton, Va., at any time, then, and in that case neither the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, nor any person connected with it, nor the above-named first party to these presents, shall be liable for any payment under this agreement for such time not appropriated for. Nor shall this contract be binding as against the National Home for a longer time than one year beginning on July 1 of that year.

The said rental of $6,000 per annum shall be payable quarterly, and shall begin when the governor of the said Home shall certify in writing that the plant is in satisfactory operation, and the covenants of this agreement in so far, as may be, complied with.

Should the full supply herein contracted to be furnished fail at any time a proportionate reduction from the yearly rental shall be made for each and every failure, said deduction to be made from the quarterly payment next due after the said failure of the said second party; but if the supply contracted to be furnished fail for a longer time than thirty days, all rights of the said Hampton Water Company under this contract shall cease, and they shall be entitled to claim no compensation whatever under this contract.

And it is hereby further expressly agreed that omission on the part of the said Home to enforce the terms of the foregoing paragraphs shall give the Hampton Water Company no right to claim cancellation of the contract, or any concession not herein set forth.

Witness the hands and seals of the parties the day and year first above written.

M. T. MCMAHON.

The secretary presented a communication from Messrs. Van Doraten and Green, attorneys for the assignee of H. C. Darbey, for money claimed to be due said Darbey on contract with the Home at the Western Branch. The communication was read, and on motion was referred to the local manager of said Branch for such disposition as in his judgment the case may require.

On motion of Colonel Harris it was resolved that the Branch of the Home about to be constructed at Marion, Grant County, Ind., be known as the "Marion Branch" of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers.

On motion of Colonel Harris, the Board authorized the dedication of a strip of land on the north side of the tract acquired for the Marion Branch of the Home, for a public avenue.

General Martin offered the following resolution, which was adopted:

Resolved, That, as soon as possible after the adjournment of any meeting of the Board of Managers at which allowances for quarterly expenditures are made, the president be instructed to communicate to the governor of each Branch a statement of the allowances so made, and for what purpose.

General McMahon presented the following resolution, which was adopted:

Resolved, That a new commissary building be constructed at the Central Branch, at a cost not to exceed $32,250, and that upon the completion of said building the commissary building now in use be converted into a restaurant, and the cost thereof paid from the store fund and applied to the construction account of the new building herein authorized.

The Board thereupon took a recess and proceeded to the Eastern Branch, at Togus, Me.

TOGUS, ME., July 10, 1889.

The Board reconvened at the Eastern Branch and proceeded to the usual inspection of the members, quarters, hospital, grounds, etc.

On motion of General Sewell, it was resolved that $5,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, from the store fund of the Southern Branch, when, in his judgment, it is in condition to permit such outlay, be appropriated for a restaurant at that Branch, said amount to be expended under the direction of the local manager.

On motion of General Hyde, it was resolved that $600, or so much thereof as may be necessary, be appropriated from the construction fund for a second story on the restaurant at the Eastern Branch, to be used, when completed, as barracks.

General Black offered the following resolution, which was adopted:

Resolved, That Sergeant Wall, at the Eastern Branch, be suspended from duty, and that an investigation be made by General Hyde and Assistant Inspector-General Averell of his conduct, in view of certain charges made by members, in person, before the Board.

General Martin offered the following resolution, which was adopted:

Resolved, That the governor of the Eastern Branch be directed, either in person or by some commissioned officer, to hold at the guardhouse each morning, not later than 9 o'clock, a court of inquiry, to pass upon all cases in which men are held in confinement or under punishment.

A committee of the selectmen of the town of Chelsea appeared before the Board, and made application for an appropriation of funds for the purpose of keeping the road used by the Home in said town in repair.

After discussion, on motion of Colonel Mitchell, it was resolved that the governor of the Eastern Branch be authorized to expend $200 on the road from Gardiner to the Home, in the town of Chelsea, in such manner as may be deemed advisable, provided that he is satisfied that the proper authorities of said town have contributed their full proportionate share for keeping the road in good condition.

Mr. Lewis, of Gardiner, Me., appeared before the Board in relation to a proposed narrow-gauge road from Gardiner to the Home grounds, and requested an appropriation in aid thereof.

After full discussion, on motion of General Hyde, it was—

Resolved, That the president of the Board be authorized to contract with the proprietors of the narrow-gauge railroad, when built from Gardiner to the Home, for the transportation of freight, coal, etc., for the term of five years, at a price not to exceed the present cost to the Home of such transportation, and upon such other terms as he may deem for the best interests of the Home.

On motion of General Sewell, it was resolved that the local manager of the Southern Branch be authorized, in his discretion, to introduce such telephone connections at that Branch as may be deemed advisable.

On motion of General Black, it was resolved that when the Board adjourn it be to meet at the Central Branch, near Dayton, Ohio, September 18, 1889, at 11 a. m.

On motion of General Black, it was resolved that Assistant Inspector-General Bermingham be authorized and directed to make the necessary arrangements for the visit of the Board to the Pacific Branch during that meeting.

The acting president appointed the following committee to audit the accounts of the Northwestern Branch: General Black, General McMahon.

General Martin offered the following resolution, which was adopted:

Resolved, That all noncommissioned officers and clerks serving in the treasury, commissary, or medical departments of the several Branches of the Home shall be nominated by the respective heads of such departments to the governor for appointment.

The acting president presented a proposition by the makers of certain notes given to secure the improvement fund at the Pacific Branch, to sell to the Home certain additional lands adjoining those already acquired at that Branch, the price thereof to be applied on such notes.

A letter was read from Inspector-General Brown recommending that 20 acres of such additional land be acquired by the Home for use as a cemetery.

After full discussion, on motion of General Martin, the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That the acting president of the Board be authorized to accept in payment of two certain notes, one overdue and the other about to mature, made to the Home by or on behalf of the donors of the lands occupied by the Pacific Branch, near Santa Monica, Cal., the 20 additional acres of land adjoining the Home grounds, at the rate of $333.33 per acre.

The acting president presented the appeal of Surgeon Wever, of the Western Branch, from the action of the governor of that Branch in ordering the return of a member to the hospital who had been discharged therefrom by the surgeon.

After full discussion by the Board, on motion of General Black, it was resolved that the appeal, with the accompanying papers, be referred to the acting president with instructions to communicate the views of the Board as expressed during such discussion to the parties in interest.

On motion of General Sewell it was resolved that the acting president appoint a committee of two members of the Board to visit Washington for the purpose of consulting with the Second Comptroller of the Treasury in regard to certain accounts held under suspension.

The secretary presented the bond of the treasurer of the Pacific Branch, which, upon motion, was approved and ordered to be filed.

General Hyde, from the committee appointed to investigate the conduct of Police Sergeant Wall, reported that the committee had taken testimony in the case, and, after full investigation, found that the charges were wholly unfounded, and that the acting president of the Board had received the report of the committee and relieved the sergeant from suspension.

The Board then proceeded to the consideration of applications for readmission, remission of penalties, and for effects of deceased members, and made the following orders:

President of the Board announced the death of General John A. and of General John F. Hartranft, late members of the Board.

President of the Board submitted the following letter, addressed to the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations of the of Representatives; which, on motion, was approved and ordered minutes.

THE NATIONAL HOME FOR DISABLED VOLUNTEER SOLDIERS,
Hartford, Conn., December 13, 1889.

transmit with this a copy of the estimates of the National Home for Disa-unteer Soldiers for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1891, as given in the book ates, with explanatory remarks upon the various items of expenditures. aper has been required by your committee for the last two or three years. supplemented by another estimate which contains the same items and the ounts in a consolidated form. It is respectfully recommended that the ap-ions be made in this form for the National Home as a unit, rather than by s. The reasons for recommending this change are given in the report of the Managers for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1889, and are as follows:

"The members of the Home wish at times to change their residences, and ask transferred from one Branch to another. Their requests are always granted u there be some reason why the transfer should not be made. Such reason may be the Branch to which they wish to be transferred has already its full membersh justified by the appropriation, or there may be some reason personal to the man, as his health, as certified by the surgeon, or his inability to pay the cost of tra

"The Board is sometimes embarrassed from the fact that the changes in the ber of the members who go away from or return to the various Branches of the seemed to be governed by no rule except the fancy of the men. For this reaso appropriation for one Branch is often so seriously drawn upon that great car seeming stinginess must be practiced to make the appropriation last throug year. In other Branches in the same year the appropriation would answer for men than are actually present during the year. To avoid this sort of embarrass it is respectfully recommended that hereafter, instead of appropriating for the tenance of the Branches separately, as is now the method, the estimates be ma they are now for each Branch, and that they be then consolidated and the appro tion be made for the maintenance of the whole membership in one account for item of expenditure. Should this change be made, the Board will be enabled make its quarterly appropriations for maintenance that all of the Branches will the same footing as regards the annual appropriations, and the difficulty due to t crease and diminution of members in any Branch can be at once obviated. The average number of members now present and absent for the year, viz, 14,889, a ber nearly equal to that of the whole Army as it exists to-day, and which wi crease for some time, and the varying number of members of the Branches, a plained above, are—in the opinion of the Board—good reasons for the change i method of appropriating for the annual maintenance."

Under the existing law, with the appropriations made by Branches, there are at forty-eight separate items that the Board of Managers must look out for consta as there is always danger that the branches may overrun the appropriations. B system recommended there will be only eight such items, and the Board, wh makes its quarterly appropriations, can always keep them within such amounts there will be no possibility that it can be embarrassed by a careless or ineff treasurer, and can always increase or diminish the amounts appropriated by it to form to the greater or less requirements of each Branch.

The same system is in force in the Army and Navy, in which there are bod men at various places, whose numbers continually change. If the system worka with them it should work well in the National Home, which institution has no command of the clerical and other force that these bodies have.

Another reason for the change is, it will simplify the procural of clothing, bed medical stores, etc., which can always be better purchased by contract for the Home than they can be for each Branch separately.

The cost of each Branch will be quite as much under the control of Congress is now, as the Board of Managers in each annual report gives the cost of each Br for the preceding fiscal year, and the estimates for each Branch before consolid will show approximately its contemplated cost.

Respectfully, yours,

W. B. FRANKLIN,

The President of the Board presented a resolution of the United States Senate, which was read and ordered on the minutes, as follows:

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES, January 6, 1890.

Resolved, That the Board of Managers of National Soldiers' Homes be directed to consider the advisability of the establishment of a hospital at Hot Springs, Ark., to which all disabled ex-Union soldiers shall be admitted on proper recommendation, and make early report thereon.

Attest: ANSON G. McCOOK,
Secretary.

On motion of General Sewell, the resolution was referred to General Black for report.

The President of the Board submitted certain correspondence in the matter of the Ward legacy and the decision of the high court of chancery thereon, which, on motion of General Black, was ordered on the minutes:

11 PANCRAS LANE, E. C., LONDON, 17*th October*, 1889.

WARD v. McKEWAN.

DEAR SIR: As I promised, I have had the papers herein looked up, and send you herewith—

(1) Extracts from will of Horatio Ward, setting out the terms of the legacy to the National Soldiers and Sailors' Home;
(2) Decree of Vice Chancellor Sir John Stuart;
(3) His chief clerk's certificate;
(4) Affidavit of Henry B. Hammond, answering inquiry No. 9 of the decree; and
(5) Decree on further consideration, Vice Chancellor Sir John Stuart finding the National Asylum for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers at Washington was entitled to the legacy.

And which I hope will answer your correspondent's purpose. I can, of course, and shall be pleased to furnish you with full copies of the above or any other documents you may wish for.

Your informants are in error as to the nature of the chancery proceedings. There was no dispute as to the bequest; the action was the ordinary one for the administration of the estate (of the late Horatio Ward) under the direction of the high court of chancery, and the inquiry was then directed as to which institution was entitled to the bequest.

My charges for letters, searches, and copy extracts, etc., are £4 10s. 6d., as per inclosed account, and for which I shall be pleased to receive a check.

I am, dear sir, yours, truly,

GILBERT ROBINS.

In pursuance of the directions given to me by the vice chancellor, Sir John Stuart, I hereby certify that the result of the accounts and enquiries which have been taken and made in pursuance of the decree made in this cause, dated the 7th day of December, 1867, is as follows:

"The plaintiff and defendants and Baillie Peyton Ward and Osbert Ward, infants, by Virginia Ward, widow, their guardian, under order dated the 4th February, 1868, and Alfred Ward, under order the 21st of January, 1870, have attended by their respective solicitors.

"The said Alfred Ward, Baillie Peyton Ward, and Osbert Ward attending, respectively, under orders as aforesaid, are (together with the plaintiff) the residuary legatees of the testator, Horatio Ward.

9. The charity named or styled The Washington National Asylum for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, mentioned as number 1 in the fifth Schedule hereto, is the charity or institution intended by the National Soldiers and Sailors' Home about to be erected at Washington in conformity with the act of Congress of last session. The persons entitled to receive such legacy are the President of the United States and other persons named in the said schedule, being the trustees of the said institution.

The evidence consists of the affidavit of Henry B. Hammond, filed the 8th day of April, 1869, and the probate of the testator's will.

Affidavit of Henry B. Hammond, esq., filed 8th April, 1869, says:

That he is a resident of the city, county, and State of New York, United States of America, and there engaged as a lawyer in the practice of his profession.

That he has been commissioned to make the following enquiries named in a decree made in the above entitled action on the 7th day of December, 1867, and contained in the 9th and 10th items thereof, to wit:

An enquiry what charity or institution was intended by the following description in the said (meaning the will of the late Horatio Ward) will, namely, "The National Soldiers and Sailors' Home," "about to be erected at Washington in conformity with an act of Congress passed last session," and if there be any such charity or institution, who is or are the treasurer or trustee thereof, or other the person or persons duly authorised to receive the legacy by the said will bequeathed thereto.

An inquiry what charity or institution or charities or institutions was or were intended by the following description in the said will, namely, "The various asylums or houses that have been formed or may be formed within a year throughout the loyal States for the orphans by the late war for the restoration of the Union," and if there be any such charity or institution or charities or institutions, who are the respective treasurers or trustees thereof, or other the person or persons duly authorized to receive the legacy by the said will bequeathed thereto respectively.

That he has ascertained the following facts relating to said inquiries:

That the only institution at Washington within the meaning of the first enquiry is "The National Asylum for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers," which was organized under an act of Congress approved March 21, 1866.

That a copy of such charter, by-laws, and annual report, together with the affidavit of the president of such institution, the honorable Benjamin F. Butler, showing who are the executive officers of said institution and who of the same are entitled to receive legacies are hereto annexed marked Exhibit "A."

That the following States, 26 in number, are the so-called loyal States of the United States of America: California, Connecticut, Delaware, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont, West Virginia, and Wisconsin.

That of the aforementioned States California, Delaware, Kansas, Kentucky, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, Ohio, Oregon, Rhode Island, and West Virginia have no asylums or institutions strictly for the orphans by the late war for the restoration of the Union.

That of the said loyal States of the United States Connecticut, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Maine, Maryland, Missouri, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, and Wisconsin have each one or more such asylums or institutions.

In the State of Connecticut there are two, "The Fitch Home for Soldiers" and the "Connecticut Soldiers' Orphans' Home."

In the State of Illinois there is but one, "The Illinois Soldiers' Orphans' Home."

In Iowa one, "The Iowa Soldiers' Orphans' Home."

In Maine there is one, "The Bath Military and Naval Orphan Asylum."

In the State of Maryland there are two, "The Union Orphan Asylum" and the "Shelter for Orphans of Colored Soldiers."

In Missouri there is one, "The Soldiers' Orphans' Home of St. Louis."

In Jersey one, "The New Jersey Home for Soldiers' Children."

In New York there are two, "The Patriot Orphan Home" and "The Union Home for Orphans of Volunteers."

In Pennsylvania there are three, "The Lincoln Institution of Philadelphia," "The National Orphans' Home" at Gettysburgh, and "The Soldiers' Orphans' Home of Pittsburg."

In Wisconsin there is one, "The Soldiers' Orphans' Home of the State of Wisconsin;" and

In Indiana there is one, "The Indiana Soldiers and Seamans' Home."

That in many of the States there are asylums or homes which provide for the orphans of soldiers and sailors with other orphans, but were not organized expressly for such and do not come within the enquiry heretofore made.

That this deponent has obtained this information by correspondence with the governors and secretaries of states, the different officers of said asylums or homes, by publishing for the same in the most prominent newspapers in each of the loyal States of the United States and by the various documents hereto annexed marked Exhibits B, C, D, E, F, G, H, I, J, K, L, M, N, O, P, Q.

General Black presented the following resolution, which was adopted:

Whereas there are now two barracks completed and ready for occupancy at the Marion Branch of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, which barracks have a united capacity for accommodating three hundred men; and

Whereas there are more applicants now for admission than the remaining barracks of all the branches of the Home can hold; and

Whereas said remaining barracks are overcrowded, and applications for admission are necessarily denied; and

Whereas there is no appropriation now available for the use of said Branch:

Resolved, That the president of the Board be requested to submit these facts to the Congress of the United States, and to ask that the sum of $40,000 be appropriated and made immediately available for all necessary purposes of subsistence, hospital, transportation, etc., for said Marion Branch, said money to be accounted for as are the moneys now severally appropriated for the remaining branches of the Home and subject to all the restrictions and requirements as to the expenditures of said various other appropriations.

JOHN A. MARTIN, of the Board of Managers National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, home in Atchison, Kans., on the 2d day of October, 1889, in the fiftieth age. He was a native of Pennsylvania, but in early life became a citizen when that State was engaged in its historical territorial struggles for ar of 1861–'65 he became a soldier, and for four years followed the flag of lic on some of the most lustrous fields of that era of mighty struggle and battle. He felt in his own person the pains and perils of war; he nobly d zealously strove for the prosperity and unity of the nation, and while ling won the eagles of a colonel and the brevet rank of brigadier-general States volunteers. His soldiers loved and his fellow officers honored him.

JOHN F. HARTRANFT.

On the 17th of October, 1889, John F. Hartranft, a member of this Board, died at Norristown, Pa., his home, in the presence of his family and friends, in the sixtieth year of his honorable age.

He had been associated with us for the period of one year and three months, but his services for the public and for his country had been continuous for almost twenty-eight years preceding, and their united worth and brilliancy shed a lustre about his name that will make it a conspicuous one in the annals of his State while the transactions of this generation are held in honorable esteem.

In the struggles of the great war for the preservation of the Union he took a brave and worthy part East and West; and on the shores of the Potomac, on the heights of the Tennessee, and again in the grapple for the possession of Petersburgh and Richmond, everywhere, when called by duty and patriotism, he made a manly, conspicuous place for himself and his men.

In the final hours he and his command were in the foremost line.

On the return of peace, his great State, Pennsylvania, extended him high honors. He was thrice chosen accountant, and thus was evidenced his fellow-citizens' trust in his capacity and fidelity. He was twice their governor, and thus they witnessed their affection and regard. He was their choice in a great civic contest for the Chief Magistracy, and then she showed her pride and placed her shield beneath the feet of her volunteer and lifted him to the national gaze.

Despite this high career he entered our Board, simple, docile, kind, and modest as a little child. He found speedy and honored place at our council board and room in all our hearts. His voice lent wisdom and his presence gave dignity to our deliberations. His ear was open to the poor, and the voice of comradeship reached and woke the tender echoes of his heart. We join in the public grief, and beg to share that private sorrow that widow and children hold sacred for him, the husband, father, patriot, and civil chief—gone from glory to glory, and from strife to God.

The application for admission to the Home of James H. Cook, late Company E, Second Wisconsin Cavalry, after discussion, was referred to the president of the Board, with power.

The application of the bandmaster of the Western Branch for quarters on the Home grounds was referred to the president of the Board, with power.

General Hyde offered the following resolution; which, on his motion, was adopted:

Resolved, That an additional appropriation of $700 be made for the completion of the station and lunch room at the Eastern Branch, and that the entire sum of $2,200 be borrowed from the posthumous fund of said Branch; the same to be repaid from the post fund.

The secretary presented a new bond of Major Thompson, treasurer of the Southern Branch which, on motion, was approved by the Board.

Colonel Harris submitted the report of the investigation made at the Pacific Branch of certain charges preferred against the governor of that Branch; which was read, and, after discussion, on the motion of Colonel Harris, was referred to General Black and General McMahon for final report thereon:

During the recess of the Board its duly authorized members visited the Pacific and Western Branches of the National Home for the purpose of inspecting the same, hearing complaints of the members, and doing such other necessary and proper things under the law as the circumstances might warrant.

Arriving at Los Angeles Sunday morning, September 29, we proceeded at once, via Santa Monica, to the Pacific Branch. On Monday the members were notified of our arrival and requested not to absent themselves. Members at this Branch are permitted to go and come as they choose between roll calls. At the dinner hour on Tuesday the acting president notified the members of the time and place for hearing complaints, and invited all who felt that they had just cause of complaint to appear before the managers.

On the same day the hearing began and was continued until every member who had a complaint to make was heard.

The hearing was public; none were excluded except the officers of the Branch.

Thirty-eight complaining members appeared and testified; also others, who said

Indeed, it seems that all persons having authority to correct these uses and remove the cause were kept in profound ignorance of them.

apparent, for it takes some time for ornamental trees and plants to grow, even in the wonderful soil of California.

As it is confidently expected that there will be an abundance of water for irrigating purposes, the work that has been and will be done, provided we get a sufficient appropriation for this purpose, will make the grounds of the Pacific Branch a place of rare beauty, comparing favorably with any other grounds in beautiful southern California.

When the annual estimate is available work will be resumed, and substantial and commodious structures of the style of the present buildings will be erected for hospital, dining hall, headquarters, and library, pavilion at beach, additional barracks, etc. And it is the wish of the Board that an amusement hall may soon follow.

We have thus briefly given you the result of our inspection of the Pacific Branch, and our hopeful anticipations of its near future.

WESTERN BRANCH.

Stopped at this Branch on return trip, inspected it, and heard complaints.

A number of members appeared before us for favors, but few complained. The complaints were those incident to Home life, with which the Board is quite familiar. Remedies were applied when necessary, and favors granted when possible.

The men made a good appearance, and, with few exceptions, were clean and tidy.

The barracks, very much to the credit of the sergeants, were models of cleanliness and neatness. The hospital was in excellent condition, and compared favorably with any similar institution that we had ever seen, one of the members of the Board having had large experience in this direction.

The vitrified brickworks were in successful operation, and promise to add largely to the store fund, besides giving employment to members.

Respectfully submitted.

On motion of General Black it was resolved that the Board proceed to the Southern Branch, upon completing its business in Washington, for the purpose of making the annual inspection.

On motion of General McMahon the following resolution was adopted:

Be it resolved by the Board of Managers of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, That the award of damages made by the supervisors of the town of Wauwatosa, to wit, the sum of five ($5) dollars, on the 3d day of December, 1889, to the said National Home as and for the damages sustained by said National Home on account of the laying out of the highway, pursuant to the order of said Board of supervisors made on the 3d day of December, 1889, on and through that part of the property of said National Home known as the east half of section thirty-five (35), town seven (7), range twenty-one (21) east, as lies north of the right of way and the railroad track of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company, as the same is located in said section, be and the same is hereby accepted as full compensation and damages by reason of the laying out of said highway above mentioned.

On motion, it was resolved that when the Board adjourn it be to meet on the 8th of April next, in Washington.

The president of the Board appointed General Hyde and General Black to audit the accounts of the acting treasurer.

On motion, it was resolved that the governor of the Pacific Branch be authorized to sell beer to the members of the Home at that Branch, under such regulations and restrictions as have been heretofore established by the Board for other Branches, the proceeds thereof to accrue to the post fund.

The committee appointed to audit the accounts of the acting treasurer made the following report, which was received and ordered on the minutes:

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 21, 1890.

The undersigned have this day examined and audited the accounts of General W. B. Franklin, acting treasurer of the Board of managers of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, for the quarters ending 30th September and 31st December, 1889, and find the same correct and supported by proper vouchers.

The balance in his hands on the 31st December, 1889, was ten thousand two hundred and twenty-five $\frac{55}{100}$ dollars ($10,225.55) belonging to the general fund; ninety-seven thousand eight hundred and seventy-five dollars ($97,875.00) belonging to the Branch fund, and one hundred and ninety-one thousand one hundred and $\frac{83}{100}$ dollars ($191,112.83) belonging to the State aid fund. Total, two hun- d ninety-nine thousand two hundred and thirteen $\frac{38}{100}$ dollars ($299,213.38). ers Nos. 23 and 24, State aid fund, quarter ending 30th June, 1889, noted in f auditing committee dated 22nd September, 1889, as "missing," have also amined, audited, and found correct.

JOHN C. BLACK,
THOS. W. HYDE,
Committee.

eral Black, to whom was referred the resolution of the Senate of y 6, 1890, submitted a report, which, after discussion and ment, was adopted as follows:

ng to a resolution adopted by the Senate of the United States on the 6th • anuary, A. D. 1890, a copy of which is here inserted:

lved, That the Board of Managers of National Soldiers' Homes be directed to the advisability of the establishment of a hospital at Hot Springs, Arkan- which all disabled ex-Union soldiers shall be admitted on proper recom- on, and make early report thereon."

oard of Managers of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers have or to state:

ve considered the subject matter presented by said resolution. We are not as to the rights of the Government in the lands and waters at Hot Springs, ve as generally informed relative thereto, but believe them to be sovereign nsive, save where limited by lease soon to expire, or revocable at will, and re will be found no obstacle to the carrying out of any design that may he favorable action of the Congress of the United States.

he Board is unanimously of opinion that the establishment of a hospital at ngs, for the purpose indicated in the resolution, is in every respect advisable, ollowing reason:

31st of December, 1889, there were above 22,000 disabled soldiers care i for National Home and State Homes, of which number about 16 per cent. were ospital. That their leading affliction was rheumatism, and that a large pro- of them, perhaps 2,000, would without doubt be benefitted by treatment at y branch of the National Home established at Hot Springs, Ark.

nittees were appointed to wait upon the Committees on Appro- ns and on Military Affairs of the Senate and House of Represent- to present the estimates and discuss the affairs of the Board.

ANNUAL REPORT OF CENTRAL BRANCH, NATIONAL HOME FOR DISABLED VOLUNTEER SOLDIERS FOR THE YEAR ENDING JUNE 30, 1890.

CENTRAL BRANCH,
NATIONAL HOME FOR DISABLED VOLUNTEER SOLDIERS,
August 2, 1890.

GENERAL: I have the honor to submit the following report of this Branch for the year ending June 30, 1890:

GENERAL FUND.

The treasurer's report shows the average cost of ration per day per 100 men as $18.34, against $20.23 last year; of clothing per man per year, $14.52 against $12.66 last year; per capita, per year $120.91 against $128.18 last year; general expenditures $646,219.69 against $668,791.96 last year.

The minimum number of members present during the year was 4,379, on May 3 and 5. The maximum number present was 4,824, on February 28 and March 1. Minimum number present and absent 5,306, on May 3, 4, and 5, and June 3, 4, and 6; maximum number present and absent 5,642, on October 5.

LIBRARY.

During the year Mrs. Putnam has added 188 volumes to the "Putnam Library," and 224 volumes have been added to the "George H. Thomas Library," making the total number of volumes in the libraries 17,656.

PERMANENT IMPROVEMENTS.

During the year a large commissary building has been erected directly north of and connected with the quarter-master building, with every convenience for handling supplies directly from the cars, including new track scales, thus doing away with the necessity for the use of teams in handling the freight. The second floor of this building is used for depot manufacturing purposes and storing depot goods. In September last the Dayton Natural Gas Company completed its line to the Home, since which time natural gas has been used entirely for fuel purposes, with marked success as regards comfort, cleanliness, and expense. It has also been mixed, in its natural state, with our manufactured gas for illuminating purposes, in the proportions of from 60 to 70 per cent. with good results, and thus enabling us to supply an abundance of light through the winter, which our gas plant has been unable to do for some time owing to its small capacity.

HEALTH.

The general health at the Branch has been good except that there were some five hundred cases of la grippe during the winter, only two of which, however, resulted fatally, and there have been no observable permanent bad effects following the disease.

DISCIPLINE.

pline of the Branch has steadily improved throughout the being greater contentment on the part of the men as the . The beer hall has had another year's trial, and I have no n saying that its influence upon the Home has been benefi- swer to my recent inquiries on this subject the surgeon of Dr. Patton, says:

iterate an often expressed opinion, that the selling of beer in the camp at advantage to the health of the members.

I can not close this report without referring to the great ne has sustained, and the Central Branch in particular, by f Col. L. A. Harris, whose devotion to the interests of the and unremitting efforts in their behalf for twelve long years, o reveal.

SANITARY REGULATIONS.

The water supply is abundant for all purposes and the bathhouse still ad for bathing purposes, but the question of the inadequacy of our sewage system a troublesome one.

There were 134,896 baths taken at the general bathhouse during the year.

The services of the English Protestant Church have been conducted as usual the year. The chaplain, Rev. J. W. Lerch, officiated at 179 funerals. The S afternoon German service has been regularly conducted by the Rev. E. Light.

The Woman's Christian Association of Dayton has held services on every alt Sunday afternoon in the Home Chapel, immediately after the close of the G service, and on Tuesday of each week at the hospital.

The services of the Catholic Church have been conducted regularly by Rev. S. Kemper, Catholic chaplain, who has also officiated at seventy six funerals. pital visitations are regularly made by both Protestant and Catholic chaplain

ANNUAL REPORT OF NORTHWESTERN BRANCH, NATIONAL HOME FOR DISABLED VOLUNTEER SOLDIERS, FOR THE YEAR ENDING JUNE 30, 1890.

NORTHWESTERN BRANCH,
NATIONAL HOME DISABLED VOLUNTEER SOLDIERS,
Milwaukee, July 30, 1890.

GENERAL: I have the honor to submit the following report of this Branch for the year ending June 30, 1890:

The number cared for during the year was 2,981 as against 2,716 for 1889, and the average number present and absent for this year was 2,420 as against 2,164 for 1889. The maximum number present was 2,050, March 10, 1890; the minimum number present was 1,663, July 1, 1889.

We have erected a new chapel on the grounds at a cost of $10,000, which sum was paid from the post fund. Service is held twice a week by the Protestant chaplain, and Saturday afternoons and Sunday mornings by the Roman Catholic chaplain. We also have services semi-monthly in the German language by ministers from Milwaukee. The chapel is also used by other denominations and the Woman's Christian Union from time to time.

The amusements provided for in memorial hall covered several months, from November until May. We had a weekly entertainment at a cost of $2,796, paid from post fund. No admission is charged to the members of the Home.

Our band concerts in summer are given in the open air, and are attended by thousands of the best people of Milwaukee. In winter we have a concert every Sunday evening in memorial hall. Our library now has 5,686 volumes. The new smoking room has two billiard tables, two bagatelle tables, and card tables that will seat one hundred men. This room is occupied to its full extent every day in the year, from 8 o'clock a. m. to 8 p. m. The sale of beer in the Home, in my opinion, greatly tends to the advantage of the Branch and its members.

We have no restrictions on members of the Home leaving the grounds from sunrise until tattoo, and I find, by actual count, that there are within one mile of our grounds forty saloons, and within a radius of two and a half miles over seventy saloons. In many of these places the vilest decoctions are sold to our men. It is called whisky, but is simply poison.

I have for almost four years heard every case (except when absent or ill) in the guard house, and I have yet to find a case where drunkenness could be traced directly to the Home beer hall; of course men become under the influence of liquor there, but in every case that I have investigated I found that the man had been outside and drank something stronger than beer before he came into the ground. I shall refer to this subject again under hospital.

EXPENDITURES.

Current expenses.—The appropriation under this head was $26,788.88, expenditures $26,688.02, leaving a balance of $100.86.

gratified to report that the death rate has been very mate-ed in the last year, it being 36.02 per 1,000 for whole number is year as against 38.29 last year, and 48.63 for year ending 88, and 51.71 for year ending June 30, 1887. Of course there ne reason for this, and while I give full credit to the sur-eir skill and attention to the men in hospital and gen-ber treated at sick call shows a great decrease. Last year so treated was 1,491, this year 1,036. At the suggestion of . Mitchell, local manager, the Board approved of the em-f woman nurses in the hospital, and I was authorized to tract with the Milwaukee Woman's Training School to emrses in the hospital. They came in the Home on May 15 harge of the nursing in the hospital. I believe this institu-nly one of the kind where female nurses are employed, and tly satisfied from personal examination and inspection that es are, and will be, of great benefit to the Home.

I quote from the report of the surgeon, under date of July 18, in regard to the matter:

I also take great pleasure in adding that the women nurses are doing good and faithful work and are devoted to their duties.

Last winter we were overcrowded in both hospital and convalescent company; in fact, much of the time men were sleeping on the floor.

Undoubtedly the same condition to a greater extent will exist the coming winter. I am sure something to relieve the pressure ought to be done at once, and, therefore urgently recommend that an annex or extension to the hospital be made as soon as practicable.

Transportation.—Amount of appropriation, $3,991.78; amount expended, $3,417.03, leaving a balance of $574.75.

Many men seeking admission to the Home came directly and reported in person, thus saving the transportation to the Home.

Construction.—Amount appropriated, $20,664.03; amount expended, $19,714.78, leaving a balance of $949.54.

During the year we have built a smoking room, an addition to bakery, and a silo for farm, and from this fund have kept the general repairs to buildings, roads, etc.

For year ending June, 1891, I estimated for new boiler house, addition to electric plant, laundry, water supply, and steam heating in main building. I understand that Congress has allowed this, with exception of boiler house and electric light. I deem these very essential to the safety and comfort of the members of the Home, and trust that in another year the necessary funds may be supplied.

Our water supply has caused great uneasiness to me during the past year; one of our artesian wells gradually failing, until at the present time it hardly gives ten gallons a minute, and we have been compelled to put up a temporary boiler and pump on the flats below the Home. This is at best a makeshift and we are pushing ahead the city supply as fast as possible.

Farm.—The farm for the year has been successfully managed. Our silo, with a capacity of 600 tons of ensilage, was not completed until late in the fall, and we were enabled to fill it but about one-half with clover and corn; but this was of great assistance in feeding our cattle, as otherwise we should have been compelled to purchase hay, which would have been a very large item at the price it sold here last winter. We produced 32,263½ gallons of milk, which fully supplied our needs.

GENERAL REMARKS.

Our hospital facilities will have to be increased in the near future. When the hospital was built provision was made for this extension. I quote from report of the surgeon on this subject (see page 89).

I have placed a fire reel, with hose, on each floor in hospital and main building. This building should have an improved fire escape on the outside of the building. I would suggest the advisability of the board fixing a specified number of members present and absent for this Branch. I think if it was made 2,450 it would give us in winter in the neighborhood of 2,100, which is as many as can be comfortably cared for.

General Moore, the treasurer, acted as governor during my absence of two weeks, and discharged the duties to my entire satisfaction.

June 5, 1890, Samuel F. Stokes, Company B, Forty-first Regiment U. S. C. Volunteers.
June 27, 1890, Frederick Theas, Company H, Seventh Regiment Wisconsin Volunteers.

Attended memorial services on Decoration Day. Been present every Thursday afternoon to visit the hospital and any of the soldiers desiring the services of the chaplain.

[Report of Roman Catholic chaplain, Rev. V. Putten.]

I have the honor to submit the following report of my work as chaplain of the Northwestern Branch National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890.

Catholic services were held every Saturday evening and Sunday morning, also on holy days and the eves of them, and on a few other occasions. The attendance upon these services was very good, although not quite so large as the preceding year; some of the more infirm find it rather difficult to go to the chapel in bad weather.

The number of communions distributed during the year was about 4,200. The sacrament of penance was administered every Saturday and on the eves of feasts, from about 3.30 p. m. till 7.30 p. m.

Visits to the hospital were made twice a week and whenever requested. The convalescent and insane wards were also visited from time to time as occasion required it.

I have been called upon to officiate at forty-eight funeral services. On these occasions it is customary to give a brief instruction. I have also endeavored to promote the cause of temperance in various ways, especially by administering the total or partial abstinence pledge.

Generous contributions have been made for various charitable purposes, especially the Purgatorian Society, and the supplying of books and objects of devotion to the poor.

I take this opportunity to express my sincere gratitude for the constant courtesy and kindness I have received from all the officers and employés with whom I have come in contact.

[Secretary's Report of the German Ministers' Conference of Milwaukee.]

I have the honor to present the following report of our work in the Home, as ministers of the Gospel, for the time from April 1 to June 30, instant.

We have preached there every other Sunday at 4 p. m., in the months of April, May, and June.

The monument is very handsome in its rough simplicity, and is a source of pride to the men, especially because the work was performed entirely by members of the Home.

HEALTH.

There has been quite an increase in the death rate during the past year, the ratio being increased 3.18 over last year and 8.09 above the rate for the year ending June 30, 1888. I quote from the report of Dr. Miller, surgeon of the Eastern Branch, whose statement, in a measure, explains this increase during the present year. He says:

Nothing unusual occurred until January, when "La Grippe" made its appearance among us—the first case occurring January 3, and the last case February 20, during which time a total of 364 cases were treated. But one death occurred from the disease itself, but since then we see its effects every day in that it has left the patients who were attacked by it in such an exhausted condition that other diseases that were latent have developed with fatal results. This has proved so in over 20 cases, the causes of death in these cases being paralysis, phthisis, pneumonia, and heart disease. Up to January the mortality of the Home was about equal to that of last year, but after that it increased quite rapidly, largely augmented by the cold, wet weather which extended through the months of March, April, and May. April alone furnished 15 deaths. During this period the hospital was overcrowded and in many cases the bed in which a man had died was hardly cool before we were compelled to put another sick man into it. This was decidedly depressing, to say nothing of the exhausted condition that the man might be in when received.

While the above statement in regard to the effects of the epidemic is undoubtedly true and the condition of our hospital accommodations is correctly stated, yet these reasons are not sufficient to account for the increased mortality during the year ending June 30, 1888, over the previous years. There is no change in the condition of the hospital, and the number of men accommodated in previous years was the same as at present, yet the mortality was much less. The reason for the increase during the last two years must be found, partially, in other causes.

THE SALE OF BEER.

The new building built for a beer saloon has now been occupied for more than a year, and I confess that, somewhat to my surprise, its use has not increased the amount of drunkenness, while it is more comfortable than the old place where no accommodations were provided in the form of tables and chairs for the men to use while imbibing their beer. I am requested to express my opinion as to whether the sale of beer tends to the advantage of the Branch and its members: The practice of selling beer to the members of the Home was, I think, first started at this Branch about sixteen years ago, long before I assumed the duties of governor, and I have no knowledge nor data which will enable me to make any accurate comparison between the two systems. There are many difficulties connected with the sale of beer, and the business is personally disagreeable to me. In many instances men would get intoxicated if allowed to purchase all they desired, and considerable judgment is required in limiting certain members in order that they may be kept from abusing their privileges. I am of the opinion that in a few cases the desire for stimulants is commenced or increased by the sale and use of beer; but it is useless to deny that a very large proportion of the veterans who seek the National Homes are men whose habits of using spirituous liquors are established and confirmed, and entire abstinence could be made possible only when it would be impossible for them to procure what their appetites craved.

Digitized by Google

Unfortunately, this is not the situation in Maine any more than in other parts of the country. There can be found, in the vicinity of the Home, numerous places where vile compounds are sold upon which men get intoxicated, and which are exceedingly deleterious in their effects upon the health of the unfortunates whose appetites control their better judgment.

It becomes, therefore, a choice between two evils, and I am convinced that the best course is for the Home to furnish a comparatively mild beverage to the men in the form of lager beer, than to discontinue the sale altogether, for unless very severe penalties were established in cases of intoxication, they would surely obtain stronger liquors and often use them to excess.

DISCIPLINE.

The conduct of the members shows a decided improvement on the creditable record of previous years. Only 321 arrests were made during the year, generally for drunkenness. Out of 2,431 men cared for, 2,078 committed no offense whatever, showing a general regard for the regulations of the Home and uniform good conduct of a large number of the members.

Respectfully submitted.

SANITARY REGULATIONS.

There has been no change since last report. The men are required to bathe regularly and the sewers are constantly cleaned and every precaution taken to guard against disease.

With permission received from the president of the Board of Managers I propose to enlarge and readjust our sewers during the present season as far as our means will allow. Some difficulty has been experienced during the past year in keeping the sewers in proper condition and the enlargement of the same will soon become a necessity. I deem it wise to make a beginning in this direction.

RELIGION AND SOCIETIES.

The religious services during the year have been largely attended and considerable interest has been manifested. The value of these services can not be overestimated in the effects on the lives and conduct of the members who are interested in them.

Rev. Peter C. Bradley has faithfully served his people of the Catholic faith, and his work is heartily appreciated.

The following Protestant clergymen have officiated during the past year, viz: Rev. R. W. Jenkins, Orthodox; Rev. Allen E. Beeman, Episcopal; Rev. T. F. Jones, Methodist; Rev. R. A. Griffin, Unitarian.

Cutler Post, 48, department of Maine, Grand Army of the Republic, is the only society, and has a membership of 215, all in good standing.

Rev. Peter C. Bradley, Catholic chaplain, reports as follows:

"I have the honor to submit the following report as chaplain of the Eastern Branch, National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890.

"Catholic services were held on every Sunday and on all the Holy days throughout the year. The attendance was always large, and consequently very encouraging.

"The sacrament of penance was administered on Saturdays. The number of communions given this year, about twelve hundred.

"It affords me great pleasure to here acknowledge the uniform kindness which I have received from all the officers in the discharge of my duties."

Rev. R. W. Jenkins, Protestant chaplain (Orthodox), reports as follows:

"I have the honor to submit the following report of my work as one of the chaplains of the Eastern Branch, National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, during the year ending June 30, 1890.

"In connection with other Protestant clergymen I have held religious services and preached at the chapel at 3 p. m. These services have been held every Sunday afternoon through the year. The attendance has been very good. The men have earnestly participated in the responsive readings and in the singing.

"Several of the members of the Home have spoken to me of the comfort and inspiration derived from the ministrations of the different clergymen. At times I have used paintings to illustrate the sermons.

"Prayer meetings were held in the chapel twice a week for a few months.

"On two or three occasions I have made a general visitation of the hospital, going through all the wards and speaking to every patient.

"Special calls have been made on individuals whenever requested, and on a few without invitation, whom I thought needed attention.

"I have officiated at twelve funerals during the year. On such occasions it is my practice to read the Scriptures, speak a few words of comfort, and offer prayer. These duties have also been performed by the other clergymen associated with me in the chaplaincy as occasion demanded. I testify with pleasure to the uniform courtesy and kindness of all the officers of the Home in their treatment of me and their valuable assistance in the discharge of my duties."

ANNUAL REPORT OF SOUTHERN BRANCH, NATIONAL HOME FOR DISABLED VOLUNTEER SOLDIERS FOR THE YEAR ENDING JUNE 30, 1890.

SOUTHERN BRANCH,
NATIONAL HOME DISABLED VOLUNTEER SOLDIERS.
———, 1890.

GENERAL: I have the honor to submit the following report of this branch for the year ending June 30, 1890, and invite attention to the following tabulated reports from the several departments, all of which have been carefully compiled.

Membership.

Aggregate present June 30, 1889	2,347
Aggregate present and absent June 30, 1889	3,288
Aggregate present June 30, 1890	2,440
Aggregate present and absent June 30, 1890	3,4[illegible]0
Average present year ending June 30, 1890	2,466
Average present and absent year ending June 30, 1890	3,393
Maximum number present December 11, 1889	2,567
Minimum number present July 4, 1889	2,330
Maximum number present and absent June 10, 1890	3,433
Minimum number present and absent July 3, 1889	3,294

In my last annual report I called attention to the crowded condition of the Home, and asked that an appropriation be recommended for the erection of a new barrack. As no appropriation has been made for this purpose, I have to renew my request therefor. Under the provisions of the new pension law, I anticipate a large influx of applicants for membership to the Home from those apprehending that such membership will enhance their claims of disability and greatly aid in the prosecution. Aside from this element, the natural increase to be expected for several future years, renders additional barrack room of the highest importance.

BREAKWATER.

My recommendation for extension and enlargement of breakwater and wharf having been favorably considered and appropriations for their construction made by Congress, the work on both will begin at the earliest possible date.

NEW DINING HALL.

Under the head of recommendations for needed construction, in my last report, attention was invited to the urgent necessity of a new dining hall capable of accommodating at two sittings all the members of the Home. The sum of $25,000 was asked for this building. Nine thousand dollars was formerly appropriated for the enlargement of the present contracted and unsuitable dining hall, which sum remains unexpended, it having been decided much better to use it on the proposed new one. At the time of making this report, the appropriation asked of the Congress now in session is still pending consideration and action. This, if allowed, as we anxiously expect, will enable the work of construction to begin during the present year.

PASS SYSTEM, AND SALE OF BEER IN THE HOME.

The system of daily passes during the past year has not differed materially from that of the several preceding. Six hundred and sixty-eight enjoy the meritorious privilege of standing passes, and 219 is the average number of weekly passes issued to those who obtain light jobs of work outside the Home, while the number of dailies is rarely less than 250.

The records of the provost sergeant's office show conclusively that on the days when no passes are issued (which for good reasons occasionally occur), the cases of drunkenness and consequent number of confinements in guard house are very much smaller than otherwise obtains, and this leads to an explanation of the causes.

The nationality character of this Home is, in the main, threefold, viz:

Native Americans	1,500
Germans	1,000
Irish	900
Various others	250

The foreign element thus comprises about two-thirds of the entire membership. These men, particularly the Germans, are great beer drinkers, accustomed to its liberal use from childhood, and to be deprived of it would cause widespread complaint and disaffection. Taking this and other views of the subject, some ten years ago the sale of beer, under proper restrictions and safeguards, was authorized and introduced in the Home, and has continued to the present.

Realizing the fact that a divided sentiment prevails in the minds of the public, touching the propriety of the sale of beer at the National Homes, I deem it proper and expedient at this time to show, both from observation and official records, some of the leading reasons why the Home interests can best be subserved by a continuance of such sales.

(1) In the interests of discipline and good order, in which every person connected with the Home is concerned and affected. Under the order from this office governing the sales to individuals, a maximum quantity is established; and those known to be unable to use the beverage without injury to themselves and annoyance to others, are prohibited from entering the saloon; thus intoxication is absolutely prevented.

(2) The records prove that nearly every case of guardhouse confinement and flagrant violations of Home rules, is the consequence of whisky drinking in the saloons outside and within short distance of the Home.

(3) A large percentage of the members rarely ever leave the Home grounds; never apply for "passes." Now if this class of sober, quiet, good men should be deprived the privilege and convenience of the Home saloon, they would seek the resorts elsewhere, and unrestrained or unrestricted, the result would be either excessive beer or whisky drinking, and the various offenses and misdemeanors would soon follow. The greater part of them would be transformed from peaceable, respectful, and rule-observing members, to those of an entirely opposite class and character.

(4) To further illustrate this point: A few years since, at a time when our contract for beer was with Baltimore parties, by reason of a great storm endangering commerce by water the Baltimore boats were compelled to "lay up." During this period the supply of beer at the Home became exhausted, and the saloon was closed. The result was that the members were forced to obtain their favorite beverage outside the Home grounds. The applications for daily passes were increased at east 100 per cent. and the offense records show at that time a corresponding increase of arrests and confinements for drunkenness and other violations of the Home rules, consequent thereon.

(5) All the profits arising from such sales of beer at the Home go back to the members in the way of a good class of amusements, in the winter season theatricals, concerts, minstrels, etc., and in the summer baseball, and other outdoor sports.

From this fund is also expended that which we are not warranted in using from the regular Congressional appropriations, such as books, etc., for the library; music and musical instruments for the band, etc.

The fact remains, beyond fear of contravention, that under our safeguards and stringent rules, the sale of beer in this Home has reduced debauchery, sickness, and waste of money to a great extent, and that more money is now sent away to aid in the support of families than formerly.

CONDUCT AND DISCIPLINE.

Reference to the tabulated report of offenses committed attest the statement that the conduct of the men is generally good, but about thirty, or 1 per cent. of the entire membership, come under the head of "incorrigibles."

Intemperance, and the minor offenses growing therefrom, is the greatest evil here met. My long experience as governor of this Branch, in dealing with so large a number, emphasizes more strongly each passing year my convictions that punishment for such is to them most effectual (at the same time mild and humane), which restrains the liberty; thus for stated periods preventing their going outside the Home, and saving them from temptation in the many guises planned.

In conclusion, I have to express my sense of obligation to the official staff of this Branch for their untiring efforts and zeal in the promotion of the best interests of their respective departments, and for the harmonious support rendered me in all matters affecting the general welfare and prosperity of the Home.

Very respectfully,

P. T. WOODFIN,
Governor.

General M. T. MCMAHON,
Secretary Board of Managers,
National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers.

SANITARY REGULATIONS.

S. K. Towle, surgeon, reports: "During the year covered by this report no diseases prevailed in this Home excepting epidemic influenza or la grippe. this disease occurred about 300 cases, from which no death directly resulted ut one death indirectly. One man coughed so severely from the bronchitis ng from the influenza that a blood vessel in the lungs ruptured and he died emorrhage.

ost of the cases were not severe, and were treated in quarters where they were trictly in bed with special diet from hospital kitchen, and special attendants lso employed.

e fact that amongst the large number of feeble old men in this Home not one f pneumonia has occurred, none of typhoid fever, and but two each of dysen- nd erysipelas, proves beyond question a good sanitary condition during the year."

. J. J. Gravatt, Protestant chaplain (Episcopal), reports: "During the past year I have held stated and regular service in the Home chapel, and have been d to note a growing attendance on the part of the members. The behavior and st of the congregation are all that could be asked.

is my rule to visit the hospital once a week. The men seem to appreciate the ministrations of the church. I also hold service in the hospital for the men annot get out. I have officiated in turn at the funerals from the Home. Am o refer to the improvement in the music at the regular service. The orchestra een a great help, adding life and interest."

. Charles D. Price, Protestant chaplain (Presbyterian), says: "The year which st closed has witnessed the regular and stated performance of the duties of the aincy, attended by the unflagging interest of the veterans, which has always l an encouragement and inspiration to those to whom these sacred duties have ommitted. The gospel has been preached, the sick have been visited, the dead l with Christian ceremonies, and pious influences exerted. The good effect of things can no more be questioned than the Divine promise.

om the nature of the work it is not permitted those who conduct it to see the s as they are seen in regular churches; it is safe to say, however, that the l services, with their comparatively large attendance, is of untold value to the e of the Home and a powerful coadjutor in the work of maintaining the order n such an institution. There are no recommendations to be made which will se the comfort either of chaplain or worshiper, for through the attention and sy of the management these things are punctiliously observed.

well appointed building, bright and attractive music, and a deportment on the f the men to which none could take exception give to the members all the out- comfort and enjoyment of religious services that are to be found in any church land. The work is a great one, but one that has been blessed in the past and promise for the future.

e infirmities of the souls and bodies of the men is alone a guaranty that the of the Son of God can make this, their last encampment, the happiest and peaceful of their lives."

. A. B. Woodfin, Protestant chaplain (Baptist), reports:

here is nothing of special interest to report in connection with the labors of the tant chaplains to the Home. The attendance upon the regular Sunday after- ervices has been uniformly good. The worshipers are usually very apprecia- nd responsive, and we have frequent encouragement to hope that our work is vain."

. D. C. Hedrick, Protestant chaplain (Methodist), says:

held my first service in the Home chapel on the 23d of March, 1890. Have ned five times, attended eight prayer meetings and ten funerals, besides attend- d assisting in several special services and visiting in the hospital. I never ned to a more attentive and respectful congregation, and trust the seed sown rove abundant fruit."

Rev. T. J. Mercer, Catholic chaplain, states: "The spiritual condition of the Catholic members of the Home is encouraging. Services were held each Sunday morning and twice a month on Saturdays; besides this, frequent calls and visits to the hospital. The attendance at services was good, and steadily increased during the year. The conduct of the men during services and their regular attendance are evidences that they appreciate the advantage afforded them.

"I would respectfully call your attention to the need of an organ or melodeon for the chapel. The instrument there at present has been in use a number of years, and is considerably the worse for the service it has seen. A good musical instrument would tend much to make the services more interesting to choir and congregation."

Under this head I have no report to make additional to those of the chaplains, simply adding that everything possible is being done to assist them in their work.

SOCIETIES.

Three Grand Army of the Republic posts are in existence at this Branch, holding their meetings semi-monthly, as follows:

Thomas Francis Meagher Post No. 3, E. O. C. Ord Post No. 16, and Harrison Phœbus Post No. 13.

These organizations exert a good, healthy influence in the Home, and hence every consistent encouragement is given to them.

Permanent improvements authorized by Board of Managers.

AL REPORT OF WESTERN BRANCH, NATIONAL HOME FOR DIS-
ED VOLUNTEER SOLDIERS, FOR THE YEAR ENDING JUNE 30, 1890.

WESTERN BRANCH, NATIONAL HOME
DISABLED VOLUNTEER SOLDIERS,
July 26, 1890.

NERAL: I have the honor to submit the following report of this ch for the year ending June 30, 1890:

GENERAL FUND.

treasurer's report shows the average cost of rations per day per as 15.3 cents, against 18⅔ cents last year; of clothing per man ear $10.79, against $22.11 last year; per capita per year $115.04, st $150.70 last year; general expenditures $255,848.34, against 235.28 last year.

PENSION FUND.

treasurer's report shows an increase of twelve pensioners over f last year, but a large increase in the amount of pension money ed, due in a great measure to arrearages of pensions that were ed and paid to the pensioners during this year. The amount paid es is largely in excess of last year.

POSTHUMOUS FUND.

s fund has gained $362.63 during the year.

POST FUND.

treasurer's report shows a credit of $3,642.99, including stock on
It has furnished the Branch 431,350 vitrified brick and 5,726 feet of vitrified curbing for roadways and sidewalks.

ADJUTANT'S REPORT.

ws an increase in the "average present" and "average present bsent" of 227 and 279 respectively, and an increase of 23 in the ge sick, which, as it bears a fair proportion to the increase in ership, is a favorable showing as regards health.

SUBSISTENCE.

EMPLOYMENT.

There has been an increase of 165 members on extra duty with pay over that of last year, owing to the large number employed in building the thousands of square yards of brick roadways and sidewalks, which are fully explained under the head of construction.

VISITORS.

The number of visitors this year were 56,770, excursions 41; an increase of nearly 25 per cent. over those of last year.

DISCIPLINE.

The discipline at the Branch will compare favorably with that of any previous year.

Beer continues to be sold at the Branch with beneficial results both to the Branch and the members. The Home is benefited by having fewer protracted drunks to deal with, such as are sure to follow the use of poisonous liquors that are sold outside the Home grounds to those of the members who will get drunk on them, causing endless trouble to the Home and grievous suffering to the victims.

Personally I would wish that the necessity did not exist for the sale of beer at the Home. That we are confronted with that necessity has been demonstrated, not only at this Branch but at the other Branches of the National Home also. Many of those who compose the membership of the Home have, from various causesthrough life, contracted the habit of using stimulants. Old age and the accumulation of infirmities have rendered them powerless to withstand that habit, and confirms them in the belief that stimulants of some kind will ameliorate their sufferings. If not otherwise provided for they would use the villainous compounds called liquor that are surreptitiously sold in the vicinity of the Home. The Home has adopted the least of two evils and decided to furnish them as good an article of beer as could be obtained, which, under proper restrictions, might contribute to their health and comfort. It certainly appeared to be the best course when contrasted with the experience of the few who are incorrigible and will get drunk outside the Home grounds. They are frequently robbed, maltreated, and locked up in the city station-house, all of which is avoided by those who are satisfied with the beer at the Home.

We do not propose to make money at the expense of the health or morals of the members, but rather to meet their failing in regard to stimulants. The result has proved satisfactory.

The profits arising from the sale of beer are used as a post fund, under strict accountability, for the benefit of all in the Home, providing everything that does not come strictly under the head of maintenance, such as a good band that furnishes concerts six times a week; magazines and newspapers; replenishes the library; supplies chess, checkers, playing cards, dominoes, bowling alley, billiard tables, powder for salutes and morning and evening guns, and innumerable other means for the enjoyment and comfort of the members.

sidering the results that have followed the sale of beer on the grounds, I have no hesitation in saying that it has accomplished t was expected of it by restraining the use of alcoholic liquors ontributing towards the health and contentment of the old men re committed to the care of the National Home, besides benefit- e families of pensioners, as will be seen by reference to the pen- und account. Instead of spending their money in dissipation, oners have forwarded much larger sums to their families than dur- y previous year, being $68,008.16 this year against $20,916.48 last the number of pensioners this year 664, last year 652. In accord- vith a rule at this branch, pensioners who have dependent families quired to send two-thirds of their pension money to them or leave ome. They can easily spare that amount without any hardship mselves, as the Home provides all that a man can desire in the f food, clothing, and medical attendance.

CONSTRUCTION.

following roadways and sidewalks have been constructed during ar, of vitrified brick made at the Branch: Roadway, 35,700 square sidewalks, 5,655 square feet; and vitrified curbing, 3,731 linear intention is that there shall be brick pavements between the cks and on all approaches to the dining hall, all connecting with tinuous sidewalk, eight feet wide, along the whole line of barracks o the hospital, also to all business portions of the camp, and a antial double brick roadway through the grounds wherever it may eded, furnishing a thoroughfare free from mud, water, and dust e year round.

FARM.

supply of vegetables and garden truck has been abundant, keep- e general table well supplied and contributing largely to the health members. The hay crop was not harvested up to the date of this t, owing to the lateness of the season. It would have added about to the credit of farm account. Under this head I would respect- mention the necessity of a suitable stable at this Branch. Our s are as fine as any in the State, and should be protected from windstorms, and heat by a substantial building. The present e, formerly a cowhouse, is too suggestive of loss by fire to be ed to stand much longer.

onservatory is very much needed; in addition to the propagation ants for farm use, flowers should be raised for beautifying the ds and supplying the sick in the hospital; at present we have no ies worth mentioning for either purpose; we do furnish both to a d extent, but it is laboring under difficulties.

closing this report it is my painful duty to chronicle the death of eloved local manager, General John A. Martin, who died at Atch- Kans., October 2, 1889, after a short illness. In his death this ch lost an energetic and faithful friend, the country a patriot, a nt soldier, and a citizen who had filled with honor and credit im- nt positions, both State and national.

Very respectfully,

ANDREW J. SMITH,
Governor.

neral M. T. MCMAHON,
Secretary Board of Managers,
National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers.

SANITARY REGULATIONS.

Members are required to bathe regularly once a week. There being an abundant supply of hot and cold water, both for lavatories and bath rooms, there is no excuse for uncleanliness. As a rule the members need no urging to comply with the order.

Close attention is given to the barracks as to cleanliness and ventilation.

Our sewerage is perfect, the prominent location of the buildings aiding materially towards it.

The surgeon, Dr. J. L. Wever, referring to the death rate in his health report of 35.76 per thousand, says that, "considering the advanced age of so many of our members can not be considered large, and that none of these deaths can be traced to purely local causes."

RELIGION AND SOCIETIES.

The Protestant chaplain, the Rev. J. W. Gillespie, reports an increase in the attendance at the Sunday afternoon services, which have been held regularly throughout the year, has officiated at sixty-eight funerals and visited the hospital daily; that prayer meetings have been held twice each week, with a liberal attendance, and that the general moral tone of the Home has improved. He urges the necessity of a building exclusively for divine worship that would be easy of access to the old and crippled members, which I sincerely hope will receive favorable consideration.

The Catholic priest, the Rev. M. A. Finn, reports a good attendance at morning services. Mass, at 7 a. m., held regularly throughout the year, besides sacraments and other services pertaining to his church. Three solemn high masses were celebrated, the attendance on each occasion being about eight hundred; has visited the hospital regularly twice a week, and at other times when his services were required. Officiated at twenty-five funerals.

SOCIETIES.

Thomas Brennan Post No. 380, G. A. R., has weekly meetings, which are well attended; it is having a marked influence for good.

A Christian Temperance Union was formed during the year; its weekly meetings are liberally patronized, besides several social entertainments.

ANNUAL REPORT OF PACIFIC BRANCH, NATIONAL HOME FOR DISABLED VOLUNTEER SOLDIERS, FOR THE YEAR ENDING JUNE 30, 1890.

PACIFIC BRANCH, NATIONAL HOME FOR DISABLED VOLUNTEER SOLDIERS,
August 5, 1890.

SIR: I have the honor to submit the annual report of this branch for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890.

The following is a summary of the work of the year:

Steam heat and hot water for bathing purposes were introduced into the four barracks in good time to prevent any serious discomfort. There have been constructed sheds for coal, storage houses for oil and ools and for commissary supplies, a bakery, store, post office, and a library, which is also used for religious services, lectures, Grand Army of the Republic post meetings and entertainments, a deadhouse, pens and corrals for hogs, cows, and poultry. The only work given out was for the introduction of steam and for a cold storage building.

It would seem worthy of mention that in clearing out a well at the sycamore tree, under which all the laundry work for the Home, 68,000 pieces for the year, has been done, the water suddenly began to flow, and for many months we have had an artesian well of splendid water.

The water works have stood the test of water spouts and torrents such as had not been experienced in this region for over twenty years. Some injury was done to the cement work at the head works in the cañon, but by almost superhuman care and watchfulness on the part of the superintendent of construction connection was kept up, and the supply was never for a moment interrupted.

Had the proper debits and credits been given, there is no question that the farm would not only be shown to have been self-supporting, but also to have contributed very largely towards the support of the Home.

The truck garden, in charge of a member of the Home, and worked exclusively by members, although twice almost entirely washed away by the floods, is now in a most flourishing condition, insuring handsome future profits. It has already kept the hospital and the general mess supplied with many needed luxuries.

The work of beautifying the grounds has not been neglected. About 40,000 ornamental trees and nearly 2,000 fruit trees, including the choicest varieties of oranges, have been set out and are doing splendidly. Almost all of the trees and plants have been grown on the place, from the seed.

Although the beer hall at this branch was only opened on the fourth day of July of this year, an expression of my opinion having been called for by the president of the board of managers, I do not hesitate to state that already the good results have been so marked as to have attracted the attention of the citizens and officials of both Santa Monica and Los Angeles. On the fourth of July the beer was made free to all, from morning until night, without any restriction or surveillance. I merely appealed to the honor and good sense of the men. The result was most gratifying. There was no drunkenness on the place throughout the day, and not a man in the guard-house the next morning. There has also been a marked decrease in the number of passes. The men are cheerful and contented, preferring to remain on the place and sit in a pleasant arbor, with their glass of beer, pipe, and newspaper. During the month the arrests at the Home and in the town have been very few. The only dissatisfaction has been on the part of the proprietor of the "Blazing Stump," a disreputable saloon near the Home, which has given a great deal of trouble, but which is now for sale.

Very respectfully,

CHARLES TREICHEL,
Governor.

General M. T. MCMAHON,
Secretary Board of Managers,
National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers.

SANITARY REGULATIONS.

During the past winter the bath rooms of the barracks have been supplied with warm water and steam, and the members have complied with the prescribed regulations as to bathing. The erection of an oven has enabled the baker to furnish bread two or three days in advance of its consumption, and, therefore, of more wholesome quality. The addition of a cooling house has also conduced to the better preservation of fresh meat and milk during the warm season.

A large number of cases requiring treatment are owing to rheumatic complaints of various forms, and to meet these it is respectfully and earnestly suggested that in the erection of the contemplated hospital at this branch such arrangements be made as to permit construction of Turkish baths. Aside from being the most rational treatment for these rheumatic complaints, this would certainly eventually prove more economical than sending such cases to the Hot Springs.

RELIGION AND SOCIETIES.

Since its completion the library building has been used for religious services, which have been held every Sunday, and with few exceptions twice a day, by various denominations; also for weekly prayer meetings. The John A. Martin Post, No. 153, which now has 48 members, holds its meetings there. The Home Dramatic Company also have regular weekly entertainments, which are very popular and give much pleasure.

ANNUAL REPORT OF MARION BRANCH NATIONAL HOME FOR DISABLED VOLUNTEER SOLDIERS FOR THE YEAR ENDING JUNE 30, 1890.

MARION BRANCH NATIONAL HOME
FOR DISABLED VOLUNTEER SOLDIERS.
Marion, Ind., September 19, 1890.

GENERAL: I have the honor herewith to hand you annual report of the Marion Branch National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers for the year ending June 30, 1890, with accompanying documents showing condition of the several departments. On May 3, 1889, by direction of Col. L. A. Harris, first vice president Board of Managers and acting president, in the absence of General W. B. Franklin, president, I took charge of the territory which had been selected and purchased for the site of the Marion Branch of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers. The operations in clearing the land, making surveys, constructing topographical map, plans, and profiles for proposed sewer, water, and gas systems, locating general plan for building sites, excavating for six barracks and letting of contracts for same, have been subjects of report in detail during the period up to September, 1889, and need only be alluded to now.

On September 19, 1889, Col. E. F. Brown, Inspector-General, took charge of supervision of all contracts and work of all description. A detail of 41 men from the Central Branch were received here November 24, 1889, for purposes of the work going on.

BARRACKS

were rapidly pushed forward, and in early spring two were ready for occupancy, but lacking at the time in complete water service. The buildings are of fine architecture, convenient, and admirably adapted to their purpose. By June 30, 1890, all six of the barracks were complete with exception of water service. March 15, 1890, by direction of General Franklin, president Board of Managers, I assumed command as acting governor. This may be regarded, I presume, as the date of officially opening this Branch, although individuals had been taken in for some time previous. On April 30, 1890, another draft of 100 men were sent here from the Central Branch. These, with the gradual accessions, singly or in small numbers, brought the membership up to the aggregate of 299 on June 30, 1890.

Hospital had to be established early and part of barrack No. 4 was used for that purpose. To-day all of it is found necessary. Not having any hospital corps at all, I had to do the best I could until Joseph R. Railing was sent from Central Branch, being an experienced man. As acting hospital steward he showed skill and capacity in getting matters into shape. On May 20, 1890, Dr. A. D. Kimball took charge as surgeon and the hospital can be stated as being in very satisfactory condition in all respects. I am informed by the surgeon that most cases of sickness are complicated with malaria, which accounts for the unusual number of cases at sick call. Unacclimated men are naturally the worse sufferers, but few escape the climatic effects entirely. This will be the chief trouble here until thorough drainage is secured, for which the location is admirably adapted, at not excessive cost.

The dining hall has been a temporary, insufficient, and not convenient building in any sense. Three tables have to be set at each meal, increasing labor and service, preventing meals being in best condition, and causing more or less annoyance. The ration cost was reduced from 23.54 cents per man at first to 19.62 cents when turned over to Captain Chapman as commissary of subsistence. I was entirely alone for some time with everything to attend to and I relied almost entirely upon my daughter Louise, for aid. She made out daily ration returns, saw to proper issue, superintended commissary department, cook house, and dining room, and to her care, previous training, and hard work is due entirely the good results.

Captain Chapman was appointed acting treasurer April 19, 1890, and reported for duty June 19, 1890. The breaking out of his old wound and the bad influence of the climate disabled him for a while, notwithstanding his efforts to keep up, and I was unwilling to burden him with increased duties until he had recovered a measure of health, however, willing to undertake them himself.

Farm.—The two farms were bought subject to owners' right in crops, and last season's results have been accounted for in previous reports. During all last winter rains were incessant; the place was a quagmire, and crop prospects were not promising. Hopes were almost destroyed of fall wheat by a sudden severe frost late in spring, succeeded by more continuous rains. Planting was extremely late for the same reasons. In the end, it can be stated, although not accounted for in this report, that crops on this territory turned out exceptionally good for the season, notwithstanding the long and severe drought immediately following the excessive rains. This farm was confessedly the best in this county this year by all odds, although not regarded as particularly good territory in itself. It was due to deep plowing, thorough working, judicious use of what manure we had, and careful and untiring tending during the critical season; in short, good farming. Mr. Unthank, the farmer, deserves commendation for what he has done.

Discipline in the camp is good. The bulk of the men are undoubtedly well disposed and obedient to rule. I believe, however, that I have had more than a fair proportion of bad characters. It is natural that drafts from other Branches should not be composed of selected good men, and equally natural for every one who has exhausted patience or committed serious offenses at older Branches should strike out for the new one. This camp has had considerable experience in that line and severe example has been necessary in several instances.

The matter of abuse of liquor among the men is a serious one. It gives rise to almost all the trouble in camp. The moment men get money, on pay day or pension day, leave is requested, which can not be denied, although it is a moral certainty that it will only lead to bad results in many cases. I am seriously of opinion that these periods are watched by numbers outside, who deliberately entice members to drink vile stuff, rob them of their money, and reduce them to a condition of physical helplessness or mental irresponsibility. I am inclined to believe it gets to be a traffic with conscienceless men. One particular feature of this matter seems to be that men will go back the next time to the same place where before they have been brutally treated, acknowledging their folly all the time. I discuss this at some length because it is a grave evil, and constantly recurring instances compel my attention to the fact and the possibility of some remedy. Moreover, t was a request of General John C. Black, Acting Local Manager Marion Branch, that I give this serious consideration.

The situation as it appears to me is this, viz, men can not be refused eave because they are known to have money. After passing the gates what is going to restrain them except self-control and self-respect? I ıave reasoned, argued, and used every incitement to better conduct, repeatedly. During the moment of repentance consent is the rule, but the repetition at next opportunity is anything but flattering or satisfactory. Probably this is an old story in the experience of the Home. My reasons for enlarging upon it have been given. I have not confidence enough in my own opinion to suggest the cure, but state the facts.

Quarters for officers are very limited. The only building on the grounds is an old farm house built over forty years since. Neither in size, condition, nor adaptability to the purposes can it be commended. The treasurer and surgeon both have to be provided with quarters in the town of Marion, 3½ miles away, and must drive in and out every day in all weather. This compels their absence during much of each twenty-four hours, when their services might be required, in addition to the expense to the Home.

Most sincerely,

A. F. DEVEREUX,
Acting Governor.

INSPECTION OF SOLDIERS' HOMES.

HARTFORD, CONN., July 7, 1890.

General W. B. FRANKLIN,
President Board of Managers,
National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers:

SIR: I have the honor to submit the following report of my inspection of all the branches of the National Home except the Pacific and Southern Branches, and of all the State Homes excepting that of California, made in accordance with your instructions of April 26, 1890. The financial statements obtained from the Branches of the National Home, consisting of a statement of the appropriations for the current quarter, the expenditures made, and balances available under each head on the date of inspection, were submitted to you personally on the 18th ultimo.

A second successive winter almost without snow had been remarkable for wide alternations of temperature, in which the durations of the freezing point were so brief that the country was left generally destitute of natural ice.

During the latter days of December, 1889, and the early part of January, 1890, all the Branches and State Homes inspected, excepting one, were suddenly invaded by a violent influenza popularly known as "la grippe." A table showing the date of its appearance at each Home, the number and percentage of members afflicted, the number of deaths resulting from it, and the date of its disappearance is herewith submitted. The opening of spring was nearly a month later than usual. On the 10th of May, in the evening, the air was filled with snow at the Central Branch, and throughout the Northwestern States the ground was covered with it on the same date. The first spring day in Iowa, Minnesota, and Wisconsin, was the 23d of May. These marked vicissitudes of weather and extensive climatic changes have been felt and noted at the various Homes, perhaps, more than elsewhere, on account of the general invalided condition of the members.

The most noteworthy observations made and reports received at the inspection of the Branches of the National Home were as follows:

CENTRAL BRANCH, NATIONAL HOME FOR DISABLED VOLUNTEER SOLDIERS, MAY 10, 1890.

LOCAL MANAGER.

Col. LEONARD A. HARRIS, Cincinnati, Ohio.

OFFICERS.

Col. J. B. THOMAS, Governor.
Maj. MILTON MCCOY, Treasurer.
Maj. M. F. WATSON, Secretary.
Capt. JUSTIN H. CHAPMAN, Commissary of Subsistence and Quartermaster
Maj. CARL BERLIN, Adjutant and Inspector.
Dr. F. H. PATTON, Surgeon.
Dr. ROBERT CAROTHERS, } Acting Assistant Surgeons.
Dr. CHARLES E. HERDLISKA, }
Mrs. E. L. MILLER, Matron.
Rev. J. V. LERCH, Chaplain.

The records of this Branch show a net loss of 145 members since June 30, 1889, which is accounted for principally by transfers to the Marion Branch.

The greatest number, 4,911, was present February 28, 1890, and the least, 4,482, May 10, 1890.

The most noticeable improvement that has taken place at this Branch is the substitution of natural gas as a fuel instead of coal. It is used wherever coal was burned for making steam or cooking, and in all fire places. It is furnished by contract at a cost of $37,500 per annum. The absence of dust, litter, and noise was especially remarkable in the great boiler house, where perfect quiet and cleanliness prevails from pavement to roof. Where twenty-seven men were employed when coal was used, three firemen and two boiler cleaners are now doing all the work.

A reserve of 500 tons of coal is kept on hand with wheelbarrows loaded, and firing implements in readiness and good order to replace the gas at a moment's notice in case of its failure.

The company furnishing the natural gas contracts to pay the expenses incident to any intermission of its supply.

The natural gas is also used for illumination by mixing it with artificial gas, in the proportions of two of the former to one of the latter, and passing the mixture through a carburetter. The quantity of natural gas thus used daily for illumination in the Home is about 35,000 feet. Without the natural gas the capacity of the artificial-gas plant at the Home is not adequate to the demand for illuminating gas, the Home having outgrown it. It would not alone be sufficient to supply more than two-thirds of the demand in the winter.

The new commissary and quartermaster depot, 400 feet long, was completed with the exception of its interior finish. Its connections with the railway, and its exterior and interior arrangements for receiving, storing, and issuing supplies, either in bulk or in retail, are altogether admirable.

Its architectural appearance is pleasing and satisfactory, and its materials and construction show strength, durability, and an excellent and economical fitness of means to an end. All work upon or within the building had been stopped for want of funds. The old quartermaster building is being converted and adapted to the uses of the library and reading room, which when completed, as expected, by autumn, will greatly relieve the present office building of the enforced crowding of offices upon one floor, and permit the construction of much-needed safety vaults. This work is being done with the post fund.

The present baking house and kitchen of this Branch may be regarded as a lopsided building, the northern half of it being of modern construction, convenient, and easily ventilated and cleaned, while the southern half of the same structure is a cluster of inconvenient and badly ventilated rooms, difficult to keep clean, which might have answered their purposes at some earlier period of this Home, but are now out of place and obstructive.

The removal of the southern half and a reconstruction in harmony with the northern half would eliminate several causes of complaint and offense and improve the facilities for baking and cooking.

The most serious attention is demanded to the structure containing the carpenter and machine shop. Situated on the western side of the Home, besides being illy suited to its purposes and to the economical use of steam power, its contiguity and combustible character constitute a menace to the Home and the lives within it. Should these shops ever take fire during the prevalence of a west wind, it would be impossible to prevent a great conflagration, probably involving loss of life.

It would be easy to remove this obnoxious structure to a safe distance, where it might be converted into a useful barrack for disabled soldiers temporarily at the post. To replace the utilities of these shops a one-story brick pavilion, with metal roof, could be erected on the extension of the present laundry to the southwest and directly on the line of work of the engine, which will soon require resetting on account of insecure foundations, indicated by cracks. An easy corrollary to these imminent perils and suggested improvements, not heretofore so apparent to me as they now are, is a consideration of the lack of fire escapes upon the wooden barracks.

The older barracks having three stories have only the flights of stairs at the rear end for exit. There is not much danger from taking fire internally, to be sure, yet they can not be regarded as exempt from danger where smoking is common, and the occupants are old and weak, and sometimes partly demented, but the greater peril would be found in a fire which might spread from the carpenter and machine shops or elsewhere on west side.

The stairway ends of the barracks would in such case be the first to ignite, and then there would be no escape for the feeble old men. Light verandas above the first and second stories, with one or more windows converted into doors, to each story, and with stairways between the verandas, and descending to the ground, similar to those upon the barracks of the Western Branch, would not only afford complete means of exit in case of fire but furnish comfortable promenades to the occupants in bad or uncertain weather. Their general architectural effect would also improve present appearances.

Next in importance to the safety of the population is a consideration of the means of disposing of the sewage of the Home, which is at present inadequate. As this subject is now receiving the attention of the president it is not necessary that I should say more than that I have gone over the line in present use and through which two powerful pumps operating under 100 pounds pressure are unable to force all the sewage over an elevation 165 feet above the sewage tanks, but also over the proposed line around the base of the hills to the present point of discharge into the Miami River. The proposed line is but 100 feet longer than the one in use, and the point of discharge being 200 feet 6 inches lower than the tanks in a distance of about 16,000 feet, gravity would replace the pumps and prevent the tanks from overflow.

The steam plant now used to actuate the pumps could be applied to the generation of electric energy to light the hospital buildings from which it is only 200 feet distant.

An inspection of quarters and of commissary and quartermaster's departments revealed the usual satisfactory conditions as to good order, cleanliness, and bountiful supplies of food and clothing, but no change as to the means of ventilation of barracks.

DEPOT.

The depot was closed, and of 319 employés all had been discharged but 14, the storekeeper, printers, carpenters, packers, and four clerks being retained. There was a large amount of cloth on hand, of which I was assured great care was taken to prevent injury from moths.

HOSPITALS.

The usual admirable administration was everywhere apparent, and the personal acquaintance of the surgeon with such a great number of patients was remarkable.

The surgeon reports that—

On the 18th of January, 1890, the assistant surgeon who attends the sick call in camp telephoned for assistance, as there was an immense number of members at the call. We found nearly two hundred suffering with similar symptoms, viz, pain in forehead, base of brain, and back, and general malaise ("la grippe").

The epidemic continued, with twenty or thirty new cases daily, for five or six days, and then began to subside. There were catarrhal symptoms in only a few cases. Not more than twenty cases were brought to hospital; the others recovered nicely in camp. Only one member died of "la grippe" uncomplicated, and he was just recovering from a debauch when attacked. One other is recorded as "la grippe," but he was so feeble from asthma and bronchitis when attacked that the grippe was only the "last straw." The deaths from lung disease were coincident and not a sequel to the disease.

He found the best result in phenacitine for relieving the pain, which appeared neurotic, but as this remedy could not be secured in sufficient quantity he depended largely on quinia and Dover. In about 10 per cent. of the cases debility and nervous prostration followed for two or three weeks. In all about 12 per cent. of the camp was attacked.

An incident concerning a soldier who died in this hospital since my last inspection is worthy of record. George Hammer, Fifty-second New York Infantry, a pensioner, who had lost a leg and had long been an inmate of the hospital, desired, as his life was drawing to a close, to leave some enduring expression of his gratitude for the kind care he had received here. His pension had been saved for him and amounted to about $1,500, and having no dependent kindred he, after conference with the governor and surgeon, determined to establish a fountain in front of the hospital. The Mott Iron Works, of New York, furnished it at a great reduction of price, in order to enable the soldier to carry out his wishes. About 200 feet in front of the hospital the post constructed an octagonal granite basin 30 feet in diameter, from the center of which rises the graceful fountain 24 feet high, with two basins supported by figures of appropriate designs, and surmounted by an uncommonly well-posed Undine. In operation it is a beautiful and refreshing object, especially to the sick.

Capt. D. C. GOODRICH, Commissary.
Dr. J. L. WEVER, Surgeon.
Dr. O. C. MCNARY, Assistant Surgeon.
Dr. J. F. MCGILL, Second Assistant Surgeon.
Rev. M. J. GILLESPIE, Chaplain.

The records of this Home show a net gain of only 17 since June 30, 1889.

The greatest number, 2,047, was present on December 14, 1889, and the least number, 1,677, on July 5, 1889.

An inspection of quarters showed a high degree of comfort and cleanliness. The woodwork of the barracks was being painted in pleasing colors. The offices and books exhibited a constant and strict attention to duty. All returns and statements were promptly rendered, and even the amount of clothing on hand was accurately shown, as follows:

This branch is suffering the want of a proper storehouse for clothing. The basements of two barracks are now used for the purpose, and being 5 feet below the surface of the ground are damp and unhealthy, all the clerks having been sick at times since their employment.

There is also a lack of light, artificial light being required nearly all the time, whilst a want of capacity and great inconveniences are experienced in airing stores, which is rendered the more necessary on account of the dampness.

Digitized by Google

The tailors' and shoemakers' shops alike situated have not enough light. Tarred paper, benzine spray, and camphor are used to prevent the ravages of moths.

It was reported to me that no clothing had been spoiled or damaged since my last inspection.

The commissary department had also been exempt from any damage to supplies. The cost of the rations uncooked was $15.32, cooked $16.22, not including the products of the farm. The baking room of this department is the only objectionable feature within it. It is too confined in a rear corner of the basement of the dining hall, and the heat within it is so great as to exhaust the workmen, necessitating frequent changes to the extent of four to six men monthly. If a new and adequate baking house were built the room now used could be occupied as a scullery.

The farm and garden were in promising condition, although the spring had been backward.

The most noticeable activity about the Home is the manufacture of brick, on account of the post fund.

The following is a statement of the assets and liabilities of the post fund brickyard, May 15, 1890:

Cost original brickyard plant	$21,242.48
Cost new kiln brickyard plant	3,368.79
Services T. P. Davis, superintendent	543.33
		$25,154.60
Total cost plant:
Amount due from Capt. M. H. Insley	1,298.13
Amount due Western Branch National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers	897.50
		2,195.63
Value burned product on hand	524.40
Value unburned product on hand	1,758.66
		2,283.06
Total assets		29,633.29
Liabilities:
Due Capt. M. H. Insley	6,000.00
Due sundry accounts post fund	3,984.09
		9,984.09
Balance		19,649.20

The $6,000 will be paid in brick, the cost of which is stated will not be above $3,000.

There is reported a clear profit of from $4,000 to $4,500 each quarter on sales of beer and merchandise.

Three hundred and fifty feet of the street in front of Home and the driveways about the governor's house had been paved with brick. The curbs of the same material as the brick, made with four longitudinal conduits within them for electric wires, present a neat and substantial appearance.

There are nineteen valuable horses and six mules in the stables of this Branch, which are situated in a conspicuous position near the main avenue of approach upon ground abounding in springs which occasionally flood the floors and stalls. The stables are always damp, and two horses were sick with influenza.

In the upper story over the stables is the carpenter shop, full of highly combustible material, which if it ever takes fire will be liable to destroy the horses before the stables could be reached by any firemen. Altogether it affords unsightly, uncomfortable, and dangerous shelter for valuable animals.

HOSPITAL.

Some very satisfactory improvements have been made in and about the hospital. The dispensary and storeroom are in good order, but the inconvenient spiral stairway communicating between them has not been changed.

A supply room has been arranged in the basement, which is spacious, clean, and in perfect order. The account books therein of the treasurer and surgeon, and the systems of purchase and expenditure, are models of excellent administration. The kitchen has been improved and tastefully arranged and painted. A storehouse for coal has been built of brick, and the grounds in rear graded.

There have been altogether 57 cases of erysipelas treated in this hospital, besides several cases of cancer, requiring isolation and seclusion, for which no provision has been made. Machine fans are required in all the wards.

Rocking-chairs with high backs have been provided for the sick in this hospital, and afford great comfort with gentle exercise, and a rest for the head. An excellent and notable appliance here is a hospital stretcher on wheels with rubber tires, which can also be used to carry medicines and dressings to the surgeon's hand as he makes his rounds.

The surgeon reports that the date of first appearance of la grippe was January 12, 1890.

The hospital records show 79 cases of la grippe, but owing to the order which requires that a case can be diagnosed once only during a quarter, many more were treated who were on the sick report with other diagnoses, thus we fall far short of showing the true number treated for la grippe.

Percentage of number present at the Home who were afflicted, 4.43.

The symptoms were somewhat different in the different cases. The disease was usually ushered in with a chill, then followed pains of an indefinite character, sometimes all over the body, great lassitude, severe headache and fever, which was generally light in character. Other cases suffered with the lassitude or malaise, and the headache, but the disease seemed to attack principally the mucous membrane, and there was stomatitis, inflammation of the alimentary canal, and diarrhœa.

Still others were attacked in the nervous system, and some were even delirious with the headache, and others nervous symptoms. Some cases were complicated with pneumonia. In all cases great prostration followed the disease, and there are in hospital and convalescent wards cases that have been left so badly debilitated that we are still keeping them under treatment.

None died directly from the disease.

The date of the last case taken under treatment was March 4, 1890. However, as stated above, there are still some cases suffering from debility, the result of la grippe.

NORTHWESTERN BRANCH NATIONAL HOME FOR DISABLED VOLUNTEER SOLDIERS, MAY 26, 1890.

LOCAL MANAGER.

Col. JOHN L. MITCHELL, Milwaukee, Wis.

OFFICERS:

General KILBURN KNOX, Governor.
General T. C. MOORE, Treasurer.
Maj. W. W. ROWLEY, Commissary of Subsistence and Adjutant.
Dr. W. H. LEIGHTON, Surgeon,
Dr. J. E. MCILVAIN, Assistant Surgeon.
Dr. F. W. FUHRMAN, Second Assistant Surgeon.
Rev. EDWARD P. WRIGHT, D. D., Chaplain.
Rev. VICTOR PUTTEN, Chaplain.

This Branch has had a net gain of 265 members since June 30, 1889. Its administration has undergone a notable improvement in every respect, excepting in its treasurer's department, of which a special report has been made to the president of the Board. The regular, simple, and comprehensive reports required by the governor, daily, of every function of the Branch, result in a good order and an attention to details by subordinates, which is everywhere apparent. The manner of alarming the members occupying the main building, in case of fire, by electric bells sounding on each floor, and the time required to vacate it, was exhibited to me without premonition, and showed that the members had been well instructed. This precautionary measure was vitally important on account of the lack of fire escapes upon the main building, which has but two iron ladders on its exterior, so placed and curved over cornices as to be useless to any persons not expert athletes. Three lines of balconies, of tasteful construction, with connecting stairways, would afford security to the inmates and not mar the appearance of the building.

CONSTRUCTION.

The handsome chapel of the Home is finished, and furnished seats for 600 persons.

Under the extension of the dining room has been completed a very large smoking room, furnished with billiard tables, card tables, and chairs, and its walls adorned with appropriate pictures.

An addition to the old bakery has been constructed, and now makes one of the finest baking houses in use. It is equipped with a new oven revolving upon a horizontal axis, within a large furnace, the heat of which is under complete control and has little or no waste. It was furnished by Ross, McMahon & Co., of Chicago, and will bake 192 four-pound loaves at a charge. The cost of this improvement, including the oven and all attachments, was not quite $1,800.

Digitized by Google

The fuel used is coke from the gas house, and costs $0.12 per day. A new mixer with a capacity for 6 barrels of flour has been added at a cost of $300. The power which actuates the oven and mixer is borrowed from the wood sawmill, and transmitted by rope belting about 100 feet. The temperature of the baking house is not influenced to any appreciable extent by the oven.

A broad balcony from which two stairways descend to the ground has been erected along the second story on the west side of Memorial Hall, and through two doorways from the auditorium to the balcony, the hall may be vacated in a few minutes independently of the usual exits.

The post fund store was found in excellent order, and its accounts are well kept. An account of every sale however small was made. The system of checks established in the beer hall seemed efficient. The sales of beer amount to over $100 daily.

COMMISSARY.

Some complaints had reached me that some articles of food were not well cooked, one of which was the corned beef. I therefore examined the food prepared for dinner and supper critically, and satisfied myself that there was not the slightest cause for complaint of the cooking, nor of the quality or quantity of the supplies. It might be quite likely that some of the oldest men, who have lost their teeth, find some difficulty in masticating the solid food furnished at meals. This may warrant the suggestion that an "Old Man's Ward," one story high, with kitchen and dining room for the preparation and serving of soft food with plenty of milk and mush diet would be an acceptable feature of all large homes. The members who should occupy such ward would not be sick enough to require hospital treatment, but whose age and infirmities would render them partially unable to care for themselves, and to enjoy the food of the ordinary dining hall.

WATER.

At the time of my inspection there was not enough water at this branch to last two hours in the emergency of a fire. The flow of both artesian wells was on May 26, 160 gallons per minute, or 230,400 gallons per 24 hours. The iron pipes in the wells have been in use about four years without renewal, and under the pressure to which they are subjected are liable to give way at any moment. The introduction of water from the city works, which is in progress, will relieve the apprehensions attending this situation.

HOSPITAL.

A new feature in the administration of the hospital had been in operation only ten days, but had already promised additional and important benefits and comforts to the sick. A contract had been made with a lady of Milwaukee for the services of ten women nurses, who had been in training under her patronage from eighteen months to two years at Milwaukee County Hospital, and at the Emergency and Elms Hospitals of the city, under a chief woman nurse, who was graduated at the Bellevue Hospital in New York City. The nurses were all unmarried, and lived at a house just outside the grounds, having their dinners provided at the hospital.

There are four wards, and during the day time there are two nurses, with one orderly to perform the menial labor on duty in each ward.

Digitized by Google

During the night, two nurses and one orderly are on duty in all the wards. The day nurses make verbal reports to the physicians in charge, and the night nurses report in writing, except in emergencies.

From conversations with the medical officers, and inquiries of some of the most intelligent patients, it was found marked improvements had already begun to appear; the men were more careful of their appearance, habits and conversation; they were more contented, knowing that certain help and skillful attendance was always at hand, and they were encouraged and sustained by the watchful nurses in the few activities and diversions left to them, and above all, reliable attention was paid to the temperature and ventilation, of such deep and immediate influence upon flickering lives.

On the part of the nurses, the only apprehension expressed was that the hospital would not afford the extent and variety of experience or training desired by them. This feeling will be modified or removed when the surgeon shall have established a clinical card for each patient under treatment, and shall permit or direct the observations of the nurses to be regularly recorded. The attention given by the nurses to the constant cleanliness and tidiness of the wards, and the cleansing and scalding of all utensils is a new feature. If the best clinical observations are desirable in these large hospitals, and without them the best results can not be reached, there should be one medical officer in charge, and on duty at all times.

The want of a passenger elevator in this hospital amounts to an affliction which should be remedied. A hospital stretcher mounted on rubber-tired wheels would be very useful. Two similar vehicles for carrying food to the considerable number of patients who can not go to the hospital dining room for their meals, are very much needed. This duty is now burdensome to the orderlies and nurses; with an elevator and proper vehicles it could be far better, more promptly, and easily performed. A small shaft through which soiled linen and clothing could be discharged from the upper wards to the basement would save trouble and time and avoid offense to some of the senses.

Eleven insane were transferred to the Government Insane Asylum at Washington on the 27th of May.

LA GRIPPE.

The surgeon reports that the date of first appearance of la grippe was January 1, 1890. The whole number afflicted 201, a percentage of 10 of number present at Home. Characteristics of disease, a very aggravated case of influenza, and the number who died from it, 1. The date of its disappearance was March 15, 1890.

EASTERN BRANCH NATIONAL HOME FOR DISABLED VOLUNTEER SOLDIERS, JUNE 15, 1890.

LOCAL MANAGER:

General THOMAS W. HYDE, Bath, Me.

OFFICERS:

General LUTHER STEPHENSON, jr., Governor.
Maj. JOHN D. ANDERSON, Treasurer.
Capt. AUG. I. SMITH, Commissary of Subsistence.
Dr. S. J. F. MILLER, Surgeon.
Dr. W. E. ELLWELL, Assistant Surgeon.

Admissions to this Branch were stopped from October 1, 1889, to May 25, 1890 (when orders were issued for the admission of 25 men), on account of want of appropriations for subsistence. Consequently there has been since June 30, 1889, a net loss of 38 in membership, of which 17 were transferred to the Government Insane Asylum.

NEW CONSTRUCTION.

The railway between the town of Gardiner and this Branch, 5 miles in length, has been graded, the ties and track laid, and will be ballasted and in working order by July 1, proximo. Its completion will relieve this Home of much difficulty and distress in transportation, and of the irksome feeling of remoteness and isolation which has lent some gloom to life within it. A new and handsome station house with lunchroom has been built at the Home terminus at a cost of $2,000 to the post fund. Its upper story furnishes well lighted and commodious quarters for the band. Platforms constructed by the Home, and switches by the railway company for the convenient reception of supplies are arranged.

A fine residence for the commissary of subsistence has been completed and furnished at a cost for building of $4,500, for furniture $800.

The treasurer's house has been repaired and unfinished rooms completed at a cost of $450, and refurnished at a cost of $1,000.

The drainage of Franklin Hall, and the included barracks, the guard house, restaurant, and surgeon's quarters, which formerly was discharged into an open ditch on the west side of the Home, has been changed to the main sewer, which empties into the creek on the east side. A suggestion of the governor, that by changing the course of the creek on the east side the outlet of the main sewer might be removed 1,500 feet farther away from the Home, seems worthy of careful consideration.

A minor improvement has been effected by obliterating the structure called a harness shop in my last report, and removing its contents and industry to the wheelwright shops, which, in turn, had been transferred to a small building formerly connected with the farmhouse.

In the steam plant, the jacket of the engine had been repaired and replaced, and the surface of visible pipes covered with new nonconducting materials. The steam pipes to the restaurant, surgeon's quarters, railway station, and guard house had been laid underground, inclosed with heavy cast-iron pipe of such dimensions as to contain 2-inch steam pipe, and 1½-inch return, and leaving some space within it. Stand pipes have been placed in all main buildings and hospitals with fire plugs and a sufficient quantity of hose attached. The steam plant and connections were in good order and the engine with its connections was in better condition than would be expected in its mean shelter, which is a rude and rough annex of studding and boards.

A trifling expenditure for construction with brick should enlarge it about 4 feet laterally, and double its extent across the main shops, which would then afford room also for an engineer's office. The space in the main machine shops now used by the engineer as an office could be converted into a suitable rendezvous for the hose company, where their uniforms and hose reel might be kept. By this arrangement some needed additional space could be gained for the machinist and plumber. The engineer represents that the present boiler feed-pump is too small to do the work required with economy, and that one a size larger would give much better results; that a duplex pump, size 7½ by 4½ by 10, would answer every purpose for several years to come, and that such can be bought in Boston for $275, and that the cost of material necessary to change the suction, discharge, etc., would amount to about $50 additional.

A silo of 200 tons capacity, 60 feet by 22 feet by 14 feet, was built last autumn, at a cost of $450, and used with complete satisfaction.

In the Sylvan cemetery on the westward hill, upon a solid foundation of masonry rising 5 feet above the ground, has been erected a granite obelisk with a lower base 10 feet square, upon which rests a second base 8 feet square, surmounted with a pyramid the apex of which is 33 feet 6 inches above the ground. Suitable tablets of polished granite are inscribed with legends, setting forth its purport to commemorate the dead of three wars.

Noting the building of two bridges over streams crossing the high way to Gardiner completes my inspection of the new constructions at the Branch since my last report.

The administration of this Branch is more satisfactory than it was last year. The restored health of the governor permits him to give his personal attention to details, and especially to the guard house and police records where he examines complaints when made and corrects irregularities.

TREASURER'S OFFICE.

All the accounts, except that of transportation, were posted to date, and the books, all new, under the supervision of the acting chief clerk, presented a highly commendable appearance.

QUARTERMASTER'S DEPARTMENT.

The storehouse for clothing at this branch is unfit for its purpose, being an unlined and unceiled shell of studding and boards with very rude facilities for storage, and without convenience for issues. It would answer for the rag depot, if removed to some less conspicuous position. The treasurer reports the condition of his clothing accounts as follows:

Clothing account, June 15, 1890.

	To be condemned.	Now on hand.	Issued to companies.	Total to be accounted for.
Blouses	205	325	2,119	2,649

Trousers	259	165	3,928	4,352

COMMISSARY DEPARTMENT.

The chief excellencies of the commissary department were its baked beans, which were furnished at two breakfasts a week, its selected corned beef, costing $3.20, and first-class Rio coffee, 20 cents, and not ground over forty-eight hours before using. The cost of the ration was running at date at about 13 cents on account of shortness of appropriations.

The average increase in number of members per day (over corresponding months last year) during nine months ending March 31, 1890, was 94, requiring an additional 25,756 rations, which, at 15 cents, would be $3,863.40. If same increase for April, May, and June added $1,283.10 the estimates would be overrun $5,146.56, hence the necessity for daily retrenchment. Yet no complaint was heard except a faint one about the quality of the tea, which, on examination, proved unfounded. The stores, kitchen, and dining room were all in excellent order.

HOSPITAL.

The ventilation of the wards was generally quite bad, otherwise as good order and cleanliness as the structural defects will admit prevailed. The outlying insane ward was found in a greatly improved condition, the cellar having been filled so that the nuisance of stagnant surface water beneath had been abated. The surgeon reports the date of first appearance of disease la grippe January 3, 1890. Whole number afflicted, 364; percentage of whole number present afflicted, 20 per cent. Characteristics of the disease: suddenness of invasion, nearly 100 cases being under treatment within the first 5 days. Epidemic in character rather than contagious. Development favored by unhygienic surroundings.

Symptoms: Usually ushered in with a chill, and sometimes slight nausea, soon followed by headache, pain in the back and limbs, with fever, sometimes reaching as high as 104–5 F., and in 80 per cent. of the cases distressing bronchial symptoms were present by the end of the second or beginning of the third day, consisting of a feeling of soreness and tightness across the chest, accompanied with a hard, dry cough, expectoration not being established unless stimulated by drugs for two or three days. The cough often lasted for two or three weeks, and with the great after depression common to all of the cases was the most persistent and troublesome feature of the disease in the majority of the cases. In not more than 5 per cent. of the cases was there any involvement of the nasal or pharyngeal mucous membrane. In about 15 per cent. the whole force of the disease seemed to expend itself upon the nervous system, the headache and pain in the back often being intense, and accompanied with high fever. Two of these patients suffered from paralysis. In one the muscles of the left side of the face and larynx were affected, rendering distinct articulation impossible, and in the other partial paraplegia existed for about two weeks. Both patients recovered from these symptoms.

There was one case of acute maniacal delirium lasting two weeks, with complete recovery. In a few cases intestinal colic with diarrhea was a complication. Four cases of pneumonia resulted from the disease, of which one was fatal. This was the only death in which la grippe was the sole cause. Two phthisical cases, and two cases of organic heart disease, in which death was imminent, were suddenly terminated by the onset of the disease. Many of the patients were left in a feeble and debilitated condition, and it is evident that the mortality for the year will be appreciably increased as a result of la grippe. Date of last case, February 20, 1890.

MARION BRANCH NATIONAL HOME FOR DISABLED VOLUNTEER SOLDIERS, NOVEMBER 8, 1890.

LOCAL MANAGER.

General J. C. BLACK, Chicago, Ill.

OFFICERS.

General ARTHUR T. DEVERREUX, Acting Governor.
Capt. JUSTIN H. CHAPMAN, Treasurer.
Dr. ABNER B. KIMBALL, Surgeon.
Mrs. MARY E. HAMSKER, Matron.

This new branch of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, the latest established, is building upon an old farm of 220 acres, situate on the Jonesborough and Marion turnpike, 3 miles south of the city of Marion. A horse railway has been constructed from the town to the Home, and sidings of a passing railway extend into the grounds, whereby materials for the construction of the Home and supplies for its occupants are conveniently delivered. The broad landscape is gently rolling, diversified with fine woodlands and large cultivated farms, through which the winding Mississinewa River finds its way, and lends the most pleasing feature to the surroundings of the Home where it bounds its grounds on the south side.

The plan of construction of this Home contemplated twelve barrack quarters, a hospital, dining hall, and the other buildings essential to a Soldiers' Home. Six of the barracks have been finished, and in their commodious dimensions, their admirable arrangements for light, heat, cleanliness, dormitory comfort, and convenient administration, approach a perfection of improvements dictated by long experience. These buildings are only two stories in height, with an attic, stone basements, with deep, dry cellars; upper structure of brick, trimmed with stone, with slate roofs. Each barrack is 178 feet in length, 52 feet wide in main or center section, and 27 feet outside measurement in the wings, which extend 34 feet from center section. Piazzas 10 feet wide extend along the front and around each end. The windows are large and well placed. Each wing has an upper and lower barrack room, holding 25 beds or quarters for 100 members in each building. There are 16 fireplaces in each barrack, 4 in the central or administration part, and 3 in each room. There is also one special ventilator in each room. Stoves are used in wash rooms. There are two Mott bath tubs, porcelain lined, in each barrack. Hot water is now furnished to barracks only two days in each week, but is believed sufficient to afford a bath to each member once a week. It was noticed that the sergeants of companies kept no bathing roster by which they might be assured of the regular bathing of the members.

The water supply is obtained from one driven well, 78 feet deep, over which, and 50 feet above the ground, stands a reservoir of 300 barrels capacity, into which it is pumped. Two additional wells are under contract to be driven, and connected with the reservoir. The water is considered good for all purposes, although impregnated with iron and sulphur. The clean slate roofs of the barracks present vast surfaces, untouched by smoke, and no means have been adopted for the collection and use of the rainfall upon them. The drainage of the Home, both surface and interior, is well established.

The fuel and lighting are supplied from a natural gas well on the grounds, free of cost to the Home, which was the chief consideration that led to its establishment here. The well, completed and furnished with a lock-valve, was presented to the Home by the citizens of Marion at a cost to the town of $1,400. It is 920 feet in depth—the first 220 feet were bored through drift, the next 300 feet through limestone, then 360 feet through shale and slate, and the last 20 feet into the Trenton limestone. The capacity of the well is 7,000,000 feet of gas daily. Its full pressure is 325 pounds per square inch, which in use for heating and lighting is reduced by gauges to 8 ounces per square inch. Fortunately, it is not odorless, but can be easily detected when escaping. No accidents or difficulties with it have been thus far experienced. Through ordinary burners for lighting, the flame flickers so as to make it trying to the eyes. One Wellsbach burner, however, furnished satisfactory light to a large room in the treasurer's offices.

For warming the barracks the three fireplaces in each room have been found sufficient. It is necessary to have a vessel partially filled with water near each fireplace, in order by evaporation to maintain the normal humidity of the air at the temperature of the room; otherwise the throat and lungs of the occupants become irritated, and wooden furniture shrinks.

From lack of proper offices, quarters, and buildings, the administration of the Home and its quartermaster, commissary, and medical departments are all suffering considerable embarrassment and discomfort.

A small old farmhouse, found on the place, affords totally inadequate residence and offices for the governor.

QUARTERMASTER AND COMMISSARY.

These departments are now compelled to use the cellars and attics of the barracks for storage.

A storehouse is contracted for at a cost of $9,057.76, to be done on or before September 15, 1891, for which excavation for foundation was already begun. The members were well clothed, and no complaint was heard, except a want of socks.

The contract for the building of a kitchen had also been made, to be done March 15, 1891, at a cost of $13,640.85. Its cellar walls and foundation were completed and the laying of brick begun. The appropriation, $15,000, had not been sufficient to build a mess hall also, which is imperatively needed. The members now dine in a rough shelter of boards and canvas, with a kitchen improvised largely with secondhand utensils, kettles, and range. The food was good and bountiful. The bread was made in Marion from flour made from wheat grown on the Home farm. In this eating place only 288 members can be seated at one time, and is remindful of a shelter in winter camp during the war.

In the household there was a lack of bedsteads, 78 men now sleeping on the floor. They had been ordered from the manufactory on October 15, ultimo, but had not yet been received. There was also a want of individual lockers in barracks, and extra clothing was stored in the attic in bundles and under the bedding. These had been ordered in Marion at $1.47 each, but no funds were yet provided for their purchase. There was nothing but a makeshift for a laundry. The building of one had been contracted for, to be done November 15, 1891, at a cost of $5,285.17, and the site had been selected.

Digitized by Google

Two additional barracks are under contract for building, at a cost of $44,599.99, to be completed, one on May 15, and the other on July 15, 1891. Excavation for foundations of one was completed, and the site for the other selected.

HOSPITAL.

One of the barracks is now occupied as a hospital, and had within it 56 sick.

The surgeon had no regular record books, although he reports they were ordered six months ago; that requisitions had been made and were recently repeated. Records of admissions and readmissions were made on improvised forms, from which transfers could be easily made to regular books when received, but there was accumulating embarrassment with his case book and other records. The building of a hospital is under contract, to be completed June 15, 1891, at a cost of $2[illegible],885.86.

FARM.

There are 160 acres tilled, upon which was raised this year 400 bushels of wheat, 1,200 bushels, by weight, of shelled corn, 600 bushels of potatoes, which were scarce in market at $1.17, 19,000 heads of cabbage, and a considerable quantity of small vegetables, and a plenty of cucumbers and lettuce. The farm turned into the commissary $400 worth of hogs.

This branch of the National Home was opened April 3, 1890. According to the morning report of the day of my inspection there were:

Present for duty	323
Present on extra duty	136
Present, sick	56
Present, in arrest	4
Total		519
Absent with leave	51
Absent without leave	16
Total		67
Total present and absent		586

There were employed, under the various heads, as follows, viz:

Heads.	No.	Total wages per month.

PACIFIC BRANCH NATIONAL HOME FOR DISABLED VOLUNTEER SOLDIERS, SANTA MONICA, LOS ANGELES COUNTY, CAL., NOVEMBER 21, 1890.

LOCAL MANAGER:

Col. H. H. MARKHAM, Pasadena, Cal.

OFFICERS:

Col. CHARLES TREICHEL, Governor.
Maj. ADOLPH ERDMAN, Treasurer.
Dr. H. E. HASSE, Surgeon.

Three years ago there was no branch of the National Home west of the Rocky Mountains, and the State Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, in upper California, was filled to overflowing. Since that time a branch of the National Home has been established on the Pacific Slope, which on November 21, 1890, was caring for over six hundred impoverished and invalid volunteer soldiers, while the State Home of California has grown in capacity and membership.

From several inviting places along the Pacific coast, all surrounded with more or less favorable conditions, the Santa Monica Valley, in Los Angeles County, was chosen. It extends from Los Angeles 18 miles down to the ocean. The village of Santa Monica, a picturesque collection of villas, cottages, and shops, embowered in luxuriant growths of semi-tropical trees and plants, occupies the bluffs facing the bay at the lower end of the wide valley, and is connected with Los Angeles by a branch of the Southern Pacific Railway. Three miles to the eastward of the village, up the valley and on its northern slopes, the growing Home enjoys a landscape of incomparable beauty. A quadrant of its horizon rests upon the ocean between Point Dumas on the northwest and St. Vincent's Point in the southwest, and includes within its scope St. Nicholas and Santa Barbara Islands, 30 miles to seaward, and at evening it is filled with evervarying and enchanting sunset splendors. From Point Dumas start the foothills of mountainous ranges, which run behind the Home and fill the sky to the northward with bold serrated lines, which fade far away in the southeast. The foothills in the springtime are covered with a brilliant mantle of flowers, and at all seasons their warm and changing tints enhance the grandeur of the Sierra Madre chain behind them. Upon Mount Wilson, which towers in easy vision 8,000 feet above the sea, is building an observatory in which will be used the largest telescope yet made. Above and beyond in the faint sky-line may be seen the snowy summit of "Old Baldy" and other peaks, over 70 miles eastward.

Between the sea and the mountains to the southeast stretched a broad valley teeming with fruitful towns and haciendas of beautiful names bestowed by adventurous Spanish priests in days almost ancient, long before this dormant coast was awakened by the mighty energy of American development. In its landscape the grandest dimensions of nature are presented at once to the eye in inspiring contrasts. The soil is marvelously fertile, and the climate seems to one who has endured the blue rigors of the north like a golden and azure enchantment.

To the natural advantages which invited the selection of this site, was added the inducements proffered by distinguished citizens of Los Angeles County, which resulted in a presentation to the Home of 570 acres of land on which it is established.

The first plan of the Home embraced the design of building twenty-five pavilion barracks to accommodate 100 men each, or altogether 2,500 men, with the other essential buildings. The barracks were to be placed in echelon, opening out to the right and left from the center, where the dining hall was to be built.

Four of the barracks have been completed and occupied, and it is not probable that more than four more will be added. Each barrack is 207 feet long and 26 feet wide, of two stories, and has a piazza 12 feet wide along the front and around each end, with a short lap in the rear. It has a gabled center, in some doubled, and all are tastefully turreted, the turrets sustaining airy bell-shaped summits. The eaves are 34 feet high and the ridge 56 feet. The rooms are spacious and well furnished. There is one fireplace in each room, and ventilation is also otherwise provided. The ceilings are 13 feet 4 inches high. The attics, with their dormer windows affording a fine lookout, are pleasant quarters, although unfinished, and now largely occupied as dormitories. The individual lockers, made of redwood and resembling mahogany, are notably good furniture. There is only one bathroom on each floor, and they were not in good order, and no bathing roster was kept by the sergeants. During the dry season at this Home the bathing facilities should receive close attention. The barracks are warmed with steam and lighted with oil.

The Home was first occup'ed October 1, 1888, and before the barracks were completed the care of arriving members imposed a great strain upon the administration.

The first great need of the Home, and the one which awakened the gravest apprehensions, was the water supply. To meet this supreme necessity was the first step to be taken. The tireless energy and skillful exploitation of Col. E. F. Brown, the inspector-general, conquered all difficulties, and produced the most satisfactory results. A source was found 5 miles from the Home, in a cañon of the Sierra Madre range, from which water was brought by pipes to a well constructed service reservoir a mile in the rear, on an eminence sufficiently elevated to give a pressure of 60 pounds at the boiler house. The capacity of the service reservoir is 240,000 gallons. Near by this, a storage reservoir has been partially constructed by taking advantage of a very favorable configuration of the hills surrounding a natural basin, which will have, when completed, a capacity of 120,000,000 gallons. It may be finished in another year, if means be provided, and will be ample to supply all possible demands. Puddling materials are fortunately convenient and available on Home land. Another general service pipe from the reservoir to the Home will probably be required during the next summer, as the present and only one, of 4 inches, may be inadequate, and should any accident interrupt its service the Home would be embarrassed to an almost calamitous extent. The water is clear and pleasant to the taste but is hard. Its analysis is as follows, viz:

	Grains per gallon
Solid matter	79
Chlorine	2.5
Nitrates	3.1
Free ammonia	[illegible]
Albuminoid	[illegible]
Lime and magnesia	[illegible]

Digitized by Google

These quantities are within the limits of safety, indicating no excess of organic contamination though above the average of good potable waters, with the exception of the alkalies, which constitute the largest portion of the solids, and are present in rather too large quantity to render the water fit for drinking purposes. The water gives a decided alkaline reaction and taste. (Vide report of Wade & Wade, analytical chemists, Los Angeles.)

Scale forms rapidly in the flues of boilers to such an extent as to necessitate excessive firing, which strains and injures the boilers. It is proposed to use a water purifier to take the lime from the water, used in the boilers, at a cost of $250, and subject to a trial test of sixty days.

The boiler plant is in its infancy, but growing. There are two locomotive boilers, of 15 horse power, in use. A return-flue boiler, of 50 horse power was expected to be put in place within ten days, to use crude petroleum as fuel, at a cost of $2.10 per barrel, and to effect a saving of 25 per cent. as against coal at $11 and $12 per ton. It was also expected that a saving of 50 per cent. in labor would be made. The coal used is called the Gallup, at $11, and the Wellington, at $12.

A condenser is imperatively needed to return water to the boilers, which would go far toward preventing the serious scaling of flues, which must occur when such fresh water is constantly used. Hot water for other purposes should be provided independently of this plant. A proposition has been made to put in a Rademacher patent condenser and heater, with a capacity of 125 horse power, for $500, on sixty days' trial.

The drainage and plumbing of the Home is complete and adequate for the present development, but difficulties are found with the barrack urinals, which become often choked with an alkaline deposit. It would seem that some sort of an acid drip or automatic acid flushing would prevent this affixture. The roof drainage is arranged to be carried off under the porches of the barracks, but not stored. There are fire plugs on the rear of each barrack, with hose attached; but they are too remote and inconvenient for quick work in the interior, with none but disabled soldiers to handle the hose. There should be standpipes inside, with attached hose on each floor and in the attic.

LAUNDRY.

The boiler plant having no engine, the laundry work is carried on by manual labor. Its operations take place at the foot of the slopes south of the Home, underneath the gnarled branches of a gigantic sycamore whose trunk is 6 feet in diameter, and under whose wide-spreading shade the legend runs that the good Father Junipero held mass for his mission in the earliest historical times of this region. Near by is an artesian well 90 feet deep, from which there is a daily flow of 5,000 to 7,000 gallons of excellent water. All the soap used in laundry work is made here from the waste grease of the kitchen. There is no laundry machinery, except some hand wringers and a mangle. The work is well done when the rain does not interfere with its operations. There is no building for the laundry excepting a small folding room.

Close by the laundry is a small barrack containing forty-six beds which was used to shelter the first arrivals at this home, and is now used to shelter the last arrivals or T. A. P's. It is clean and comfortable.

CLOTHING.

The supply of clothing was sufficient for five or six months, with the exception of No. 8 shoes. The repairing of shoes at the home shop enables members to use a pair over a year.

The storage for clothing is at present in the attic of Barrack B, and was in good order and showed care. The stock on hand was as follows:

Caps	140	Shirts, K. W	404
Great coats	370	Drawers, C. F	732
Dress coats	369	Socks	180
Blouses	219	Suspenders	374
Vests	541	Overalls	121
Trousers	443	Shirts, R. F	56
Shoes	540	Drawers, R. F	22
Shirts, D. F	70	Shirts, W. C	100

The books of the quartermaster's department were found complete, in good order, and well kept.

COMMISSARY.

The dining-room is a temporary building near the boiler house, at the eastern side of the barracks, wherein there are seats at one time for only 352 members, so that a large part of the tables require setting a second time. The food is bountiful and well prepared. There were complaints of the soup bowls, which are of copper tinned, because they are too hot to handle, the tin partially worn off of some, and they are of such a shape—being made with a platter bottom all in one piece—that they are cleaned with difficulty. Here the water exhibits its prinpal faults. It is so hard that unless soda be used with it, its cleaning usefulness is unsatisfactory.

The soup ladles and knives are also very badly worn, and should be condemned and replaced. Canoe-shaped, japanned bread trays were observed in use on the tables and approved. New copper soup and vegetable kettles are needed in the kitchen. The ruling prices of the leading articles of food were as follows, viz:

Beef		$4.50	Flour	barrel.. $4.65
Beef, corned	barrel..	13.00	Potatoes, Irish,	1.30-2.00
Bacon		.13	Potatoes, sweet	100 pounds.. 75
Ham		.15	Butter	.27½
Codfish		.08½	Sugar, granulated	.07

The cost of the ration was 28½ cents.

The storage for supplies in this department is too limited in space to admit of the good order and neatness which should be maintained. The oven used in the bakehouse is of the brick reverberatory kind, with a capacity for three hundred 2-pound 4-ounce loaves at a charge.

The account books were found complete and well kept, and the methods of purchase, inspection, and issue were regular and in accordance with regulations.

The stock of household supplies on hand was reported as follows, viz:

Bedsteads	6	Blankets, G. W	201
Mattresses, barrack	163	Blankets, white H	80
Mattresses, hospital	52	Sheets, linen	640
Pillows, cotton	96	Sheets, cotton	324
Pillow cases, linen	269	Counterpanes, linen	144
Pillow cases, cotton	144	Counterpanes, cotton	100

These are stored in the attic of barrack B, and well cared for.

SHOPS.

Carpenter.

Treasurer's office shows account of materials and labor expended up to September 1, 1890, and account of materials purchased, but not posted at all. In this shop, which was started May 8, 1890, books are kept showing expenditure of labor and materials to November 22, 1890, and receipts to October 30, 1890, posted to September 6, 1890. No account of materials received kept since October 30, 1890. Tickets of driver, similar to a bill of lading, kept and turned into treasurer. Journal of work done kept in good order, and the work is of a superior character. No inventory has ever been taken.

Harness.

Contains inventory of private and Home tools, but nothing else. Accounts in desultory fragments of expenditure of materials and labor from September 1, 1890, to November 21, 1890. Not posted, nor before to-day examined by treasurer. Shop too small—should be doubled in dimensions.

Tin.

This shop is in the same building with the plumber. The structure is 22 by 32 feet, of two stories and a basement. There is no power, except of hand or foot, used in any of the shops. This shop was not clean, and its account books, though not properly kept, made an intelligent showing of materials and labor expended from May 19, 1890, to November 21, 1890.

Blacksmith.

Its accounts were started May 9, 1890, and continued to June 1, 1890, showing disposition of materials and labor, but not of receipts. There is need here of a metal screen between the forge and the combustible sides of the building, as a precaution against fire. The shop is well equipped.

Paint.

Books show efforts of treasurer's clerk to show how the books should be kept, as the first two pages are in his handwriting. It exhibits expenditure of labor and materials to date, but nothing of receipts. The work is well done, but the shop is very small and inconvenient, being a low attic over the carpenter's shop.

Shoemaker.

Accounts show debits for labor and materials to September 30, 1890, and credits for repairs to August 31, 1890, not posted in treasurer's books. The shop is over the coal shed and is doing creditable work with one shoemaker.

Tailor.

Accounts show debits for labor only—no credits.

The shop accounts require thorough and complete regulation. The books of no two of them are alike in form or method. No inspection reports are made at this Branch except of subsistence stores. Bills of materials for the shops are marked O. K. by the person receiving them, and this is accepted as an inspection report, without further certificate.

OIL AND TOOLS.

The storehouse of the oil, tools, and powder used in morning and evening gun, has accounts showing receipts and issues. It is not as cleanly kept as it should be.

HOSPITAL.

The two lower rooms of the eastern barrack, or one nearest the present dining hall, are occupied by the hospital—one as sick ward, 22 beds, and the other, 24 beds, for convalescents, but they were found slightly mingled. The wards were clean, comfortable, and well-ventilated. The dispensary in the central part of the barrack was not in good order, nor as clean as it should be. The record books were found as follows, viz:

I. Record of admissions and readmissions, not posted since April 30, 1890.
II. Case book, posted to November 16, 1890.
III. Record of convalescents, kept to January 2, 1890, not since; excuse, shifting of patients from one ward to another.
IV. Record of treated at sick call, not kept since July; men counted every ten days.
V. Record of deaths and causes; incomplete; kept in a small pocketbook; disposition of body not stated.
VI. Morning report shows brief diagnosis and treatment.
VII. Ration book—no proper one.
VIII. Record of medical supplies received—none.
IX. Journal of medical supplies—none.
X. Time book of employés—irregularly kept, and since November 14, one week, not kept at all.

It is believed that an improvement in the keeping of these records will be immediately made. The surgeon reports, regarding the "grippe," as follows:

PACIFIC BRANCH, NATIONAL HOME DISABLED VOLUNTEER SOLDIERS,
November 21, 1890.

General WM. W. AVERELL, U. S. A.,
Assistant Inspector-General, N. H. D. V. S.

SIR: In accordance with your directions to prepare a report upon the epidemic la grippe, as it appeared at this Branch, I have the honor to submit the following statement:

The first case of epidemic influenza appeared at this Branch on January 21, 1890, and until its disappearance, about the middle of March following, seven members in all came under treatment, with six recoveries, one terminating fatally. In its manifestations, the disease differed mainly from an ordinary bronchial catarrh of the spring months, by the greater severity of general constitutional symptoms, as muscular weakness and bodily prostration, following the subsidence of the bronchial affection. The fatal case was in that of a pronounced locomotor ataxia in the paralytic stage, admitted to hospital September 18, 1889. In this, the epidemic bronchial affection appeared March 3, and death ensued on the 16th of that month from heart failure, induced by the preëxisting advanced spinal disease. The other six cases of la grippe offered no marked complications other than the prostration remaining during convalescence from the affection of the respiratory organs, to be explained by the depressing influence of the disease upon the nervous system.

Preceding the outbreak of marked epidemic influenza, during its prevalence, and for several weeks after its subsidence, there occurred a number of cases of less severity, but probably caused by the same epidemic influence; these were neuralgia of the fifth cranial nerve, mostly of its superior vital branch, often obstinate and requiring energetic treatment, and milder catarrhal affections of the respiratory tract, which at other times would be called ordinary colds.

The treatment in cases of la grippe, aside from meeting the local indications given by cough and bronchial tenderness, was mainly tonic, and sustaining by the use of the preparations of Peruvian bark, strychnine, and alcoholic stimulants.

Very respectfully,

Dr. H. E. Hasse.

There have been only 47 deaths at the Home since it was occupied. The cemetery is upon an elevated plateau nearly half a mile north of the Home. The coffin cases, made at the Home, are completely covered with No. 27 sheet iron, to defend them from the attacks of burrowing animals.

FARM.

There are 200 acres under cultivation, upon a portion of which there is a flourishing orchard, containing the following varieties of fruit trees, viz:

Walnuts	217	Oranges	450
Figs	231	Lemons	250
Peaches	151
Apples	123	Total	1,560
Pears	138

Some of the fig trees have borne fruit this, their first year. There have been raised this year of cereals, 3,000 bushels of corn, and 200 tons of barley and oats, the latter two being cut for long forage. There were 8 acres of Irish potatoes, 2 acres of onions, and 1 of beets. There are kept 19 horses, 10 cows, 1 bull, and 150 hogs.

The buildings are a barn and stables in fair order, but not the best, tool houses, corn crib, cow pens, and poultry yards, the use of which has shown their value. Irrigation is necessary during the dry season.

Separate quarters and mess room are required by the teamsters and men employed upon the farm, to save the time now wasted in going to and from their meals. When the storage reservoir is completed, and a reliable supply of water for irrigation is stored, the farm will become a more valuable auxiliary to this Home.

The Home grounds on the west, south, and a portion of the north sides have been bordered with a wide setting of eucalyptus, pepper, California pine, and other ornamental trees. The grounds about the barracks and the officers' quarters have also been embellished with trees, plants, and shrubs; altogether 45,000 trees and shrubs have been set out this year. The rapidity of the growth of trees in this soil is almost incredible. An eucalyptus about 8 inches high and the size of a lead pencil, when set out in May, was, on the 22d of November following, over 6 feet high, and measured 5 inches around its trunk 6 inches above the ground. In three years these barren slopes of a year ago will begin to rejoice in groves and woodlands.

ADMINISTRATION.

The growth and development of this Home have been unquestionably vigorous and economical. The main object—the comfort and well-being of its beneficiaries—has been successfully attained. If an abundance of food well cooked, clean and comfortable clothing, spacious and well ventilated dormitories, medical attendance when needed, regular religious ministrations, a reading room, with books, newspapers, and magazines, even amusements and recreations, within daily view of the largest life in nature, can not bring reasonable content to the members of this Home, then life is mostly wasted in them, and they are as contented and happy as men can be who have quitted all other lives but their own. After careful inquiry and investigation among the members, some of whom I had known in former years, it may be stated with a knowledge of the truth that the percentage of malcontents in this Home is smaller than in several others. But being a new feature in a country unused to soldiers' homes, a discontented or unruly man can for a time easily abuse the confidence of sympathetic people, and give rise to unjust criticism of the Home and its administration.

On the 21st of November, 1890, the morning report showed—

Present for duty	356
On extra duty	163
Sick	37
In arrest	6
		562
Absent with leave	71
Absent without leave	5
		76
Total present and absent		638

The record books in the governor's office were all well kept and in excellent order, excepting one, which had not yet been opened, viz, the schedule of property in charge of the governor. This will be at once supplied. No passes are issued at this Home, except for an absence over night, and none to exceed ten days. The members enjoy full liberty to go and come during the day, and there is very little abuse of the privilege.

The index methods in the governor's office were so good that upon test the papers and full record of any member whose name was selected at random could be brought out and shown within one minute. Governor attends guardhouse every morning at 8 o'clock.

The treasurer's records and acc unt books were complete, and posted to date, with the exception of shop accounts. His exhibit of the condition of the several funds for which he is responsible has been submitted to the president of the Board of Managers.

PENSIONS.

There are 169 pensioners in this Home, and the total amount of their pensions for the previous quarter was $4,359.

POST FUND.

The post fund amounted to $1,402.74. The store and beer hall were found in good order, and conducted in accordance with regulations. Council of administration fixes prices; sales' books are kept; inventories taken quarterly, and kept in treasurer's office. No cash is received in either store or beer hall. All payments are made with metallic checks, obtained of the quartermaster's sergeant, upon governor's written order, with cash by members and regular employés, by those on the payrolls with order of treasurer, and by pensioners after regular quarterly muster day.

There were 195 men, including 23 civilians, employed on extra duty at the Home, at an expense for wages per month of $2,499.55, which do not agree with number reported on extra duty in the morning report. They were employed as follows, viz:

Current expenses	34	Construction	39
Subsistence	24	Farm and park	41
Clothing	2
Household	35	Total	195
Hospital	20

BUILDING.

Contracts have been let for the construction of a dining-hall, hospital, barrack, memorial hall, and administration building, which, when completed, will greatly add to the capacity, comfort, and ease of administration of the Home.

Measures have also been adopted for the extension of the horse railway from Santa Monica to convenient points within the Home grounds.

PENNSYLVANIA HOME, ERIE, MAY 8, 1890.

OFFICERS.

Maj. W. W. TYSON, Commander.
Capt. NOAH W. LOWELL, Quartermaster.
Lieut. WILLIAM MCGRAW, Adjutant.
Dr. SAMUEL F. CHAPIN, Surgeon.
Mr. W. W. THOMAS, Engineer.

The State appropriation for maintenance, beginning May 31, 1889, and terminating May 31, 1891, was $100,000.

The grounds about the Home have been graded and improved in a variety of ways. Sixteen acres of marshland have been filled and prepared for cultivation. The lowlands have been defended from encroachments of the lake by hedges of willows. Four hundred larch and linden trees and a large number of fruit trees have been set out, about 600 square yards of newly constructed hydraulic-cement walks are shaded with 50 large maples also newly set. Upon the lawn in front the shapes of the different corps badges are delineated in flowers.

The corridor, 140 by 12 by 20 feet, connecting the main building with the hospital, has been finished and lined with a splendid array of plants and flowers.

It and the cold frames near by contain 12,000 plants.

Five civilians, 1 assistant engineer, 1 farmer, and 3 nurses are employed. Detailed home labor is paid $3 or $4 per month.

A brick chapel and amusement hall 85 feet 6 inches by 46 feet, with a seating capacity for 700, has been designed and contracted for; also a pavilion 16 by 32 feet near Lake Erie.

QUARTERMASTER.

The value of clothing in store was $3,552.78, none spoiled. Worn-out clothing is made into rag carpets and mops, and scraps sold.

Cost of clothing per man per annum $23.40.

COMMISSARY.

Three hundred tons of ice on hand, gathered from the lake at a cost of $1 per ton. Its cost last year was but 51 cents; the railway charges for transportation made the difference.

Two months' supply of stores generally kept on hand, such as flour, coffee, sugar, tea, codfish, rice, sirup, rolled oats, and wheat, and spices. No spoiled stores; waste goes to the pigs on the farm.

The average cost of uncooked ration, 12.6 cents.

The average cost of ration on table, 14.2 cents.

The State appropriation for the present fiscal year was $130,000.

Expenditures were for quarter ending September 30, 1889	$28,729.48
Expenditures were for quarter ending December 31, 1889	37,304.42
Expenditures were for quarter ending March 31, 1890	32,338.64
Expenditures were for month of April, 1890	9,746.00
Expenditures were for month of April to May 15 (estimated)	5,000.00
	113,118.54

The new construction at this Home during the past year has been—

(1) An "old men's" cottage, 160 by 24 feet, one story high, with cellar and stone basement, surmounted with brick walls, steel-shingle roof, fireproof. The two wards, each accommodating 30 beds, are separated by a spacious hall and four rooms for attendants and stores. A wing to the rear at each end contains a sitting and reading room, with baths and closets in the extreme rear end.

The central projections to the rear holds the dining and service rooms and the kitchen.

Each ward has a ventilating shaft in the center, with fireplaces in two opposite sides and ventilating registers in the alternate sides. A portico, 10 feet wide, covering the front, completes the building, the cost of which, including the furniture ready for occupation, was $12,000. This building, so essential to the comfort of feeble old men requiring special diet, who are not sick enough to go in hospital and not quite strong enough to be trusted entirely with their own care, is an adaptation of the New Jersey pavilion, with such modifications as experience has suggested.

(2) A brick barn, stable, and carriage house combined, with metal roof, quite convenient and commodious, at a cost of $3,400.

(3) A carpenter and machine shop of stone at a cost of $1,600.

(4) A cold-storage house of stone, double, one side for meats and the other for sundries, metal roof, cost $2,000.

(5) Soap manufactory near boiler plant, of masonry and metal, fireproof, wherein soap is manufactured at one-third cost of same when purchased. One ton per quarter used.

(6) A sodded fieldwork has been erected, wherein are four guns mounted in barbette.

Four thousand three hundred dollars have been expended in miscellaneous repairs and improvements, $2,000 on roads, walks, and improvements of grounds, and $500 for additional books in library.

OFFICERS:

Col. W. C. HENRY, Commandant.
Lieut. W. H. WESLEY, Adjutant.
Lieut. N. H. HURFORD, Quartermaster.
Dr. M. J. GAHAN, Surgeon.
Mrs. M. E. HURFORD, Matron.

No appropriations by the State have been made since my last report, and none can be made until March, 1891. No financial statement has been made by the commandant of this Home, and forwarded to the president of the board of managers Nebraska Home Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, for the reason that the cost of maintenance is applied to provision for men, women, and children in common, and the officials have not thus far been able to separate the cost of the maintenance of the men from that of the others. This is not difficult with the clothing account, but with subsistence it is especially so, and under the head of household, when the new furniture for the cottages is considered, which women and children use with the husbands and fathers, no rule is easy to establish for a division of cost between them. The children are of all ages below fifteen years. Some have been born here. Great difficulties and embarrassments were experienced whilst the beneficiaries and all the industries of the Home were confined to the one main building, which culminated in various irregularities and disorders, resulting in a change of commandants.

The additional construction as projected in my last report proceeded under the direction of the new commandant with great energy. A new hospital 120 by 20 feet, with a dome over the central part, and a wing 45 by 20 feet, extending to the rear end of the center, was built and occupied by the sick. Each wing has ample room for the 12 beds it contains. Underneath the dome are three rooms, which narrow the hall to inconvenience, and renders the dome useless except as an external ornament. Necessity for an extension of the wings will shortly be found when the water-closets, which now open directly off the wards at the ends, may be differently arranged, with isolating vestibules or corridors between them and the wards.

The dining room and kitchen are in the central projection to the rear.

Seven double cottages, costing $824 each, have been built along a street laid out on the prairie some 300 yards west of the main building. These accommodate 14 families.

A comfortable cottage residence for the commandant at the head of the same street furnishes a home for him and his family.

A boiler house, 84 by 20 feet, a hundred feet to the rear of the main building, holds in one-half of it a pair of boilers of 25 and 40 horse power, respectively, and a pump. The latter, with a pressure of 20 pounds, lifts 250 barrels of water per hour from an inexhaustible well 30 feet deep to a tank 54 feet high, and of a capacity of 512 barrels.

IOWA HOME, MARSHALLTOWN, MAY 21, 1891.

OFFICERS.

Col. MILO SMITH, Commandant.
Capt. FRED T. WELLS, Adjutant.
Capt B. E. EBERHART, Quartermaster.
Dr. W. B. WATERS, Surgeon.

The appropriations for the year were $10 per month for maintenance of each member, and $1,050 for salaries and wages. An appropriation for the erection of much-needed quarters for the officers is expected to be made at the next session of the legislature.

This home has begun to meet the necessities of the sick by the erection of a first-class hospital, which will contain seventy-two beds. It is now under contract, and the foundation is building. Its plan embraces several excellencies which justify its submission with this report. It is 131 feet in length, 40 feet wide, of two stories, with a specially easy flight of stairs between them, and with spacious verandas and balconies on the front and on each side. On the right of the entrance hall are the surgeon's office and dispensary, and on the left the reception and matron's rooms; on the right beyond the dispensary are the waiting-room, for members attending sick call, reading room, and first ward. Beyond the matron's room, on the left, are six rooms for seclusion or special treatment. Then a transverse hall, in rear of which is the dining hall, 18 by 42 feet, to which in rear adjoins the kitchen, 20 by 30 feet, with dormitories for servants above it. There are eight wards on the second story. The water closets and baths are reached by the transverse hall on either floor, and through a well ventilated vestibule to an outside tower 18 by 25 feet. The vestibule may be entered also from the veranda and balcony on the side of the building next the tower. The hospital is to be completed by November 15.

Three hundred feet to the rear of the main building a boiler house is to be completed by November 15, to hold a battery of four boilers 16 feet by 54 inches, and also a dynamo to sustain 300 incandescent lights within the buildings.

QUARTERMASTER.

Not more than forty suits of clothing are kept in store, and appeared in good order, and of excellent quality. Wachusett flannel coats, sacks, with four buttons, $3.87; vest, $1; trousers, $2.12; heavy Pontonac trousers, $3.50; wool hat, soft crown, wide rolled brim, $1.40; socks, gray mixed, "Gladiator," seamless, for summer, $1.10 per dozen, for winter, $1.15; cheviot blue mixed overshirt, 54 cents; sewed shoes, some of which have been in use two years, $1.50 per pair.

MINNESOTA HOME, MINNEHAHA, MAY 23, 1890.

OFFICERS.

Capt. THOMAS MCMILLAN, Commandant.
Capt. RALPH VAN BRUNT, Adjutant.
Dr. A. A. AMES, Surgeon.
Rev. HORACE WORDEN, Chaplain.
Mr. MERRITT A. WHITE, Engineer.

Appropriations for construction for the current year were $50,000, expended as follows: $40,000 upon building and equipping the hospital, $7,000 in laundry machinery, and $3,000 in improvement of grounds and buildings.

There were $20,000 appropriated for maintenance in addition to the aid received from the United States Government, and the further addition of all surplus of pensions above $4, amounting to about $800 per annum.

The only new construction of importance has been that of a hospital on the site mentioned in my last report. Its plan embraces a main building of three stories, 50 feet square, with two wings of two stories, each 120 by 40 feet, the central building and one wing having been completed, with two wards of a capacity of 24 beds each. Its foundation is 80 feet above the water of the Mississippi, which flows by the foot of the cliff on which it is established. The materials are pressed brick, with brown stone trimmings, slate roof, and copper cornices. All partitions are of brick, and the floors are practically fireproof. In plan, heating, and ventilation it is similar to the Soldiers' Home Hospital at Washington, D. C. It is warmed with hot water, and the means and appliances for thorongh ventilation have been elaborate, and apparently complete. The floors are of maple, and the finish of oak. The kitchen and dormitories for servants are on the third floor.

QUARTERMASTER.

The clothing is purchased in Boston for $10 a suit, and consists of a heavy strong coat, with vest, and light blue trousers, all well made. The hats, all wool, soft crown, wide, rolled brim, costs 75 cents; all wool, indigo-blue shirt, $16 per dozen; cotton socks, mixed, $1.10 per dozen; wool socks, gray, $4 per dozen. The value of the clothing on hand was about $400.

COMMISSARY.

There are no strict regular issues of supplies or rations. The meat and butter are weighed when delivered.

This Home is fortunate in a management which has been able to promptly meet the pressing necessities of the large number of sick among its beneficiaries. Their percentage of the number present is 30, or, if those attending sick call be included, 43 per cent., which is the highest in any Home. The death rate among the whole number cared for since June 3, 1889, is 94 in 1,000, which is very high, the next rate to it being that of the New York and New Jersey Homes, which is 75 in 1,000.

La grippe made its appearance on January 2, 1890, and afflicted 27 members, or about 19 per cent. of the members present, but no deaths resulted from it alone, and it disappeared April 6, 1890.

Mrs. W. H. SMITH, Assistant Matron.
Capt. J. H. HUBBARD, Adjutant and Quartermaster.

The appropriation for maintenance at this Home by the State is $3 per week for each beneficiary. Its cost as reported by the secretary of the Board of Trustees is $147.52 per capita per annum.

All the projects for construction mentioned in my report of last year, have been successfully carried out. The new administration building, in a part of which the superintendent with his family resides, is of pleasing architecture and well planned for its purpose, and admirably situated on the border of the lake. It is finished and floored with the fine native woods of this region, and among its useful and convenient apartments are eight furnished rooms for the occupation of officials, whose regular visits thus facilitated, result to the advantage and improvement of the Home.

A reservoir 64 feet above the ground, with a capacity of 64,000 gallons, has been established and is in operation. Six hydrants distributed throughout the grounds with hose attached afford a good defense against fire, and a complete system of sewerage has been established. The new dining hall, with verandas and balconies, and a seating capacity for 300, has comfortable, well furnished rooms above for 40 old women, widows of soldiers. There are 14 such beneficiaries now cared for within them. The new kitchen, with its ranges and various well arranged appliances, adjoins the dining hall. The baking house is furnished with Reid's combination or sand oven, costing $100, with a capacity for seventy loaves, which does its work well without adding to the temperature of the room. The layers of sand within its lining retain the heat generated in a small furnace within it, and prevent loss of heat when the loaves are removed for a fresh charge. When in operation, the thermometer shows a temperature of 400 Fah. within the oven.

The new laundry is completely equipped with first-class machinery. All these constructions permitted a large vacation of the old main building, which has been repaired with new floors and renovated throughout, so that its barrack capacity has been more than doubled. Forty pretty cottages costing about $350 each are now occupied by disabled and infirm soldiers and their wives. No children are received at this Home, nor young women whether married or widows.

A large and convenient barn, and a cold-storage building have also been erected. Upon a commanding elevation overlooking the Home and the lake, a tasteful and commodius building has been constructed by the survivors of the Twenty-first Wisconsin Infantry, the upper story of which is divided into four barrack quarters for disabled volunteer soldiers, members of that regiment having preference. The lower floor is divided into five rooms, one of which is a museum, and the others for social purposes. An island in the lake near the Home, has been purchased, to which a bridge is to be thrown. It will be used for recreative purposes. The disbursements, receipts and liabilities are reported as follows, viz:

The value of subsistence on hand is reported as $350.

The hospital, under the care of the estimable matron is as clean, comfortable and homelike as the sick could desire.

Some trifling modifications of the water-closets and baths will complete its good arrangemement. Sixty-three per cent. of the members were attacked with la grippe, which made its appearance January 1, 1890, with the usual characteristics. None died from it, and it disappeared March 25, 1890.

A cemetery has been laid out giving to each regiment, battery, and battalion of Wisconsin troops a lot for the burial of deceased members of such organizations.

Three miles of driveways have been constructed within the grounds, and the natural woodlands in which the Home is embowered have not been otherwise disturbed, except to cut out the underbrush and trim the trees. The difficulties attending the care of old wives and widows of disabled soldiers have been successfully mastered in this Home. Here, relieved from care, and with comfort assured to all their remaining days, the old couples may enjoy a rest sweetened by the unfailing charms of sky, lake, and forest, until they themselves shall fade out of the delightful scene to which they now lend tranquil animation.

MICHIGAN HOME, GRAND RAPIDS, MAY 28, 1890.

OFFICERS.

General B. R. PIERCE, Commandant.
Maj. JAMES W. LONG, Adjutant.
Col. C. B. HINSDILL, Commissary.
Dr. R. H. STEVENS, Acting Surgeon.
Mr. E. P. EVERETT, Chief Engineer.

The State appropriation for subsistence, salaries, and other expenses necessary to the maintenance of this Home, in addition to the amount received from the United States Government for the year 1890, as provided by act of Congress approved August 27, 1888, was $35,295. This is the language of the act of the State legislature, and it will be perceived that it is based on the expectation of receiving the full amount from the United States Government, and, failing to get that, there will be quite a deficit.

The new construction at this Home embraces a new hospital of two stories and basement, built of stone and brick, with stone trimmings, with a capacity for 100 beds. It is 117 feet 6 inches by 48 feet 6 inches, and the central section is 98 feet in depth. It has Georgia pine floors, wainscoting of hard woods, and tinted walls. The "Ruttan" system for heating and ventilation is used, and it is claimed that the air in all the wards is changed every fifteen minutes. A strong downward draught is maintained through all the water-closets and a flushing apparatus in the urinals, so that no odors whatever may be detected. The system seems complete and thoroughly efficient. The temperature is under complete control. The cost of the system was $2,464. The surgeon reports that since the hospital was occupied, December 17, 1889, rheumatism has diminished 50 per cent. The cost of the building was $25,000. The furniture is all new, and purchased in November, 1889. The arrangement of the dispensary, storeroom, operating and dressing rooms, and dining room and kitchen is convenient, and they are all in admirable order. The light within it is everywhere sufficient and agreeable. A morgue has been built in rear of the hospital.

A new cottage dormitory south of the main building has two stories and a capacity for 100 beds, with the same system of warming and ventilation that is in hospital. A new baking house and a first-class laundry fully equipped adjoins the cottage in rear. The cost of this building was $12,000.

Attached to the rear of the main building an extension has been added, wherein is placed a tripod boiler 36 feet high and 40 inches in diameter, surrounded with 1,000 horizontal tubes, all contained in a stack terminating in a truncated cone, the summit of which is 95 feet above the ground. A pressure of 80 pounds is carried. It is used to warm the main building, and furnishes also steam for the laundry machinery, a Blake pump, and to actuate a Westinghouse engine, which runs two dynamos sustaining 640 incandescent lights. A newly built spacious root house, 60 feet by 25 feet, with double walls of brick and stone and a galvanized iron roof, is situated in rear. The completion of a railway from Grand Rapids through the grounds facilitates transportation with the penalty of some disturbing noise, owing to its nearness to the hospital and dormitories.

The main building since the removal of the hospital from its upper story has been renovated throughout and occupied as dormitories, increasing capacity of Home 300 beds.

QUARTERMASTER.

Value of clothing on hand, about $400; same cost as in 1888, except as follows, viz: Nelson Knitting Company's socks, cotton, $1 per dozen; felt hats for winter, $8.25 per dozen; straw hats for summer, $4.50 per dozen.

COMMISSARY.

A month's supply generally kept on hand. Value about $2,000 Cost of ration uncooked, $13 and 5 cents; cost of ration on table, $16 and 8 cents; pay roll, $544 per month.

The necessity for residences for the officers of the Home still continues. If built the convenience and comfort of the officers and their proper relations to the Home and to their duties would be worthily regarded, and the rooms now occupied by them in the main building thus vacated would afford dormitory accommodations for one hundred and fifty additional members.

The surgeon reports that la grippe made its first appearance January 6, 1890; that the whole number afflicted was 575, or 92.6 per. cent of the members, and that the primary symptoms disappeared March 20, 1890. Secondary and tertiary forms still present in direct ratio to barometric increase, and inversely to the presence of ozone. The notes of the surgeon are fully set forth at the conclusion of this report.

As the elements and details of a good and economical administration of this Home have approached perfection, the energetic commandant has turned his attention to the needed and fitting embellishment of the grounds and woodlands surrounding it, the agreeable results of which are beginning to appear.

The State legislature appropriated $100,000 for construction on April 25, 1890, and at the same time $47,602.16 for maintenance.

The following buildings are under contract for construction, viz: Assembly hall, library building, bathhouse, restaurant building, ice house and cold-storage building, Mack cottage, Dill cottage.

Six cottages for officers' residences are also under contract for construction, each to cost $1,700, and four of them are to be finished by November 1, 1890, the remaining two by January 1, 1891. An annex to the hospital is building of cut stone, in the form of a Greek cross. It will be connected with main hospital by a corridor, and is designed for 50 beds. It will present an interesting appearance among the many varied and charming architectural features of this remarkable home.

A new building of tasteful design, and of the same materials used in the construction of all the buildings of the Home, is nearly completed, designed to contain all the shops; its cost will be $4.000. New stables, 80 by 40 feet, of stone with slate roof have been finished at a cost of $3,000. The specifications of workmanship and materials required in the erection of the buildings of this Home are copious with suggestions of the highest excellence combined with the strictest economy.

The value of clothing on hand is about $2,000; none spoiled.

COMMISSARY.

The value of subsistence stores on hand, $2,000. There is apparently no opportunity to improve the means of preparing and serving food at this Home, the initial methods were so well studied. The cost of the ration on table is 14 cents.

HOSPITAL.

The hospital is one of the best and cleanest. The features not noted in previous reports are rubber points affixed to the heads of the beds to prevent abrasion of walls. Rocking chairs for all patients, one of a new pattern, with elastic slat back arranged upon small spiral springs, so that it fits itself to the back of the occupant at any inclination, whether in motion or at rest. Trousers made of heavy "denham" and loose long jackets of cotton flannel, with buttons, for paralytics, two suits each for cleanliness and economy. A fully equipped special laundry in the basement of one wing, with useful appliances for all kinds of cleansing and disinfecting. Check lockers arranged for each ward, like a post office, for safe-keeping of the effects of patients. The overflow of patients of the hospital has been quartered in one of the cottages to await the completion of the annex. The surgeon reports the appearance of la grippe on January 2, 1890, and its disappearance April 20. The whole number afflicted was 350, about 50 per cent. of the members, but none died from it alone.

The driveways and walks have been extended and greatly improved with broken stone and gravel, and the setting of trees and shrubbery and the growth of lawns upon the interior plazas around the fountains newly established are bringing that complemental verdure so essential to a pleasing effect, with the wealth of neutral tints which dominate the impressive array of buildings.

NEW YORK HOME, BATH, JUNE 2, 1890.

OFFICERS:

General WILLIAM F. ROGERS, Superintendent.
Maj. S. H. LEAVITT, Adjutant.
Maj. FRANK P. FROST, Quartermaster.
Dr. E. H. TWEEDY, Surgeon.
Dr. G. H WENDE, Assistant Surgeon.
Mr. H. H. HAVILL, Engineer.

The State appropriation for maintenance and for repairs and betterments of buildings was $145,000, but nothing for original construction. The new construction which has been completed since my last report are, first, a new laundry, 105 by 50 feet, of two stories, with tiled floors, and fully equipped with the most modern improved machinery, the mangle being 100 inches in length, the largest in use at any Home. In the story above there are 26 bath rooms, 7 by 12 feet, the tessellated floors of each pair graded to the division line between them for drainage, the inclosing walls of the rooms of Georgia pine, the bottoms 8 inches above the floors for cleanliness and ventilation, the bathing tubs in the center of each room, large and enameled, constituting the finest bathing house in any Home.

AN ELECTRIC-LIGHT PLANT.

The system is that known as the Western Electric Company's Low Tension and consists of 2 steam boilers, 16 by 60, with 42 four-inch tubes.

Two self-contained high-speed engines, size 11 by 14 inches, built by Woodbury Engine Company, of Rochester, N. Y.

One arc dynamo, of 12 double carbon lamps of 2,000 candle power each for outdoor service, and 3 incandescent dynamos, of 450 lights each, or a total of 1,350 lights at 110 volts, 16 candle power each for all buildings. Line shaft from which all dynamos are driven, the power being so arranged as to drive any or all dynamos with either or both engines.

The boilers are of the same pattern as nearly all the boilers in use at the Home, and are set in the same battery and so connected that any or all boilers may be used to furnish steam power for the electric plant. The boilers are in use during the day for heating or furnishing power, as may be required, all boilers carrying 60 pounds of steam. When the time of day comes to use the lights the boiler which is to be used for that purpose is cut out of the main battery and the steam allowed to rise to 80 pounds and to continue so until such time as the lights are no longer required, then the boiler is cut back again into the main battery.

There are only 700 incandescent lights now in use, so that it is not necessary to run more than 2 out of the 3 incandescent dynamos at any one time.

The engines are so set as to belt direct to the main line shaft, and all dynamos belt direct from the same shaft, each dynamo and engine being furnished with a friction clutch, so arranged that each dynamo or engine may be started or stopped without interference with the lights or any other part of the plant.

The steam from the engines exhausts into the distribution tank and condensation receiver, from there it passes to any or all buildings for heating as the case may require, and when condensation takes place it flows back to the same tank from which it is pumped to replenish the boilers.

Each building has its lines of wires run direct and independent from switch-board in station, and at that point passes through a switch which is to control the lights in each building, so that the lights may be put out in any building without interfering with any other.

Six hundred lights are now in use from the time of starting to 9.30 o'clock, and from that time until daylight, 250.

As to the life of each lamp, the plant has not been in use long enough to determine, but it is safe to say, it exceeds six hundred hours, that being the time specified in contract guaranty.

The cost of running the plant at the present time of the year is as follows:

One dynamo and engine tender, one month	$35.00
One fireman, one month	30.00
One lamp tender, daytime, one month	30.00
Fuel, anthracite coal, 8 tons, at $3.90	31.20
Oil, 30 gallons, at 40 cents	12.00
Total	158.20

The total cost of the electric-light plant at this Home, including the building of the station of brick, 60 by 40 feet, and some extra work outside of the contract was $18,226.90. The expense of running it does not exceed 10 per cent. per annum of this cost.

TELEPHONE.

This Home is provided with a complete telephonic service, which is connected with the town, 1½ miles distant.

A new building, 40 by 60 on the terrace of the hospital, and connected with its eight wards by a corridor in rear, in which is installed a new and fully equipped laundry, and 5 bathing rooms for the sick. These baths, in their construction, convenience, and sanitary conditions are the best in use. The kitchen and the dining room of this hospital satisfy the best ideas of their utilities and fitness.

The wards and main corridor are spacious and admirably arranged, the dispensary, and operating room, and storeroom unequaled in fitness and equipment, and while the administration is undoubtedly diligent, there is a lack of completeness and readiness in its records which reveal a want of experience, or that experience has not had a proper record.

A hospital of this magnitude is unfortunate in wanting a matron with adequate assistance.

An efficient matron would see that a hundred necessary things were done in a hospital which would escape the supervision of ordinary men. The ventilation, cleanliness, good order, and the multifarious details of housekeeping and homemaking, for which a woman has generic talent, will remain incomplete or neglected in this hospital until a matron, with at least three trained nurses, shall be appointed.

The chemicals used, and their cost for operating the sewage (60,000 gallons each 24 hours), disinfecting tanks one year, were as follows, viz:

17,520 pounds 60 per cent. chloride of iron, at 5 cents	$963.60
50 barrels quick lime, at $1	50.00
1,392 pounds black oxide manganese, at 5 cents	6.56
3,480 pounds sulphuric acid, at 2 cents	88.30
Labor	468.00
Total	1,646.46

The system is operating with satisfaction.

QUARTERMASTER.

The money value of clothing on hand is $5,500, and none spoiled. The store which has been placed in regular order is overhauled once a month.

The amount on hand is larger than usual. The articles notable for excellence and cheapness were socks—cotton, 95 cents per dozen; wool, $1.40 per dozen. The cotton of mixed colors and the wool, called "Quaker," slate color. A storehouse is provided, where the clothing of furloughed men is neatly folded, labeled, and cared for, and a rag depot, where clothing which can not be repaired is separated into four classes of rags, and baled for sale. Clothing which can be repaired is saved and issued to needy men temporarily at the post.

COMMISSARY.

The value of supplies on hand was $2,500. The cost of the ration uncooked was 14 cents, and on the table 15.75 cents.

The baking house is provided with a pair of old-fashioned ovens, in each of which three hundred loaves of 2 pounds 10 ounces are baked at a single charge.

The erection of an extension to the dining hall and kitchen, is contemplated in the immediate future which, with a reconstruction of dormitory water closets, will very nearly complete this Home.

From the report of the surgeon, this Home was the first attacked with la grippe, which appeared on December 20, 1889. The total number of cases was 323, or about 27 per cent. of the members. The last case appeared on March 29, 1890.

NEW JERSEY HOME, KEARNEY, JUNE 10, 1890.

OFFICERS.

Maj. PETER ROGERS, Superintendent.
Capt. THOMAS ARROWSMITH, Adjutant.
Dr. J. A. BRUMLEY, Surgeon.
Rev. ISAAC TUTTLE, Chaplain.

There has been no new construction at this home since last year, but the grounds and surroundings have been graded and improved.

Some auxilliary improvements have been made in the ventilation of the hospital by the superintendent, whereby the foul air is drawn from the wards with greater rapidity and efficiency. The dispensary still remains in the administration building, instead of having been removed to the hospital, where it should be.

The record books in the superintendent's office are in most exact order, and one cash book is worthy special notice. It comprehends receipts from all sources, and the expenditures under all the different heads.

Somewhat similar in form to the financial statement made by these Homes quarterly, but more elaborate. This book is kept posted so as to exhibit daily the financial condition of the Home.

Register boards are hung on the walls of the superintendent's office, representing every ward in the Home, including the hospital, holding cards which represent the beds in the wards, so that at a glance may be seen what beds are occupied or vacant, with the names of occupants on their cards. Also a register board showing by cards the occupation and locality of each member on special or extra duty. Different colored cards are used for present, absent, and T. A. P.

These register boards must agree with the morning reports daily.

QUARTERMASTER.

The value of clothing on hand, $3,500, and no loss from damage. Tar paper used in storing.

COMMISSARY.

Value of subsistence on hand, $500, and none spoiled. The cost of the purchased ration for the year 16.86 cents, and on table 19.45 cents.

This is the only Home that was exempt from invasion of la grippe.

The chief characteristics of this, the oldest State Home, is the clock-like regularity of its administration, the almost complete absence of its members from their quarters during the daytime, if the weather be fair, the shade of the trees and the porches being their favorite resorts. The arrangement of the pavilions of the Home, and of the dining, bath, and reading rooms, is such as to enable the members to avail themselves of all the benefits of the institution with the least practicable exertion.

CONNECTICUT HOME, NOROTON, JUNE 12, 1890.

OFFICERS.

Dr. Byron W. Munson, Superintendent and Surgeon.
Lieut. Lewis G. Logan, Assistant Superintendent and Engineer.
Lieut. Franklin Dart, Adjutant and Quartermaster.
Mrs. Franklin Dart, Matron.

The appropriations are biennial, and their amount unknown at the Home, as no money is used here. On January 3, 1889, this was not an inviting Home, and its dormitories in the main building were unsafe, its accommodations were heterogeneous and limited, and its administration was without adequate means or satisfactory scope. The extent, variety, and excellence of the developments which have been made since that time, a period of seventeen months, are marvelous.

The main building has been modified, beautified, and thoroughly finished and furnished in a style worthy of the Home and the State, a commodious and elegant hospital, a chapel, boiler house, laundry, club house, and all the concomitants of the highest degree of comfort and of a liberal administration have sprung into useful existence. All the new constructions were completed in the summer of 1889 and have been in use since, except the hospital, which was first occupied April 15, 1890.

The new hospital consists of an administration building 80 by 31 feet and two wings, projecting to the rear of a single ward, each 85 by 29 feet 4 inches. The former is separated from the wards by a transverse hall, and contains on its first floor the hospital office, surgery, dispensary, operating and dressing rooms, and storerooms; on the second floor staff quarters, nurses' rooms, sitting room, and library; and on the third floor domestics' rooms and kitchen.

The material entering into the construction and finish are brick, terra cotta, red sandstone, bluestone, white and yellow pine and ash, and asphaltic concrete. This latter material, used for the ward floors, has been found objectionable even after the surface had been improved with an admixture of varnish and umber. The water-closets and bathrooms, furnished with the best modern improvements, open off the cross hall and are separated from the wards.

The wards have a capacity of 26 beds each, one being designed for surgical cases and the other for medical service. The provisions for warming and ventilating are indirect radiation for the wards and direct for the administration building.

The wards are ceiled above, leaving a space 6 feet deep between the ceiling and the peak of the roof, which on each ward is surmounted with a latticed cupola ventilator 6 feet square.

In both the side walls of each ward, which are 16 feet 8 inches high, are three rows of regulators, twelve in each row; the first row 1 foot square 8 inches above the floor, and through which the foul air is drawn out and up through shafts into the chamber beneath the roof, and escapes through the cupola. The second row, 12 by 18 inches, and 5 feet above the floor, furnishes the warmed air, which has passed through a metal chamber containing coils of steam pipe. The third row, 12 feet above the floor, supplies fresh air from the outside. By a combination of the regulators nearly any degree of temperature not below that of the external air may be obtained and any degree of purification attained; a true aspiration being practicable, the heat being supplied from the boiler house 200 feet away. The workmanship and finish is of the best description.

Two resident house physicians are employed at the Home, and have quarters in the hospital. Two trained women nurses have been employed since May 12, and have quarters at the hospital. Their service has been in every way satisfactory. Two orderlies are employed to assist them.

The club house for members is 50 by 20 feet, with a 12-foot veranda. The root cellar is underneath it. The boiler house is equipped with two horizontal boilers, 16 feet by 54 inches and 12 feet by 44 inches, and one Shapley boiler, auxiliary. All of these may be used together, independently or in pairs, at high or low pressure, with return when using low pressures and governor pump for high pressure. Power is furnished to the laundry, which is new and fully equipped.

An 8 inch sewer has been constructed, over 2 miles in length, from the Home to an estuary of Long Island Sound.

The water supply has not fulfilled the hopes of the management; the artesian wells having a communication, one of them was abandoned, and the other is yielding only 14 gallons per minute.

A tasteful chapel 80 by 30 feet, with seating capacity for 200, has been built, and its walls adorned with some of the largest and best pictures of sacred subjects left by the late Benjamin Fitch, the founder of the Home.

The grounds have been well graded, walks laid out and lighted, and the highway passing by the Home from the railway station has been improved, and sustained by a retaining wall.

QUARTERMASTER.

The value of clothing on hand not issued is $1,500, and none spoiled. Well-regulated storerooms for clothing and individual effects have been arranged in the basement of the main building.

COMMISSARY.

The value of subsistence stores on hand, including tobacco, was $700. The cost of the purchased ration, including tobacco, was 15.7 cents. and the cost of the ration on table was not exceeding 16 cents. The storeroom was in admirable order. The dining room seats 213. The kitchen well furnished and in good order.

La grippe attacked the home January 3, 1890, 50 men being prostrated the first day, and the next 20 more. No deaths from it. The whole number afflicted was 150, about 63 per cent. of the members. The usual post grippe symptoms subsequently appeared (but long after its primary symptoms had disappeared a daughter of the superintendent was violently attacked on the 14th of June with the regular typical disease, and barely lived through its crisis on the 17th of June). She had not been attacked with it during the winter. "The resident consulting physician and surgeon," the superintendent, has in use a record card for patients in the hospital, which sets forth the temperature of ward each hour, kind and quantity of medicine, stimulants and food administered, the respiration, pulse and temperature of patient, with remarks of symptoms and treatment. It is the only hospital in any Home inspected in which the use of such cards has been observed by me. It is in the following form, viz:

Connecticut Soldiers' Hospital, Noroton Heights.

VERMONT HOME, BENNINGTON, JUNE 17, 1890.

OFFICERS.

Capt. R. J. COFFEY, Superintendent.
Mrs. R. J. COFFEY, Matron.

No appropriations by the State have been made since the biennial session of the legislature, November 25, 1888, which was mentioned in my first report.

There has been no new construction at this Home since my last report. The need of a hospital has become, if possible, more apparent. The sick, in a back room of the main building, receive all the attention and care possible in such quarters, but they would be far better off in a hospital ward where the ills of one patient would not necessarily disturb all others, as here they must. If their lack of hospital accommodations appear so plentiful in fine summer weather, it must amount to distress in winter, when members are confined to quarters. The farm of 200 acres is an advantage and a blessing, as it not only contributes a full supply of vegetables and milk, but also furnishes light occupation and agreeable work to such members as are able and willing to be employed, at no cost to the Home; and about $800 per annum are realized from sales of surplus products. The admirable order and cleanliness which prevail everywhere in this Home, in its sleeping rooms, dining room, store rooms, and kitchens, and the wholesome food prepared and served to the members, make the regret greater that the comfort and pleasure of life within it should be marred by the oppressing presence of a crowded sick-room under the same roof.

La Grippe found this Home on January 21, 1890, and attacked twenty members, or about 33 per cent., but none died from it.

KANSAS HOME. OLD FORT DODGE.

OFFICER.

Capt. D. L. SWEENEY, Commandant.

My information regarding this Home was not obtained by inspection.

It resulted from an accidental meeting with Capt. Henry Booth, secretary of its board of managers, at the Western Branch of the National Home, on May 19, 1890, when he informed me of the existence of the Home, and I requested that a copy of the acts of Congress, under which the State of Kansas acquired title to the Home grounds, and of the act of the legislature creating the Home, should be sent me in order that the Board of Managers, National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, might be supplied with that exact official information of the status of the Home which would be required to show that the State was entitled to the aid provided by Congress, under the act approved August 27, 1888. On June 14, I received the following letter in response to my request, inclosing an excerpt from a newspaper and copy of by-laws and regulations and rules of the Kansas Soldiers' Home, viz;

LARNED, KANSAS, June 7, 1890.

General WM. W. AVERELL:

SIR; In compliance with your request, I have the honor to furnish you the following information relating to the Kansas State Soldiers' Home, established by act of legislature approved March 2, 1889.

First occupied January, 1890. Extent of area, 118 acres. Obtained from the United States by act of Congress, $1.25 per acre. The buildings are the old barracks formerly occupied by United States troops. Six large buildings known as officers' quarters, three large buildings known as men's barracks, and sundry other buildings, such as coal house, stables, buildings not suited, however, for use as Soldiers' Home without remodeling.

Board of managers are three, appointed for one, two, and three years, respectively, by the governor of the State; those first appointed in 1889, J. D. Barker three years, Ira F. Collins two years, and Henry Booth one year.

Only one officer has as yet been appointed, Capt. D. L. Sweeney commandant.

The legislature at its last session appropriated $5,000 for 1889 and $5,000 for 1890, to be used in repairing buildings and maintaining inmates; act making this appropriation was approved March 2, 1889.

I have no copy of the creative act except in the copy of the statutes, and can not send it. I inclose a copy of Rules and Regulations.

Respectfully, yours,

HENRY BOOTH,
Secretary.

[An act of Congress to sell Fort Dodge Reservation to the State of Kansas for soldiers' home purposes. Fiftieth Congress, second session. H. R., 8740. Calendar, No. 2642.]

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES.

JULY 26, 1888.—Read twice and referred to Committee on Public Lands.
FEBRUARY 4, 1889.—Reported by Mr. Plumb.

AN ACT to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to convey to the State of Kansas certain lands therein.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he hereby is, authorized to sell and convey to the State of Kansas, the following described lands, being the remaining portion of the Fort Dodge Military Reservation in said State, to wit: Lots numbered three, five, six, and seven, of section three, township twenty-seven south, of range twenty-four west, on condition that said State shall, within twelve months from the passage of this act pay or cause to be paid therefor the sum of one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, and shall within three years establish and provide for the maintenance thereon, a home in which provision shall be made for the care and maintenance of officers, soldiers, sailors, and marines, who have served in the army, navy or marine corps of the United States, their dependent parents, widows or orphans, under such rules and regulations as said State may provide.

The above act of Congress was secured by the diligent efforts of the members of Lewis Post and the loyal citizens of Dodge City. They have been working for over a year to secure the establishment of a State soldiers' home.

Some days ago they forwarded to Governor Humphrey the necessary funds to pay the Government for the above tract of land. The purchase includes the buildings, forty in number.

In a subsequent issue we will give a detailed description of this property, and also the act of our legislature making an appropriation for the improvement of the home.

VETERANS' HOME, YOUNTVILLE, CAL., NOVEMBER 18, 1890.

OFFICERS:

Hon. JAS. A. WAYMIRE, President.
W. C. BURNETT, Vice President.
Col. A. L. ROCKWELL, Secretary.
GEO. W. WATTS, Treasurer.
Col. WM. MCCLEAVE, Commandant.
P. J. AIKEN, M. D., Medical Director.

Two years ago there was an expectation that the members of this Home would be transferred to the Pacific Branch of the National Home when it should be ready to receive them, and on March 14, 1889, ninety-nine men were so transferred. But this depletion was rapidly refilled, and the membership of this Home is larger than at the last inspection, in December, 1888, and applicants are waiting for room.

Several notable and valuable additions have been made by construction and rearrangement. An addition 50 by 35 feet, two stories high, with high basement, and a piazza all around the sides, has been built to the north side of the main building. The basement will afford ample storage for quartermaster and commissary supplies. Four neat and comfortable cottages, with porches in front, have been arranged on a line, with intervals between them, on the south side of the camp. Each cottage of two stories accommodates 14 beds with plenty of room. The grounds have been nicely graded in front and about them, and their appearance inside and outside is homelike and inviting. Four isolation wards of one room each have been constructed on the north side of the camp, a little distance to the rear of the main building.

The most essential and altogether commendable improvement is a hospital, placed about 100 yards to the north of the main building. It is of an "L" plan, each side being 120 feet long, of two stories and an attic, and a high, dry basement. The surgery, dispensary, and reception room are in the angle, and there are several fine rooms for secluding patients. The dining room, kitchen, and storerooms are all admirably arranged. The wards have full capacity for 50 beds, and the lofty, spacious attic would in case of necessity accommodate 100 more. This will remove the sick from the main building, where the conditions which should prevail in and about a hospital are wanting. The cost of the new hospital was $10,000. The quarters of the members were comfortable and clean, and in some the walls were adorned with pictures and prints, showing the promptings of a home feeling. A want of lockers was observed.

The morning report on November 18, 1890, the date of inspection, showed that there were—

Present for duty	159
On extra duty	40
Sick	31
		230
Absent with leave	22
Absent without leave	2
		24
Total present and absent		254

This is a net gain of 7 since last inspection.

The death rate has been about 40 in 1,000. The first case of la grippe appeared January 6, 1890. Eight members were afflicted, and there were three deaths—complicated, however, one with catarrh, one with catarrh and asthma, and one with bronchitis.

CLOTHING.

The clothing of the members was good and clean. Its cost per capita per annum was $17.96. The value of the clothing on hand in store was $407.43.

SUBSISTENCE.

This Home employs a competent chief cook, who is a civilian. The food is well prepared and served. The cost of the leading articles was: Beef, 6 cents; mutton, 6 cents; flour, $4.90; coffee, Rio (roasted) 25 cents, Java 28 cents. The pork is raised on the Home farm. Half of the vegetables now at the Home, excepting potatoes, are raised on the farm. The cost of the ration is $23.84. The value of the commissary stores on hand, $500.

The average number of disabled volunteer soldiers cared for at this Home during 1889 was 209. The average cost of maintenance per capita was $154.23, which, however, included improvements, repairs, interest and insurance—all expenditures.

There are 78 pensioners in this Home, the amount of their pensions per quarter being $611.

The general appearance of the Home has been greatly improved by the rearrangement of some of its minor buildings, grading and resurfacing its drives and walks, cultivation and extension of shrubbery and flowers, and renovation of waste places on the farm, which is so important a feature, by the erection of a fine dairy house and reconstruction of the barn.

Eighty-seven tons of grapes were the return this season from the vineyards of the Home, which commanded the seemingly low price of $15 for black, and $12 for white.

The pressure for admission to the Home beyond its capacity to receive may be induced to some extent by the equable climate of the State; but as this condition exists to a less extent at all Soldiers' Homes, it sustains the belief expressed in a previous report, that their capacity is not yet equal to the demands for their use.

The management of this Home has achieved beneficent results.

GENERAL REMARKS.

The State Homes inspected are all rapidly approaching completion of construction. The New Jersey Home has only to finish its grounds, and New York to build additional dining-room. Six States, Nebraska, Iowa, Minnesota, Michigan, Pennsylvania, and Connecticut have completed or were engaged in building hospitals during the past year, where there were none before. Ohio is building an annex to the fine hospital already overflowing. Vermont has the only Home without a hospital. The general administration has everywhere been improved, better methods have been derived from comparisons of experiences, and greater economy and comfort with more regular and exact systems of accounting for expenditures under the various heads have resulted.

The interchange of reports of the dishonorable discharge of unworthy and dangerous men has worked to a great advantage of good order by restraining the vicious tendencies of bad men, and protecting worthy members from their unruly conduct and habits.

Among several instances one notable may be mentioned: A violent and dangerous member of the National Home at Dayton, who had assaulted and threatened to kill the late General Patrick, governor of that Branch, was dishonorably discharged. He recently applied for admission into the New York State Home, and would have been admitted but for the record which had been received from the Central Branch. His disability was doubtful from appearances, although formally established, but his vicious character was not. He stated that he had tried several Homes, but always found that his record prevented his admission.

The administration of the hospitals is generally improving from necessity, and not from supervisory direction. The introduction of matrons into several, and of trained nurses into two, is a step towards fruitful benefits. The following is a tabulated history of the invasion of la grippe:

Grouping these places in a table arranged in the order of dates of appearance, its attack will be shown as follows, viz:

Location.	Date.	Location.	Date.
Bath, N. Y	Dec. 20, 1889	Grand Rapids, Mich	Jan. 6, 1890
Quincy, Ill	Dec. 25, 1889	Yountville, Cal	Do.
Milwaukee, Wis	Jan. 1, 1890	Leavenworth, Kans	Jan. 12, 1890
Marshalltown, Iowa	do	Bennington, Vt	Do.
Waupaca, Wis	do	Dayton, Ohio	Jan. 18, 1890
Minneapolis, Minn	Jan. 2, 1890	Santa Monica, Cal	Jan. 21, 1890

Noroton, Conn	Jan. 3, 1890	Grand Island, Nebr	Feb. 11, 1890
Togus, Me	Jan. 3, 1890

The above tables are interesting, as showing that the conditions which invited this singularly well-marked visitation prevailed at the same time in many places separated by thousands of miles, and with widely different environments, some near the salt ocean, others near the fresh lakes, some on the open prairie country, others sheltered by heavy forest growths.

Unfortunately no data of meteorological or other phenomena, no climatometrical records are kept at any of the Homes, excepting one, to aid a study of this remarkable appearance. Only one glimpse is afforded from all the Homes, that furnished by the surgeon of the Michigan Home, where 575 men were afflicted. It was found that

The condition of the system produced by climatic changes resulted from an absence of electricity, or rather an electro-negative condition of the air, a great decrease in atmospheric ozone, an increased amount of moisture, a higher temperature, and a higher barometric condition, all acting or existing in an uncommon and unusual relation with each other.

Its prevalence was proportional to the increase in weight and humidity, and inversely to the amount of ozone and electrical condition of the atmosphere.

A microscopical examination failed to detect any germs or microbes in excretions which were thought to be peculiar to this disease. In the foregoing report are exhibited all the reports of the surgeons in charge of the different Homes concerning la grippe. That from the Eastern Branch will be found most complete, and with the others will show the degrees of attention and study bestowed upon this surprising attack by the medical officers.

The various kinds of treatment it received is also noted when reported.

The notes of the surgeon in charge of the hospital of the Michigan Soldiers' Home are herewith submitted.

The descriptive lists of the members of the State Home brought forward from the last published lists to the June 30, 1890, are appended to this report.

NOTES ON RUSSIAN INFLUENZA.

By R. Humphrey Stevens, M. D. Ph. C., Surgeon in charge of Michigan Soldiers Home Hospital, 1890.

INFLUENZA EPIDEMICS.

La grippe appeared among the inmates of the Michigan Soldiers' Home as a disease of lassitude and prostration, followed by fever and pain in either the head, chest, or back.

From this invariable inovation the malady presented itself or passed into one or all of the three following forms: First, affecting the sensory nerves; second, affecting the mucus surfaces; third, affecting the muscular system.

Digitized by Google

Of the first class we had 351 cases, the second class we had 153, the third class we had 71; total, 575.

Of the first class 323 were cured and 27 developed into glandular inflammation. All cured.

Of the second class 147 cases were stopped at the outset, and 13 cases developed pneumonia. All cured.

In the third class there were cured 69 cases, and in two inflammatory fever developed. All cured.

In those cases affecting the sensory nervous systems and not developing into glandular inflammation, 2 had irido choroiditis and 2 had idiopathic herpes. The other 320 had neuralgia of the trifacial and its branches, experiencing great pain unaccompanied by swelling.

The glandular swelling was confined in all cases to the lymphatics of the neck and throat except in two cases, one of which affected the glands of the groin, and the other suffered from orchitis, making a total of 351 cases.

Those of the second class, 140 were of a typical nature experiencing profuse mucous discharges, many of which were of a purulent nature.

Those of this class developing into pneumonia, 1 was double pneumonia, 12 single, 8 on left side, and 4 on right side.

The kidneys were complicated in 18 cases. One of these had pneumonia. None had diarrhœa.

Of the third class, consisting of 71 cases, 68 were to all appearances incipient inflammatory fever, of which 3 developed into typical forms. All recovered.

No age was exempt from the malady, the younger men suffering the most from pyrexia and pain; and it was to this class that pneumonia was confined, except in one case, and the severity of this case was due to intemperance and exposure previous to coming to the hospital.

PATHOLOGY

The pathological phenomena presenting themselves were of a complex nature, and so much so that our attention can to a better advantage be directed to the cause, symptoms, and complication of the disease during its various stages.

The characteristic feature of the disease as it appeared here, was its beginning with a general soreness of the muscles of the body followed by darting neuralgic pains along the courses of the larger nerves, listlessness, mental depression with anorexia, and an extraordinary weakness.

These symptoms were followed by a tightness of the throat and chest which came on periodically, followed by dyspnœa. Then followed the fever, when all of the above symptoms were increased and lasted from three to ten days.

Subsequent to the premonitory symptoms, the features which followed were characteristic of one of the three forms of disease.

The patient did not necessarily enter the first class first, but was liable to be taken with symptoms peculiar to the second or third class and vice versa.

A case unrestricted or checked by treatment would almost invariably pass through the three stages sooner or later.

The primary symptoms of la grippe appeared January 6 and disappeared March 20, 1890; the secondary symptoms disappeared May 28, 1890.

A careful record of a number of typical cases were kept during their progress and presented the following average facts:

First day: Respiration normal, pulse regular, bowels regular, feel well, urea deficient.

Second day: Condition same, except urea decreasing.

Third day: Feels languid, dumpy headache; evening headache intense; urates and uric acid in urine; urates in abundance.

Fourth day: Pulse 130, temperature 103; intense pain in head and back; urine scanty, specific gravity, 1024; urates, uric acid, and oxalate of lime, chlorides abnormal. At 2.30 p. m. broncho pneumonia appeared.

Fifth day, 5 a. m.: Pneumonia decided; expectoration; urine same except chlorides disappear from urine.

As the fever increases the specific gravity of the urine increases, and as the urea decreases the urates increase, until finally the urine is acid and crystals of uric acid, urates, and oxalates appear.

In a case presenting all of these features, inflammatory fever usually sets in, especially if the patient was prone to a rheumatic diathesis.

Local climatic peculiarities modify grippe fever, as is illustrated by one coming down with a fever, and in a week or two after promised recovery may be afflicted with a cough or sore throat, and possibly pneumonia or even nephretis or inflammation of some other organ.

While gathering data from these cases for physio-chemical facts, a climatometrical record was kept, the variations of which compared identically with the variation of the number of cases of la grippe that appeared.

The details of these observations are too lengthy to insert here, but I found that the condition of the system produced by these climatic changes resulted from an absence of electricity, or rather an electro-negative condition of the air, a great decrease in atmospheric ozone, an increased amount of moisture, a higher temperature, and a higher barometric condition, all acting or existing in an uncommon and unusual relation with each other.

In other words, la grippe is a disease of deoxidation from causes external to the body per se, and is variable with the oxyogalvanometric and barometric condition of the air we breathe. Expressed mathematically, its prevalence is proportional to the increase in weight and humidity and inversely to the amount of ozone and electrical condition of the atmosphere.

As far as microscopical examinations of excretions were carried, I was unable to detect any germ or microbe which I thought was peculiar to Russian influenza.

TREATMENT.

From the pathological condition most liable to arise under the intense nerve depression resulting from the uneliminated organic excrement which we find existing in the blood in abundance, the result of nerve depression, and which the reserve energy strives to throw off, eliminate, and burn up, I regard the popular antipyretic sedative treatment unwarrantable and unscientific.

There is no physiological nor therapeutic indication for it, and I believe that more cases of prostration and heart failure have resulted fatally from the effect of the antipyretic drugs administered than from the disease influenza.

In every case recorded here in this hospital more benefit was derived from tonic eliminative remedies than all else.

Hot air and hot water, externally and internally, being the most effective, followed by antiperiodic alkaloids.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

WM. W. AVERELL,

U. S. Army, Assistant Inspector-General,

National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers.

EXPENDITURES OF THE SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION.

LETTER

FROM

THE SECRETARY OF THE SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION,

TRANSMITTING

A statement of the expenditures for the fiscal year 1890, under the appropriations for "International Exchanges," "National Museum," "North American Ethnology," and "National Zoological Park."

DECEMBER 12, 1890.—Referred to the Committee on Expenditures in the Interior Department.

SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION,
Washington, D. C., December 11, 1890.

SIR: In accordance with a provision in the sundry civil act of October 2, 1888, I have the honor to submit to Congress a detailed statement of the expenditures for the fiscal year 1890, under the appropriations for "International Exchanges," the "National Museum," and "North American ethnology."

I also submit an account of the expenditures of the "National Zoological Park," placed under the direction of the Regents of the Smithsonian Institution by the act of April 30, 1890.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
S. P. LANGLEY,
Secretary.

HON. THOMAS B. REED,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

INTERNATIONAL EXCHANGES.

Appropriation by Congress for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, "for expenses of the system of international exchanges between the United States and foreign countries under the direction of the Smithsonian Institution, including salaries or compensation of all necessary employés" (sundry civil act, March 2, 1889; public 154, p. 16) $15,000.00

51st Congress, 2d Session. } HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES. { Mis. Doc. No. 40.

DISMISSED CASES BY THE COURT OF CLAIMS.

A communication from the Assistant Clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a statement of the cases dismissed by the court on the ground of "Loyalty not found" in the claimants, together with the findings of the court in each case.

DECEMBER 12, 1890.—Referred to the Committee on War Claims.

COURT OF CLAIMS,
Washington, D. C., December 5, 1890.

SIR: Pursuant to the order of the Court of Claims I herewith transmit a list of cases (disposed of since the last former return) of claims for stores and supplies alleged to have been taken by or furnished to the military or the naval forces of the United States for their use during the late war for the suppression of the rebellion, transmitted to the Court of Claims by the Committee on War Claims of the House of Representatives, under the act of March 3, 1883, chapter 116, commonly called the "Bowman Act," in which the court, on a preliminary inquiry, has found upon the evidence that it does not appear that the person or persons alleged to have furnished stores or supplies, or from whom stores and supplies were alleged to have been taken, were loyal to the Government of the United States throughout said war; and which have been dismissed for that cause, under section 4 of said act, for want of further jurisdiction.

I transmit also a copy of the finding and order filed by the court in each of said causes.

Very respectfully,

JOHN RANDOLPH,
Assistant Clerk Court of Claims.

HON. THOS. B. REED,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

BRIG VULTURE.

A communication from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims transmitting the conclusions of fact and of law filed by the court in the matter of certain spoliation claims, brig Vulture, master, John Berry.

DECEMBER 12, 1890.—Referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

COURT OF CLAIMS, CLERK'S OFFICE,
Washington, December 11, 1890.

SIR: Pursuant to the order of this court I transmit herewith the conclusions of fact and of law filed in the following spoliation claims under the act approved January 20, 1885, to wit:

In the matter of the brig Vulture; master, John Berry.

Case.	Claimant.
No. 395.	Elizabeth R. Gardner, administratrix of Jesse Richardson. Nathaniel P. Richardson, executor of Joshua Richardson.
96.	William Gray, administrator of William Gray.
213.	Charles Francis Adams, administrator of Peter C. Brooks. William Sohier, administrator of Nathaniel Fellowes. Horatio H. Hunnewell, executor of John Welles.
2068.	Henry W. Blagge and Susan B. Samuels, administrators of Crowell Hatch.

By order of the court.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of said court this 11th day of December, 1890.

[SEAL.] JOHN RANDOLPH,
Assistant Clerk Court of Claims.

Hon. THOS. B. REED,
Speaker House of Representatives.

[Court of Claims. French spoliations (act of January 20, 1885, 23 Stat. L., 283.) Vessel, brig Vulture; master, John Berry.]

Case.	Claimant.
No. 395.	Elizabeth R. Gardner, administratrix of Jesse Richardson. Nathaniel P. Richardson, executor of Joshua Richardson.
96.	William Gray, administrator of William Gray.
213.	Charles Francis Adams, administrator of Peter C. Brooks. William Sohier, administrator of Nathaniel Fellowes. Horatio H. Hunnewell, executor of John Welles.
2068.	Henry W. Blagge and Susan B. Samuels, administrators of Crowell Hatch.

CONCLUSIONS OF FACT.

These cases were tried before the Court of Claims on the 18th day of June, 1888. The claimants were represented by William E. Earle, John H. P. Dodge, and George S. Boutwell, and the United States, defendants, by the Attorney-General, through his assistant in the Department of Justice, Benjamin Wilson, esq., with whom was Assistant Attorney-General Robert A. Howard.

The court, upon the evidence and after hearing the arguments and considering same with the briefs of counsel on each side, determine the facts to be as follows:

I.

The brig Vulture, of which John Berry was master, a duly registered vessel of the United States, of 83 tons burthen, sailed on a commercial voyage from Salem, Mass., on the 29th of November, 1798, bound for the Island of Trinidad with a cargo of fish, flour, beef, sole leather, butter, tobacco, and lumber, all, vessel and cargo, owned by said Jesse Richardson and Joshua Richardson, now deceased.

II.

While in the peaceful prosecution of said voyage on the 18th of December, 1798, on the high seas, said vessel was captured by the French armed privateer Le Furet and taken to the harbor of Cape François, in the north department of St. Domingo, where, January 13, 1799, said vessel and all her cargo were condemned by the French prize tribunal there sitting as good prizes, and were wholly lost to the owners and insurers.

III.

The decree of condemnation recites that said vessel had on board—

A register bearing title of property in favor of Joshua Richardson and Jesse Richardson, merchants of Salem, in the county of Essex, State of Massachusetts, having the customary signatures and seals.

A sea letter written in four languages stating that the vessel was bound to Trinidad with a cargo of beef, codfish, flour, tobacco, coffee bags, leather, and butter, and having the customary seals and signatures.

Articles of agreement between John Berry, captain, and the crew, being six men, stating that the vessel was bound for Trinidad or any other West Indian ports, dated at Salem in November, 1798, without any seal or signature of the naval officer.

A commission granted by John Adams, President of the United States of America, in virtue of an act passed in the Congress of the United States the 9th of July, 1798, for the brigantine called the Vulture, of about 82 tons burthen, belonging to Joshua Richardson and Jesse Richardson, merchants of Salem, armed with two guns and manned with eight men, which authorizes John Berry, captain, and Joseph Felt, lieutenant, of the said brigantine, and other officers, to seize and take the armed French vessels they may meet with near the coast of the United States or elsewhere at sea, and to conduct them with the Frenchmen and the merchandises found on board in any port of the United States, the said commission delivered at Philadelphia the 19th of November, 1798. Signed, John Adams. By the President: Signed, Timothy Pickering, Secretary of State.

A clearance dated at Salem November 19, 1798, signed by the collector and naval officer with their seals.

An invoice of said brig's cargo, consisting of codfish, beef, flour, tobacco, coffee bags, butter, staves, and planks, amounting to the sum of $7,912.70, loaded on board the said vessel by Joshua and Jesse Richardson for Trinidad, consigned to Jesse Richardson, supercargo, dated at Salem the 22d of November, 1798. Signed, Joshua Richardson, Jesse Richardson.

A bill of lading of the merchandises expressed in said invoice loaded on board of said brigantine Vulture, John Berry, master, stating also that she was bound to Trinidad, by Joshua and Jesse Richardson, dated at Salem the 22d of November, 1798; signed, John Berry.

A letter of instruction written by the owners of the brigantine Vulture to John Berry, captain of the same, dated at Salem the 22d of November, 1798, by which they order him to sail as soon as possible for Trinidad or elsewhere, and to deliver the cargo on his arrival unto Jesse Richardson, supercargo, and to load the vessel again in return to Salem.

Printed instructions given to John Berry, captain of the brigantine Vulture, by the Secretary of State, Timothy Pickering, pursuant to the law passed in Congress of the United States the 29th of July, 1798.

The reasons for the condemnation are stated in said decree as follows:

"The letter of mark found on board of said armed vessel, being no inducement to the tribunal, which authorizes the said captain to chase all armed French vessels, not only on the coast of the United States but at sea, and to take all Frenchmen found on board of said vessels; which demonstrates the hostile intentions of the American Government against the French Government upon which the tribunal shall not make a decision, as it belongs only to the highest authority to pass a verdict on the reprisals.

"Considering that the brig Vulture is not provided with a rôle d'équipage so rigorously required by the article 25th of the treaty between France and the United States, dated the 6th of February, 1778, that the articles of agreement can not be used in the stead of the rôle d'équipage of that vessel, as it is not conformable to the one prescribed by said article, the residence and birth of the crew not being mentioned, and not signed by two witnesses and the naval officer, as it is prescribed by the said treaty. Joshua and Jesse Richardson, being owners, could not sign as witnesses. In consequence of which said papers are not agreeable to the article 25, and to the decree of the executive directory, which says in the article 4th 'that all Americans having no rôle d'équipage in due form on board, and like the one annexed in the said treaty of the 6th of February, 1778, will be condemned, the execution of which is ordered in the article 25 and 27 of the same treaty.'

"The article 15 of the decree of the agency in St. Domingo, dated the 29 Messidor, sixth year, says literally 'that all vessels having no rôle d'équipage certified by the public officers of the neutral places where they come from will be condemned; also their cargoes.'"

IV.

The value of the vessel was	$2,500.00
Value of the freight, two-thirds	1,500.00
Value of cargo	7,912.70
Cost of insurance	825.00
	12,737.70
Deduct insurance money paid owners	5,500.00
	7,237.70

V.

Said owners, Jesse and Joshua Richardson, were insured on said vessel and cargo by said William Gray, deceased, in the sum of $1,500, and were paid that sum as and for said loss.

They were also insured in the office of said Peter C. Brooks, insurance broker, in the sum of $1,000 on the vessel and $3,000 on the cargo by a policy of insurance underwritten as follows:

Nathaniel Fellows	$1,000
William Smith	1,000
Crowell Hatch	1,000
John Welles	500
Daniel Dennison Rogers	500

The underwriters paid on said policy to the owners the full amount of the insurance underwritten by them. Said owners abandoned and relinquished to the insurers all their right, title, and interest in the brig and cargo, so far as the same was thereby insured, and to all that might be thereafter recovered in the premises.

February 29, 1804, William Smith, in consideration of $1,972.79 to him paid by Peter C. Brooks, and the assumption by said Brooks of all and any liabilities and disadvantages arising from his underwriting in said Brooks's office, assigned to said Brooks all his right, title, and interest in and to all insurance done by him as an underwriter in his office.

October 19, 1804, Daniel Denison Rogers, in consideration of $3,400 to him paid by Peter C. Brooks, and the assumption by said Brooks of all and any liabilities and disadvantages arising from his underwriting in said Brooks's office, assigned to said Brooks all his right, title, and interest in and to all the underwriting done by him in said office.

VI.

Said claims were not embraced in the convention between the United States and the Republic of France concluded on the 30th of April, 1803. They were not claims growing out of the acts of France allowed and paid, in whole or in part, under the provisions of the treaty between the United States and Spain concluded on the 22d of February, 1819, and were not allowed, in whole or in part, under the provisions of the treaty between the United States and France of the 4th of July, 1831.

The claimants, in their representative capacity, are the owners of said claims, which have never been assigned, except as aforesaid.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW.

The court decides, as conclusions of law, that said seizure and condemnation were illegal, and the owners and insurers had valid claims of indemnity therefor upon the French Government prior to the ratification of the convention between the United States and the French Republic concluded on the 30th day of September, 1800; that said claims were relinquished to France by the Government of the United States by said treaty, in part consideration of the relinquishment of certain national claims of France against the United States; and that the claimants are entitled to the following sums from the United States:

Elizabeth R. Gardner, administratrix of Jesse Richardson	$3,618.85
Nathaniel P. Richardson, executor of Joshua Richardson	3,618.85
William Gray, administrator of William Gray	1,500.00
Charles Francis Adams, administrator of Peter C. Brooks	1,500.00
William Sohier, administrator of Nathaniel Fellowes	1,000.00
Horatio H. Hunnewell, executor of John Welles	500.00
Henry W. Blagge and Susan B. Samuels, administrators of Crowell Hatch	1,000.00

WILLIAM H. CHAPMAN FOR HEIRS OF JOHN SCHWARTZENBURG.

Letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims transmitting a copy of the findings filed by the court in the case of William H. Chapman for the heirs of John Schwartzenburg against the United States.

DECEMBER 12, 1890.—Referred to the Committee on War Claims.

COURT OF CLAIMS, CLERK'S OFFICE,
Washington, December 10, 1890.

SIR: Pursuant to the order of the court I transmit herewith a certified copy of the findings filed by the court in the aforesaid cause, which case was referred to this court by the Committee on War Claims, House of Representatives, under the act of March 3, 1883.

I am, very respectfully, yours, etc.,

JOHN RANDOLPH,
Assistant Clerk Court of Claims.

HON. THOMAS B. REED,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

[Court of Claims. Congressional case No. 58. William H. Chapman, for heirs of John Schwartzenburg v. The United States.]

At a Court of Claims held in the city of Washington on the 28th day of January, 1889, the court filed the following:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE.

The claim in the above-entitled case for supplies or stores alleged to have been taken by or furnished to the military forces of the United States for their use during the late war for the suppression of the rebellion was transmitted to the court by the Committee on War Claims of the House of Representatives on the 12th day of March, 1884.

P. E. Dye, esq., appeared for claimant, and the Attorney-General by Lewis Cochran, esq., his assistant, and under his direction appeared for the defense and protection of the interests of the United States.

The claimant alleges in his petition as follows:

That he brings this action in behalf of all the heirs of the said decedent, who are as follows: Mary Ann Beach, née Schwartzenburg; Barbary Chapman, née Schwartzenburg, the wife of your petitioner; Sarah Schwartzenburg, Margaret Schwartzenburg, Henry Schwartzenburg, George Schwartzenburg, and four minor children, the children of John Schwartzenburg, jr., deceased; that the said John Schwartzenburg, sr., first above, departed this life in the year 1872, leaving his only heirs at law as afosesaid; that for many years prior to the war of 1861 he resided in the village of Pineville, on the Red River, opposite the town of Alexandria, and that he was by occupation a tanner, and carried on his business in said village aforesaid; and that said John Schwartzenburg, sr., was a loyal man and devoted to the Government of the United States throughout the war, and that he did not give any aid or comfort to the rebellion, and that he was so loyal to the Government of the United States before and at the time of the taking of the property which is the subject matter of this claim, and that he remained loyal to the Government up the time of his death, in the year 1872 aforesaid.

II.

That during the operation of the army and navy of the United States in the Red River country, commonly known as "Banks's raid," in the year 1864, there was taken from said Schwartzenburg, at and near Pineville aforesaid, the following property, all of which belonged to the decedent, viz:

(1) On or about the 22d day of March, 1864, there was taken by Gen. A. J. Smith's command of the U. S. Army, and placed on board Str. Diana, 600 lbs. fodder, at $1.00	$6.00
(2) On the same date taken by the gunboat Benton, 3,000 ft., 2x12 in., lumber, at $25 per M	75.00
(3) Do. by the Str. Adriatic, 100 cords wood, at $6.00	600.00
(4) Do. by the Strs. Hasty and Diana, 900 sides of leather, at $10	9,000.00
(5) Do. by Quartermaster Leonard, 400 bushels corn, at $1.00	400.00
(6) On or about Mar. 22, 1864, taken by Gen. A. J. Smith's cavalry:
1 black horse	145.00
4 mules and 1 4-mule wagon	600.00
Total	10,826.00

That all and every part of the property aforesaid was taken by and used for the benefit of the army and navy of the United States at the time and place; that the prices charged therefor are reasonable and just for the time and place; that no payment was made for said property, either in whole or in part, and that said decedent has not received compensation either in whole or in part from any source, but that all is still justly due and owing from the United States to the estate of the said John Schwartzenburg and the heirs of him the said decedent; that the said John Schwartzenburg at all times bore true allegiance to the Government of the United States, and did not voluntarily aid, abet, or give encouragement to the rebellion against said Government.

It appears on the admission of the claimant's attorney and otherwise that said claim was never presented to the Commissioners of Claims, under the act of March 3, 1871. (16 Stat. L., p. 524.)

The case was tried January 21, 1889. The Attorney-General by Lewis Cochran, esq., his assistant, appearing for the defendants on motion to dismiss for want of jurisdiction and P. E. Dye, esq., appearing for claimant.

CONCLUSION BY THE COURT.

The court dismisses the petition and case because the claimant was barred by the act of March 3, 1873 (Chap. 236, Sec. 2, 17 Stat. L., p. 577), and therefore the court has no jurisdiction by act of March 3, 1883. (Chap. 16, Sec. 3, 22 Stat. L. p. 485.)

At a Court of Claims held in the city of Washington on the 11th day of February, 1889, the court filed the following

FINDINGS OF FACT.

The claim in the above-entitled case, for supplies or stores alleged to have been taken by or furnished to the military forces of the United States for their use during the late war for the suppression of the rebellion, was transmitted to the court by the Committee on War Claims of the House of Representatives on the 13th day of March, 1888.

On a preliminary inquiry the court, on the 10th day of December, 1888, found that the person alleged to have furnished the supplies or stores, or from whom they were alleged to have been taken, was loyal to the Government of the United States throughout said war.

August 3, 1888, the claimant filed his petition, setting forth that during the late civil war he resided in Greene County, Ky.; "that he has a claim against the United States for stores and supplies taken by or furnished to the Army or Navy of the United States," as follows:

1. A brown mare worth $135, taken November 1, 1862, by Capt. T. F. Boyer, assistant quartermaster, First Corps Army of the Ohio.

2. A bay horse worth $100, saddle worth $12, a bridle worth $3, taken by Colonel Reid, of the One hundred and twenty-first Ohio Volunteers, January 7, 1863.

Total amount of claim, $250.

He further states that his claim was presented to the Quartermaster-General under the act of July 4, 1864; on September 3, 1884, it was rejected and disallowed on the grounds that said officer was not convinced that the stores charged for were actually taken for the use of and used by said Army.

The case having been brought to a hearing on its merits on the 31st day of January, 1889, the court, upon the evidence and after considering the briefs and arguments of counsel on both sides, finds the facts to be as follows:

I.

Some time in 1863, certain United States infantry troops, under the command of Colonel Reid, encamped for one night about half a mile from claimant's farm. Several of the officers staid at the claimant's house all night. "During the night," as claimant testifies, the property claimed for "disappeared."

The officers offered to assist the claimant to find his property, and for that purpose he accompanied them to the camp and followed them some distance on their march, making search, but the property was not found. One of the horses was afterwards seen by a neighbor in the possession of soldiers.

The total value of all the property lost was $226.

It does not appear that any of it was taken by United States forces for the use of the Army or that it was used by the Army. It was probably stolen and appropriated to private use.

At a Court of Claims held in the city of Washington on the 28th day of May, 1889, the court filed the following

STATEMENT OF CASE.

The claim in the above entitled case, for supplies or stores alleged to have been taken by or furnished to the military forces of the United States for their use during the late war for the suppression of the rebellion, was transmitted to the court by the Committee on War Claims of the House of Representatives on the 27th day of April, 1888.

On a preliminary inquiry, the court, on the 21st day of January, 1889, found that the person alleged to have furnished the stores or supplies, or from whom they were alleged to have been taken, was loyal to the Government of the United States throughout said war.

The case was brought to a hearing on its merits on the 15th day of May, 1889. The claimant in his petition makes the following allegations:

That there was taken from the farm of the testator, Henry Weast, in Washington County, Md., for the use of the Army:

67 bushels corn	$67
5 tons timothy hay	63
14 acres wheat	262
11 tons straw	55
10 acres corn	90
10 tons corn fodder	50
Total value	587

The court, upon the evidence and after considering the briefs and arguments of counsel on both sides, makes the following

FINDINGS OF FACT.

That the claimant has produced no evidence to substantiate the quantity or value of the property taken except a sworn appraisement made in 1863 by three citizens of the vicinity, and while the court is satisfied that some property was taken, no sufficient or competent evidence has been produced to establish the quantity thereof.

alleged to have been taken, was loyal to the Government of the United States throughout said war.

The claimant in his petition alleges that there were taken from him at his residence in Lincoln County, Tenn., at different times by proper authority during the late war of the rebellion, quartermaster supplies and appropriated to the use of the Army of the United States:

115 sides leather of the value of	$807.50
44 sides leather of the value of	220.00
1 mule	150.00
Total	1,177.50

The case having been brought to a hearing on its merits on the 18th day of December, 1888, the court upon the evidence and after considering the briefs and arguments of counsel on both sides makes the following

FINDINGS OF FACTS.

It does not appear that any of said property was taken from the claimant by proper authority for the use of the Army of the United States.

This case, being a claim for supplies or stores alleged to have been taken by or furnished to the military forces of the United States for their use during the late war for the suppression of the rebellion, the court, on a preliminary inquiry, finds that George Deck, the person alleged to have furnished such supplies or stores, or from whom the same are alleged to have been taken, was loyal to the Government of the United States throughout said war.

[Court of Claims. Congressional Case No. 3895. George Deck vs. The United States.]

At a Court of Claims held in the city of Washington on the 16th day of December 1889, the court filed the following

STATEMENT OF CASE.

The claim in the above-entitled case for supplies or stores alleged to have been taken by or furnished to the military forces of the United States for their use during the late war for the suppression of the rebellion was transmitted to the court by the Committee on War Claims of the House of Representatives on the 13th day of April 1888.

G. W. Z. Black, esq., appeared for claimant, and the Attorney-General, by Henry M. Foote, esq., his assistant and under his direction, appeared for the defense and protection of the interests of the United States.

On a preliminary inquiry the court on the 21st day of January 1889, found that the person alleged to have furnished the supplies or stores, or from whom they were alleged to have been taken, was loyal to the Government of the United States throughout said war.

Digitized by Google

The case was brought to a hearing on its merits on the 9th day of December, 1889. The claimant in his petition makes the following allegations:

That he is a citizen of the United States residing in Berkeley County, W. Va., and that on October 30, 1863, there was taken from him by General Milroy's command for the use of the Army—

540 bushels of corn, at 75 cents a bushel	$405
10 tons of hay, at $20 a ton	200
	605

That the claim was presented to the Quartermaster-General under the act of July 4, 1864, and disallowed by him because he was not convinced that the claimant was loyal.

The court upon the evidence, and after considering the brief and arguments of counsel on both sides, makes the following

FINDINGS OF FACT.

I.

May 2, 1873, the claimant filed with the Quartermaster-General his claim as fol lows:

October 30, 1863:

4 tons hay, at $20	$80
10 tons hay, at $20	200
540 bushels corn, at 75 cents	405
20 bushels oats, at 75 cents	15
Total	700

The claimant was not found disloyal by the Quartermaster-General, as alleged in the petition, but the claim was finally considered July 17, 1876, and not allowed, Quartermaster-General Meigs being unable to certify that the stores were actually r ceived or taken for the use of and used by the United States Army.

The same claim, with the first and last items omitted, had been filed with the Quartermaster-General April 22, 1867, but does not appear to have been called up until July 19, 1882, when it was taken up and rejected for the reason that "the stores were embraced in the claim already decided.

II.

Since the claim was referred to this court the depositions of some of the witnesses whose affidavits were before the Quartermaster-General have been taken. They testify to nothing favorable to the claimant which was not stated in their affidavits. The claim has not been strengthened thereby, but rather weakened by the cross-examination of the Government counsel.

The court finds nothing in the case to justify overruling the decision of the Quartermaster-General.

The case having been brought to a hearing on its merits, the court upon the evidence, and after considering the briefs and arguments of counsel on both sides, finds the facts to be as follows:

I.

The claimant seeks to recover for the following property alleged to have been taken by the Army for its use during the late war, to wit:

5 horses, worth $150 each	$750
1 mule	150
300 bushels corn, at 50 cents	150
1 two-horse wagon and harness	200
11,400 pounds of pork, at 8 cents	912
40 pounds of bacon, at 10 cents	40
900 pounds flour, at $6 per hundredweight	54
50 bushels Irish potatoes	50

II.

The court finds that the taking of the property described in the first finding is not established by sufficient and competent evidence.

DISMISSED CASE OF MARY J. FOWLER vs. THE UNITED STATES.

Letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the opinion of the court dismissing for want of jurisdiction the case of Mary J. Fowler against the United States.

December 16, 1890.—Referred to the Committee on War Claims.

Court of Claims, Clerk's Office,
Washington, December 15, 1890.

Sir: Pursuant to the order of the court, I transmit herewith a certified copy of the opinion dismissing case for want of jurisdiction in the aforesaid cause, which case was referred to this court by the Committee on War Claims, House of Representatives, July 10, 1888, under the act of March 3, 1883.

I am, very respectfully, yours, etc.,

John Randolph,
Assistant Clerk Court of Claims.

Hon. Thomas B. Reed,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

[In the Court of Claims. Petition. Presented by T. W. Tallmadge, attorney. Filed. Mary J. Fowler vs. The United States. No. 5327, Congressional.]

To the honorable Court of Claims of the United States:

Your petitioner, Mary J. Fowler, respectfully represents:

That she is a citizen of the United States, residing in the county of Monroe, State of Tennessee, where she resided during the late war of the rebellion; that at different times during that period the United States forces, by proper authority, took from your petitioner quartermaster stores and commissary supplies of the value of $3,200, and appropriated the same to the use of the United States Army. That the said stores and supplies were the property of your petitioner, and consisted of the following articles and values:

1,300 bushels corn, at $1 per bushel	$1,300.00
One iron-gray horse, about 8 years old, 15 hands high	150.00
One horse mule, brown, 6 years old, 16 hands high	150.00
One mouse-colored mule, 5 years old, 15 hands high	150.00
One bay mule, 5 years old, 14½ hands high	150.00
20 tons hay, at $20 per ton	400.00
200 bushels wheat, at $1.50 per bushel	300.00
600 dozen sheaf oats, at 25 cents per dozen bundles	150.00
1,500 panels fence, ten rails to panel, at $3 per cord	450.00
Total	3,200.00

Your petitioner further states that being improperly advised by his attorney in the premises, her husband, W. J. Fowler, presented to the Quartermaster-General United States Army, under the act of Congress approved July 4, 1864, a claim No. $\frac{129}{188}$ for compensation for said stores and supplies, which was by the Quartermaster-General disallowed about August 4, 1882, on the ground that he was not convinced of the loyalty of the claimant.

Digitized by Google

Your petitioner further states that at the time said claim was preferred as aforesaid she was not familiar with such business, and supposing that her husband's local attorney, Mr. R. K. Robinson, was fully competent to advise regarding the proper mode of procedure she permitted the course as indicated to be taken, but having been subsequently advised that the manner of the presentation of said claim was erroneous, and that she, as the real owner of the property charged for therein, should have preferred said claim, she petitioned to Congress of the United States for relief, and on or about the —— day of ——, 1888, her said petition was by the Committee on War Claims of the House of Representatives referred to the honorable Court of Claims under section 1 of an act of Congress approved March 3, 1883, entitled "An act to afford assistance and relief to Congress and the Executive Departments in the investigation of claims and demands against the Government." That in said petition your petitioner alleges the fact of ownership of the property taken and charged for, and the manner in which her title thereto accrued, and for supporting evidence of her allegations upon that point she respectfully refers the honorable court to the testimony on with her husband's said claim, and the report of the agent of the Quartermaster's Department who investigated and reported on the same about October, 1880.

Furthermore, your petitioner states that the report of said quartermaster's agent does great injustice to her testimony as given or intended to have been given by or before him, touching her tenure to certain items of property charged for, and she also submits that the said report is very unfair and sinister in other respects, particularly as regards the value of the lands from which the stores and supplies were taken, as also the false inferences or suggestions as to the probability of certain items as charged being taken from the lands of others; all of which your petitioner desires an opportunity to correct and make satisfactory to the honorable court by testimony to be hereafter submitted.

That no remuneration has been made for this your petitioner's claim, either to herself or to her said husband, nor has said claim been assigned or transferred; that the same is correct and just; that your petitioner did not give any aid or comfort to the late rebellion, but was throughout that war loyal to the Government of the United States.

Wherefore your petitioner claims the sum of $3,200 and prays for a finding of the facts before set forth and such facts as may be shown by the evidence, and the report thereof to the committee by which the cases was transmitted, as provided in said act of March 3, 1883.

MARY J. FOWLER.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 2d day of August, 1888.

W. H. DAVIS, J. P.

STATE OF TENNESSEE, County of Monroe:

I, W. N. Mayill, clerk of the county court, do hereby certify that W. H. Davis is now and was at the time of signing the above affidavit an acting justice of the peace duly qualified and commissioned; that his official acts are entitled to full faith and credit and that his signature is genuine. That he is a justice in and for Monroe County, Tenn.

[Court of Claims. Congressional Case No. 5327. Mary J. Fowler v. The United States.]

MOTION TO DISMISS FOR WANT OF JURISDICTION.

Richardson, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This case comes here by transmission under the Bowman act from the Committee on War Claims of the House of Representatives.

The claimant in her petition in this court August 15, 1888, alleges that she is a citizen of the United States, residing in Monroe County, Tenn., where she resided during the late war of the rebellion; that at different times during that period the United States forces, by proper authority, took from her quartermaster's stores and commissary supplies of the value of $3,200 and appropriated the same to the use of the Army; that said stores and supplies were the property of the petitioner and consisted of the articles specified.

It appears from the petition and documents that Mary J. Fowler never presented a claim to the Commissioners of Claims nor to the Quartermaster-General, who had concurrent jurisdiction, as to property taken in Tennessee for the use of the Army. (R. S., second edition, secs. 300 A and 300 B.; act of 1871, ch. 116.; 16 Stat. L., 594.)

The act of March 3, 1873, ch. 236, sec. 2 (17 Stat. L., 577), provides:

Digitized by Google

"SEC. 2. That the Commissioners of Claims shall not receive any petition for the allowance of any claim or claims unless petition shall be presented to and filed with them on or before the third day of March, eighteen hundred and seventy-three; and all claims not so presented shall be deemed to be barred forever thereafter."

As to claims of which the Quartermaster-General and Commissary-General had jurisdiction under the act of July 4, 1864, ch. 240 (13 Stat. L., 381), and the amendments thereto (R. S., second edition, secs. 300 A and 300 B.), the act of March 3, 1879, ch. 287, sec. 3 (Supplement to R. S., p. 481) provides as follows:

"SEC. 3. That all claims not presented and filed under said act, and the acts amendatory thereof, prior to the first day of January, anno Domini eighteen hundred and eighty, shall be forever barred."

The jurisdiction of this court under the Bowman act (act of March 3, 1883, ch. 116, sec. 3; 22 Stat. L., 485), is thus restricted:

"Nor shall the said court have jurisdiction of any claim against the United States which is now barred by virtue of the provisions of any law of the United States."

The Assistant Attorney-General moves to dismiss the petition because the claim, never having been presented to the Claims Commission nor to the Quartermaster-General, is barred, and the court is without jurisdiction to consider it. (McLenore's Case, 21 C. Cls., 327.)

The claimant anticipated this difficulty in her case, and in her petition both to Congress and to this court she sets out the reasons why she did not present her claim under the acts.

It appears, as she alleged and from the papers returned by the quartermaster, that in 1878 the claimant's husband, Wm. J. Fowler, filed with the Quartermaster-General a claim in his own name for payment for the identical property described in the claimant's petition, then and there alleged to be his own property and taken from him. This claim was there prosecuted to a final decision. Both the present claimant and her husband were examined as witnesses in support of the claim, as were many other witnesses. The result was that in August, 1882, the claim was disallowed on the ground that the loyalty of the then claimant, Wm. J. Fowler, was not proved.

The present claimant alleges in her petition that her husband and herself were wrongly advised that the property was his own and that he was the person to make application for payment, whereas she was in fact the owner in her own right.

The statutes make no exceptions in favor of any claims not presented within the times prescribed, and admit of no excuses, but bar all alike.

If the claim here presented by Mrs. Fowler be the same as that presented to the Quartermaster-General by her husband, then this court has jurisdiction, otherwise not. We must consider whether or not the two petitions before the two tribunals present in fact the same issues. In these stores and supplies cases the claimant is required to prove before the Quartermaster-General or Claims Commission his or her ownership of the property, and the taking of the same by and for the use of the Army, and his or her loyalty.

In the petition to the quartermaster by Wm. J. Fowler and in the petitions of Mary J. Fowler to Congress and to this court, the property, its taking and its use are the same, but the ownership and the loyalty to be proved are different.

Before the Quartermaster-General the ownership alleged was that of the husband. The wife was a witness and made no claim thereto. That raised the issue of his loyalty. On that issue her husband, with her knowledge and consent, under advice of counsel, rightly or wrongly, staked the claim there presented. That issue was found against the then claimant and the claim was disallowed.

Now the wife comes here and presents a claim for the value of the same property as belonging to her in her own right. This raises a new issue, the loyalty of the wife, which was never presented to nor considered by the Quartermaster-General.

The question of right to amend is not involved in the case here. The present claimant with her husband might at any time have gone to the Quartermaster-General even after the claim had been disallowed and have moved to have the case reopened and to amend his petition by substituting her name in place of that of her husband as claimant. Had the Quartermaster-General allowed such an amendment and tried the issue of her loyalty, her claim would have come here as the same as that presented to him.

If it was too late for the Quartermaster-General to allow the amendment by the substitution of a new party, on account of the limitation of time for the presentation of claims before him, it is too late for this court to take jurisdiction.

The motion is allowed and the case is dismissed.

DISMISSED CASE, JOHN CARUTH vs. THE UNITED STATES.

Letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims transmitting a copy of the opinion of the court dismissing for want of jurisdiction the case of John Caruth against The United States.

DECEMBER 16, 1890.—Referred to the Committee on War Claims.

COURT OF CLAIMS, CLERK'S OFFICE,
Washington, December 15, 1890.

SIR: Pursuant to the order of the court I transmit herewith a certified copy of the order dismissing case for want of jurisdiction in the aforesaid cause, which case was referred to this court by the Committee on War Claims, House of Representatives, March 13, 1888, under the act of March 3, 1883.

I am, very respectfully, yours, etc.,

JOHN RANDOLPH,
Assistant Clerk Court of Claims.

Hon. THOMAS B. REED,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Your petitioner, John Caruth, begs leave to respectfully represent:

That he is a citizen of the United States and a resident of Lamar, Benton County, Miss; that during the fall of 1862, a portion of the U. S. Army, under command of General Ross, took from your petitioner quartermaster stores and commissary supplies amounting in the aggregate to over $10,000; that he made inquiry in relation thereto, and was informed that in the event he presented said claim to the Commissioners of Claims under act of March 3, 1871, inasmuch as it exceeded the sum of $10,000 aforesaid, he would be required to go to Washington, D. C., with his witnesses and render testimony in support thereof orally before the Commissioners aforesaid. This he considered could not be done without an enormous expense, and he was absolutely unable to bear it for want of necessary means; that on the 2d of April, 1874, believing your honorable bodies would pass an act extending the time for filing claims from insurrectionary States before the aforesaid tribunal, reduced the account for his property taken as alleged to $9,705, executed a petition accordingly, and same is herewith annexed and marked Exhibit A; that by reducing said claim as aforesaid it was understood that, in the event of the passage of the extension act referred to, he could have the proof taken in support thereof before one of the duly appointed special commissioners in the Southern States, and thereby save the great expense, time, and trouble that would otherwise necessarily attend it.

That your petitioner was before, during, and since the war a staunch Union man and loyal to the Government of the United States; that he was at all times ready and willing to do whatever he could in aiding and preserving the Federal Union.

Your petitioner further states that he constitutes and appoints Gilbert Moyers, of Washington, D. C., his true and sufficient attorney for him and in his name, place, and stead to prosecute his claim against the Government before the courts, Congress, or Departments of the United States at Washington, D. C., with full power of substitution and revocation, hereby authorizing and empowering his said attorney to do and perform whatsoever act or thing requisite to be done in the faithful prosecution and collection of said claim.

That in consideration of the facts herein set forth, and knowing there is no other tribunal in existence before whom your petitioner can apply for compensation for his losses at the hands of the U. S. Army, prays that your honorable bodies will pass such an appropriation for his relief as the merits of the case seem to demand.

And he will ever pray, etc.,

JOHN CARUTH.

Subscribed and sworn to before me at Lamar, Miss., this 6th day of October, 1877. I certify that the affiant is respectable and credible and that I have no interest in this matter.

R. H. PARHAM,
Justice of the Peace.

[Court of Claims. Congressional case No. 2726. John Caruth vs. The United States.]

At a Court of Claims held in the city of Washington on 13th day of January, 1890, the court filed the following order:

This is a claim for stores and supplies referred by the Committee on War Claims of the House of Representatives on March 13, 1888.

The person from whom it is alleged the supplies were taken was a resident of the State of Texas, and the supplies if taken were taken in said State; it is shown that the claim was not presented to the Southern Claims Commission.

It is therefore ordered that the case be dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

[Bowman act—Facts and Loyalty.—Court of Claims. Congressional case No. 144. W. J. Embry, executor of the will of John P. Brown, deceased, vs. The United States.]

AMENDED FINDINGS OF FACT.

The claim in the above-entitled case for supplies or stores, alleged to have been taken by, or furnished to, the military forces of the United States for their use during the late war for the suppression of the rebellion, was transmitted to the court by the War Claims Committee of the House of Representatives on the second day of July, 1884.

The case having been brought to a hearing on its merits on the 26th day of March, 1888, the court, upon the evidence and after considering the briefs and arguments of counsel on both sides, finds the facts to be as follows:

I.

The claimant's testator, John P. Brown, a citizen of Maury County, Tenn., was a minor throughout the whole war of the rebellion, under guardianship. He owned an estate of about 1,700 acres in the bend of the Duck River, near the town of Columbia, subject to the dower rights of his mother.

During the testator's minority the estate was managed by the guardian for the joint benefit of the ward and his mother, according to their respective interests.

II.

The claimant alleges that the following property of the testator on his estate was taken from him during the late war of the rebellion by the military forces of the United States for their use. The widow makes no claim before the court. He states the account thus:

12,990 cords standing timber, at $1	$12,990.00
1,500 cords fence rails and stakes, at $3	4,500.00
Total	17,490.00
Deduct commutation value of undivided dower interest of testator's mother, for which no claim made	2,690.78
Balance	14,799.22
2 carriage horses, in 1862, at $100	200.00

DECEMBER 17, 1890.—Referred to the Committee on War Claims.

COURT OF CLAIMS, CLERK'S OFFICE,
Washington, December, 16, 1890.

SIR: Pursuant to the order of the court I transmit herewith a certified copy of the findings filed by the court in the aforesaid cause, which case was referred to this court by the Committee on War Claims, House of Representatives, under the act of March 3, 1883.

I am, very respectfully, yours, etc.,

JOHN RANDOLPH,
Assistant Clerk Court of Claims.

Hon. THOMAS B. REED,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

[Court of Claims. Congressional No. 122. Annie Turner, administratrix of William S. Turner, vs. The United States.

This case being a claim for supplies or stores alleged to have been taken by or furnished to the military forces of the United States for their use during the late war for the suppression of the rebellion, the court, on a preliminary inquiry, finds that William S. Turner, the person alleged to have furnished the supplies or stores, or from whom the same are alleged to have been taken, was loyal to the Government of the United States throughout said war.

[Court of Claims. Congressional Case No. 122. Samuel I. Clark, assignee in bankruptcy and administrator of William S. Turner, vs. The United States.]

At a Court of Claims held in the city of Washington on the 24th day of February, 1890, the court filed the following:

STATEMENT OF CASE.

The claim in the above entitled case for supplies or stores alleged to have been taken by or furnished to the military forces of the United States for their use during the late war for the suppression of the rebellion, was transmitted to the court by the Committee on War Claims of the House of Representatives on the 27th day of May, 1884.

William B. King, esq., appeared for claimant, and the Attorney-General by F. P. Dewees, esq., his assistant, and under his direction appeared for the defense and protection of the interests of the United States.

On a preliminary inquiry the court, on the 14th day of December, 1885, found that the person alleged to have furnished the supplies or stores or from whom they were

Total	20,043.60

The court, upon the evidence and after considering the briefs and arguments of counsel on both sides, makes the following

FINDINGS OF FACT.

I.

The claim was filed before the Southern Claims Commission under the act of March 3, 1871, amounting to $19,928.80, and subsequently reduced to $10,000, in view, as it is alleged, that depositions might be taken instead of the personal attendance of witnesses. The Commission found as follows:

"The claimants are husband and wife. The property in law was the husband's property and he alone could have sold it or sued for it."

The following extract from the testimony of Mrs. Turner will account for his being made a party in this petition:

"The land composing our plantation on which the crops charged were raised we purchased and nearly paid for out of my own separate money. It was the understanding at the time that the deed should be made to me. But my husband being away when the deed was drawn and recorded, the attorney drew it in his name and it was suffered to so remain. Our wealth appeared so great that we felt independent and did not suppose that we would be straightened in circumstances, so no change in the deed was thought of. But the war cost all we had, so my husband had to go through the forms of bankruptcy; then we would not change the deed, for it might appear a design on our creditors."

In bankruptcy that real estate passed to Mr. Turner, assignee, so of necessity did his claim, and it makes no difference whether or not it was included in his schedule of assets. The claim is disallowed.

II.

Mrs. Annie S. Turner, as administratrix of William Turner, filed her petition in this court on the 21st day of January, 1885, for said claim. After the filing of said petition Mrs. Turner died, and upon and after her death the said Clark filed a petition as assignee in bankruptcy of the said William Turner, and as administrator of Annie S. Turner. The said Clark was appointed as assignee of said Turner by the district court of the United States of the eastern district of Arkansas.

III.

The testimony is very indefinite and unsatisfactory, especially as to the extent of the taking by the forces of the United States. The evidence tends to show that vouchers were given for property at different times. And it does not satisfactorily appear that said vouchers were lost or destroyed, nor that they have not been paid. Considering the condition of the proof, and the fact that the vouchers are not accounted for, the court is unable to make a finding on the question of the taking of the property.

alleged to have been taken was loyal to the Government of the United States throughout said war.

The case was brought to a hearing on its merits on the 20th day of February, 1890. The claimant in his petition makes the following allegations:

That he is a citizen of the United States residing in Lauderdale County, State of Alabama, where he resided during the late war of the rebellion; that at different times during said period the United States forces by proper authority took from petitioner quartermaster stores and commissary supplies of the value of $1,214.10, and appropriated the same to the use of the U. S. Army, as follows:

1,000 bushels corn	$1,000
3,200 pounds fodder	64
150 bushels sweet potatoes	150

The court upon the evidence, and after considering the briefs and arguments of counsel on both sides, makes the following

FINDINGS OF FACT.

That the claimant has failed to prove to the satisfaction of the court that he was the owner of the property described in the petition.

The case was brought to a hearing on its merits on the 13th day of May, 1890. The claimant in his petition makes the following allegations:

That he has a claim against the United States for stores and supplies taken by or furnished to the Army of the United States for army use at or near Sharpsburg, Washington County, Md., at the times hereinafter stated and by the officers named, said property being reasonably worth at the time and place the value here given, that is to say:

Item 1.	8 hogs, at $10 each	$80.00
Item 2.	6 hogs, at $7	42.00
Item 3.	13 shoats, at $3	39.00
Item 4	12 sheep, at $5	60.00
Item 5.	3 calves, at $4	12.00
Item 6.	3 barrels flour, at $6.25	18.75
Item 7.	155 bushels potatoes, at $1	155.00
Item 8.	220 bushels apples, at 60 cents	132.00
Item 9.	5 bushels sweet potatoes, at $1.25	6.25
Item 10.	4 dozen cabbages, $3; 2 bushels onions, $3	6.00
Item 11.	1 lot honey, $8; 1 lot pumpkins, $6	14.00
Item 12.	250 pounds bacon, $56; 300 pounds bacon, $30	86.00
Item 13.	200 pounds sugar, at 12½ cents	25.00
Item 14.	30 pounds sugar, crushed, at 15 cents	4.50
Item 15.	5 sacks salt, at $2	10.00
Item 16.	11 barrels vinegar, at $7	77.00
Item 17.	15 pounds butter, $3; 8 gallons vinegar, $6	9.00
Item 18.	6 crocks apple butter, $6; 12 crocks preserves, $15	21.00
Item 19.	350 chickens, at 15 cents	52.50
Item 20.	25 ducks, at 25 cents	6.25
Item 21.	1 barrel cucumber pickles, $8; 8 turkeys, $4	12.00
Item 22.	1 bushel dried apples, $1.50; 1 bushel dried cherries, $2; 6 gallons B. wine, $2	15.50
Item 23.	12 pounds candles, $2.40; 24 dozen eggs, at 15 cents	6.00
Item 24.	6 jars fruit, $3; 2½ dozen cups jelly, at $3 per dozen, $7	10.00
Item 25.	10 pounds coffee, $2.50; 5 pounds rice, 50 cents	3.00
Item 26.	50 pounds soap, at 7 cents	3.50

All taken September 18, 1862, by General G. B. McClellan's command.

The court, upon the evidence and after considering the briefs and arguments of counsel on both sides, makes the following

FINDINGS OF FACT.

This claim was presented to the Commissary-General under the act of July 4, 1864, and was disallowed by that officer because he was not convinced that the supplies and stores were actually taken for the use of and used by the United States Army.

Since the case came to this court the depositions of the claimant and Jacob Myers have been filed, but it does not satisfactorily appear from this additional testimony that any of the property which may have been lost by the claimant was taken by the United States forces for the use of the Army.

[Filed April 22, 1885.—J. R.]

To the honorable the Court of Claims:

The claimant, Charlotte A. Waddell, respectfully shows to this honorable court:

1. The claimant is executrix of the estate of William C. H. Waddell, deceased, as by her letters testamentary filed herewith will fully appear.

2. Said William C. H. Waddell was duly commissioned as marshal of the United States for the southern district of New York by Andrew Jackson, President of the United States, and held that office from the 7th day of November, 1831, until the 10th day of December, 1839, when his several commissions as marshal terminated by law.

3. There remain due to said William C. H. Waddell the following items of fees, costs, and disbursements, all of which were properly taxed and allowed by the district judge of the United States, but which were never paid, either to said Waddell or to this claimant, or to any one on his behalf:

1. Fees, costs, and expenses in the case of The United States v. 45 Packages of Glassware	$1,003.12
2. Fees, costs, and expenses in the case of The United States v. 19 Cases of Scissors	113.97
3. Fees, costs, and expenses in the case of The United States v. 8 Cases Containing Cloths	1,023.82
4. Fees, costs, and expenses in the case of The United States v. 3 Cases of Hair Seating	254.47

5. Fees, costs, and expenses in the case of The United States v. 34 Packages of Cloths	$2,306.75
6. Fees, costs, and expenses in the case of The United States v. 4 Bales and 2 Cases of Cloths and Cassimeres	571.56
7. Fees, costs, and expenses in the case of The United States v. 191 Casks of Glassware	2,266.65
8. Fees, costs, and expenses in the case of The United States v. 123 Casks of Glassware	4,029.38
9. Fees, costs, and expenses in the case of The United States v. 104 Casks of Glassware	3,196.74
10. Fees, expenses, and poundage upon the service of a warrant of distress issued by the Solicitor of the Treasury in the nature of a ca. sa. et fi. fa., dated November 12, 1838, against Samuel Swartwout, late collector of customs for the port of New York, for the sum of $1,344,119	18,102.33

All of said fees, costs, expenses, and poundage were duly and regularly taxed by the district judge of the United States for the southern district of New York, but the same have not been paid nor any part thereof.

The aforesaid items were duly submitted to the accounting officers of the Treasury, and were by them not allowed, notwithstanding the proper taxation of the same by the district judge, which was by law final. Subsequently this claim was presented to Congress, and no final action was taken thereon until the first session of the Forty-eighth Congress, when the Committee on Claims of the House of Representatives referred the claim to this court. No other action than as aforesaid has been had on this claim in Congress or by any of the Departments.

4. The claimant is the sole owner of this claim and the only person interested therein, and no assignment or transfer of this claim, or of any part thereof or interest therein, has been made. The claimant is justly entitled to the amount herein claimed from the United States, after allowing all just credits and offsets. The claimant is a citizen of the United States, and has at all times borne true allegiance to the Government thereof, and has not in any way voluntarily aided, abetted, or given encouragement to rebellion against the said Government; and the claimant believes the facts as stated in this petition to be true. And the claimant prays that the facts as above stated be found by this court and reported to the said Committee on Claims for its consideration.

U. S. HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Committee on Claims, June 5, 1884.

At a meeting of the Committee on Claims of the House of Representatives of the United States, held on the 23d day of May, A. D. 1884, the following order was made by that committee:

Ordered, That House bill No. 4552, for the relief of William Coventry H. Waddell, which was referred to this committee by order of the House of Representatives, and is now pending before said committee, be transmitted (in accordance with the provisions of an act entitled "An act to afford assistance and relief to Congress and the Executive Departments in the investigation of claims and demands against the Government," approved March 3, 1883, to the Court of Claims of the United States, together with the vouchers, papers, proofs, and documents appertaining thereto.

In obedience to said order I herewith transmit to the Court of Claims of the United States said bill, together with all the papers appertaining thereto which have come into my possession as clerk of said committee.

W. B. PETTIT,
Clerk to U. S. House of Representatives Committee on Claims.

Court of Claims. Congressional, No. 131. Departmental, No. 28. Decided April 21, 1890. Charlotte A. Waddell, executrix of William C. H. Waddell, v. The United States.]

FINDINGS OF FACT.

The claim in the above-entitled case was transmitted to the court by the Committee on Claims of the House of Representatives on the 5th day of June, 1884, and by the Secretary of the Treasury April 8, 1886.

George A. King, esq., appeared for claimant, and the Attorney-General, by John C. Chaney, his assistant, and under his direction, appeared for the defense and protection of the interests of the United States.

The case having been brought to a hearing on the 14th day of April, 1890, the court, upon the evidence and after considering the briefs and arguments of counsel on both sides, finds the facts to be as follows:

I.

The claimant is executrix of the estate of William C. H. Waddell, deceased.

II.

Said W. C. H. Waddell was appointed marshal of the United States for the southern district of New York by Andrew Jackson, President, and by that appointment and reappointment held the office from November 7, 1831, to December 10, 1839, when the last commission expired.

III.

In 1846 the claimant's testator (W. C. H. Waddell) presented to the Treasury Department for adjustment and payment accounts for fees, disbursements, cartage, labor, storage, insurances, and other costs in cases in which the United States were a party, which costs had previously been taxed and allowed by the district judge of the United States for the southern district of New York. These accounts were examined by the accounting officers, and on the 7th day of April, 1851, the sum of $3,829.42 was allowed and subsequently paid, and the balance, $10,927.04, was disallowed by the First Comptroller. No further action was taken for the collection of the claim until December 5, 1885, when it was again presented to the Treasury Department for payment by the attorney of the present claimant as executrix.

Another claim is thus stated in the petitions: "Fees, expenses, and poundage upon the service of a warrant of distress issued by the Solicitor of the Treasury in the nature of ca. sa. et. fi. fa., dated November 12, 1838, against Samuel Swartwout, late collector of customs for the port of New York, for the sum of $1,344,119, $18,102.33."

This last-mentioned claim was never presented to the Treasury Department until December 5, 1885, when, with the other accounts, it was sent to the Department and payment demanded by said attorneys of the present claimant. No allegations are made of fraud, mistake in matters of fact arising from errors in calculation, or newly discovered material evidence.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW.

Upon the prayer for judgment in the amended petition in Departmental case No. 28, the claimant's amended petition must be dismissed on the ground that the claims are barred by the provisions of section 1069 of the Revised Statutes.

The first claim of $10,927.04 can not be reëxamined by the present accounting officers because it was disallowed by their predecessors more than thirty-five years ago, and accounts once settled by accounting officers can not be re-opened except for fraud, manifest mistake in matters of fact arising from an error in calculation, or newly discovered material evidence.

The second claim for $18,102.33 can not be considered by the accounting officers because it is a stale claim which accrued, if at all, more than forty-seven years before its presentation to the Treasury Department.

OPINION.

RICHARDSON, C. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This case is before us under three distinct provisions of the statutes conferring jurisdiction upon the court.

1. June 5, 1884, it was transmitted by the Committtee on Claims of the House of Representatives for a finding of fact by the court under section one of the Bowman

Digitized by Google

Act of March 3, 1883, chapter 116 (22 Stat. L., 485). In that case the claimant filed her petition April 22, 1885.

2. April 8, 1886, it was transmitted by the Secretary of the Treasury, under section two of that act, for finding of facts, conclusions of law, and opinion. In that case the claimant filed her petition April 20, 1886.

3. After the passage of the act of March 3, 1887, chapter 359 (24 Stat. L., 505), the claimant filed an amended petition in the latter case which, after setting out the allegations of facts relied upon, prays that the court will find as a conclusion of law that there is due the claimant the sum of $32,868.79, and that the court will thereupon proceed to render judgment in her favor for that amount in accordance with the provisions of section 13 of the latter act. That section is as follows:

"SEC. 13. That in every case which shall come before the Court of Claims, or is now pending therein, under the provisions of an act entitled "An act to afford assistance and relief to Congress and the Executive Departments in the investigation of claims and demands against the Government," approved March third eighteen hundred and eighty three, if it shall appear to the satisfaction of the court, upon the facts established, that it has jurisdiction to render judgment or decree thereon under existing laws or under the provisions of this act, it shall proceed to do so, giving to either party such further opportunity for hearing as in its judgment justice shall require, and report its proceedings therein to either house of Congress or to the Department by which the same was referred to said court."

There are two claims in the case transmitted by the Secretary of the Treasury, differing somewhat in the principles of law to which they give rise.

The first is a claim presented to the Department and disallowed more than thirty-five years ago by the predecessors of the present accounting officers, who were asked, after that lapse of time, to pass upon and allow it, without allegations of fraud, mistake, or newly discovered evidence.

The second claim accrued, if at all, more than forty-seven years before it was presented to the Treasury Department, December 5, 1885.

Both claims are barred by the Revised Statutes, section 1059, from the jurisdiction of the court to render judgment, as they accrued, if at all, more than six years before the filing of the petition, and section 13 of the act of 1887 authorizes a judgment in petitions under that act or the act of 1883 (the Bowman act) only when "it shall appear to the satisfaction of the court, upon the facts established, that it has jurisdiction to render judgment or decree under existing laws or under the provisions of this act." There is no provision in the act itself for judgment in such case, and the preëxisting law forever barred the claims. The amended petition must therefore be dismissed.

The two claims can not be received, examined, and allowed by the accounting officers of the Treasury for other reasons not alike in relation to each claim.

The first claim, disallowed more than thirty-five years ago, has passed beyond the control of the accounting officers and the head of the Department who have been appointed since the time of that disallowance. The law has been too well settled to be in doubt at this time, that public officers can not open and reëxamine cases decided by their predecessors except for fraud, mistake in matters of fact arising from errors in calculation, or newly discovered material evidence. (United States vs. Bank of Metropolis, 15 Pet., 401; Lavalette's Case, 1 C. Cls. R., 149; Jackson's Case, 19 C. Cls. R., 504; Illinois Case, 20 C. Cls. R., 342; Day's Case, 21 C. Cls. R., 282. Opinions of Attorneys-General, vol. 9, p. 34; vol. 12, pp. 172, 358; vol. 13, pp. 387, 456, vol. 14, p. 275.)

The second claim, which accrued, if at all, in 1838, was not presented to the Treasury Department until December 5, 1885, a period of forty-seven years. It is therefore a stale claim, which the accounting officers have no right to receive, examine, and settle. It was not the purpose of Congress by the Bowman act and the act of 1887 to open and revive stale claims, but rather to provide for a judicial investigation of live and open accounts which are within the cognizance of the accounting officers, and for the determination of other matters. (McClure's and Porter's Cases, 19 C. Cls. R., 18.)

It has often been said that there is no statute of limitation applicable to claims required to be presented and examined by the accounting officers of the Treasury Department, and that is undoubtedly so. But there is an unwritten law recognized by courts of equity and admiralty in which no statute of limitation is applicable, against entertaining and enforcing stale claims (Speidel vs. Henrici, 120 U. S. R., 387, and numerous cases there cited; Willard vs. Dorr, 3 Mason C. C. R., 161), and that law the accounting officers may rightly invoke and rely upon.

A state claim is one that has not been presented for payment for a long period of time, during which the claimant has slept upon his rights and thus created a presumption that the claim was never an honest and just one, and that he has been waiting until it was forgotten by the alleged debtor, and all evidence against it is lost or destroyed. Courts of equity usually follow the law and adopt the statutes of limitation as fixing the period beyond which delay requires explanation, and which, unless satisfactorily accounted for, will constitute a bar to demands. We see no reason why the accounting officers may not rightly adopt the same rule.

But there is much indebtedness of the United States which no lapse of time in making application for payment renders stale, such as interest on registered bonds and other balances stated in favor of parties on the books of the Treasury Department, as to which the only proof to be made is the identity of the claimant or his right to represent the record-creditor (Rev. Stat., secs. 306, 307, 308, Hall's Case, 17 C. Cls. R., 39); the public debt evidenced by bonds and coupons of record in the Department, and, no doubt, other indebtedness of like kind which we have not considered.

The clerk will certify the findings of fact and conclusions of law and opinion to the Treasury Department for its guidance and action, will certify the findings of fact with this opinion to the Committee on Claims of the House of Representatives and will enter judgment in the case transmitted to the court by the Secretary of the Treasury (Departmental, No. 28) dismissing the amended petition.

COURT OF CLAIMS, CLERK'S OFFICE,
Washington, December 17, 1890.

SIR: Pursuant to the order of the court I transmit herewith a certified copy of the order dismissing case in the aforesaid cause, which case was referred to this court by the Committee on War Claims, House of Representatives, May 28, 1886, under the act of March 3, 1883.

I am, very respectfully, yours, etc.,

JOHN RANDOLPH,
Assistant Clerk Court of Claims.

Hon. THOMAS B. REED,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

[In the Court of Claims. December term, 1885. Congressional case, No. 963. C. O. Spencer v. The United States].

PETITION.

[Filed July 9, 1886.—J. R.]

To the honorable the Court of Claims of the United States:

Your petitioner, C. O. Spencer, respectfully represents, that he is a citizen of the United States, residing in Benton County, State of Mississippi, where he resided during the late war of the rebellion; that at different times during said period the United States forces, by proper authority, took from your petitioner quartermaster stores and commissary supplies of the value of $4,629, and appropriated the same to the use of the United States Army, as follows:

1 six-horse iron-axle wagon	$150
6 sets harness	75
5 head of mules, at $150	750
270 bushels corn, at 50c	135
200 bundles fodder	4
7,500 lbs. pork, at 10c	750
50 head of stock hogs, at 10c	500
3 cows	60
2 yearlings	20
5 mules	750
5 cows	100
6 yearlings	60
1 fine horse and saddle	175
4 mules	150
250 bushels corn	250
1 bbl flour	10
1 bbl. molasses	40
1,000 lbs. bacon, at 20c	200
Total	4,629

Digitized by Google

Your petitioner further states, that he was a minor when the law establishing the Southern Claims Commission, under the act of Congress approved March 3, 1871, was passed, and the time for filing his claim expired by limitation in 1873.

Your petitioner petitioned the Congress of the United States for relief, and on or about the 3d day of June, 1886, said petition was by the Committee on War Claims of the House of Representatives, referred to the honorable Court of Claims, under section 1 of an act of Congress approved March 3, 1883, entitled "An act to afford assistance and relief to Congress and the Executive Departments in the investigation of claims and demands against the Government."

Your petitioner further states, that his said claim has not been assigned or transferred, and he is the sole owner thereof; that it is correct and just; that he did not give any aid or comfort to the late rebellion, but was throughout that war loyal to the Government of the United States.

Wherefore your petitioner prays that when the facts shall have been ascertained as to his loyalty and the justice of his claim, the same may be reported to the House of Representatives of the United States or to the said Committee on War Claims, as provided in said act of March 3, 1883.

C. O. SPENCER.

GILBERT MOYERS,
Attorney for Claimant.

Personally appeared before me, Jno. H. Morgan, clerk of the circuit court of Benton County, Miss., C. O. Spencer, who, being duly sworn, says that the statements contained in the foregoing petition are true, to the best of his knowledge, information and belief.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 14th day of June, A. D. 1886.

[In the Court of Claims, December term, 1883. Nos. 8 and 18, Congressional cases. J. C. Barnett administrator of William E. Barnett, deceased, vs. The United States.]

PETITION.

[Filed March 17, 1884.—J. R.]

To the honorable the Court of Claims of the United States:

Your petitioner, J. C. Barnett, respectfully represents that he is the administrator of William E. Barnett, deceased, who during the war of the rebellion was a citizen and resident of Memphis, Shelby County, Tenn.; that about the month of September, 1862, deceased furnished to and had taken from him by and for the use of the U. S. Army, through the proper officers thereof, the following described property, to wit:

60 head horses	$9,000.00
2 carriages and harness	1,000.00
6 buggies and harness	1,200.00
Corn, fodder, hay, and oats	1,000.00
2 spring wagons and harness	500.00
20 saddles	400.00
	13,100.00

Taken by order of General S. A Hurlbut.

Petitioner further states that about March, 1874, the said William E. Barnett presented to the Quartermaster-General, U. S. Army, his claim for compensation for said property, in accordance with the provisions of the act of Congress approved July 4, 1864, entitled "An act," etc., and was by said Quartermaster-General disallowed January 8, 1878, on the ground that he was not convinced that the stores were actually taken and used by the Army; that in February, 1879, the said William E. Barnett, being convinced of the injustice of said action of the Quartermaster-General, petitioned Congress for relief; that said petition was by the House of Representatives of the Forty-eighth Congress referred to the Committee on War Claims of said House, and by said committee, on the 26th day of February, 1884, transmitted to the honorable Court of Claims of the United States under section 1 of an act entitled "An act to afford assistance and relief to Congress and the Executive Departments in the investigation of claims and awards against the Government."

Your petitioner further represents that the said William E. Barnett did not give any aid or comfort to the late rebellion, but was throughout that war loyal to the Government of the United States; that he, as administrator of William E. Barnett, is the sole owner of the aforesaid claim.

Your petitioner therefore prays that when the facts shall have been ascertained as to his loyalty and the justness of his claim, the same may be reported to the said Committee on War Claims or to the House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States, as provided in said act of March 3, 1883.

[Court of Claims. Congressional case No. 466. Estate of Ewing M. Skaggs, assignee of Eli H. Skaggs, vs. The United States.]

At a Court of Claims held in the city of Washington on the 8th day of December, 1890, the court filed the following

FINDINGS ON LOYALTY.

I.

This case, being a claim for supplies or stores alleged to have been taken by or furnished to the military forces of the United States for their use during the late war for the suppression of the rebellion, the court, on a preliminary inquiry, finds that Ewing M. Skaggs, the alleged assignee of Eli H. Skaggs, the person alleged to have furnished such supplies or stores, or from whom the same were alleged to have been taken, was loyal to the Government of the United States throughout said war.

II.

The court, at the same time, also finds that Eli H. Skaggs, the alleged assignor of the claim, was loyal to the Government of the United States until a time subsequent to the alleged taking of the stores and supplies, but that during the summer of 1863 he left his domicile in the city of New Orleans and went to Texas, carrying with him his former slaves, then on his plantation in the parish of New Iberia, La.

The court being of the opinion that this act of the person who furnished such supplies or stores constitutes an act of disloyalty, the case is dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

Filed March 12, 1888.

[Court of Claims. Congressional case No. 756. Barnett T. Swart vs. The United States.]

At a Court of Claims held in the city of Washington on the 15th day of December, 1890, the court filed the following statement of case and findings of fact, to-wit:

STATEMENT OF CASE.

The claim in the above entitled case for supplies or stores alleged to have been taken by or furnished to the military forces of the United States for their use during the late war for the suppression of the rebellion, was transmitted to the court by the Committee on War Claims of the House of Representatives on the 23d day of April, 1886.

Robert Christy, esq., appeared for claimant, and the Attorney General, by F. P.

Dewees, esq., his assistant, and under his direction, appeared for the defense and protection of the interests of the United States.

On a preliminary inquiry the court, on the 12th day of March, 1888, found that the person alleged to have furnished the supplies or stores, or from whom they were alleged to have been taken, was loyal to the Government of the United States throughout said war.

The case was brought to a hearing on its merits on the 9th day of December, 1890. The claimant in his petition makes the following allegations:

1. That he is a citizen of the United States residing in the District of Columbia, and that he did not, in the late war for the suppression of the rebellion, give any aid or comfort to said rebellion, but was throughout that war loyal to the Government of the United States.

2. That he is and was during the times the grievances hereinafter particularly mentioned were committed the owner of a farm containing about 200 acres of land, situated within said District of Columbia; that in the month of September, A. D. 1861, the War Department of the United States took possession of said farm, and commenced the erection of Fort De Russey and batteries Smead and Kingsbury, together with a line of rifle pits connecting said fort and batteries one with the other, and extending nearly across the entire front of said farm; that at least 27 acres were so occupied.

That in addition to said 27 acres the engineer department of said defendant entered upon said farm and took possession of and occupied 56 acres of woodland belonging to claimant and forming a part of said farm. That said engineer department, acting for and in behalf of said defendant, cut down the valuable timber on said woodland and used it in constructing said forts and batteries and for fuel.

That said defendant by its officers and soldiers and agents, in addition to said 27 and 56 acres, took possession of all the remainder of said farm at the time aforesaid, consisting of plowed land, meadows, and orchards, except about 2 acres, upon which the dwelling house and other farm buildings were situated.

3. That said land at the time said defendant occupied the same was reasonably worth in the markets of the District of Columbia $200 per acre.

4. That said farm was composed of 26 acres of timber, 30 acres of meadow land, 53 acres of plowed land, and 10 acres of peach and apple trees.

5. That said defendant occupied said land as hereinbefore stated from the 1st day of September, A. D. 1861, to the 1st day of September, A. D. 1865; that during all this time claimant had no beneficial use of and derived no benefit from said farm with the exception of said 2 acres. That the said defendant, during the time of such occupation, appropriated to its use and destroyed 300 peach trees and 50 apple trees; took 70 cords of timber for fortifications and other building purposes, and 1,540 cords of fire-wood, and likewise 1,900 panels of fencing, 1,400 6-mule wagon loads of paving stones, 350 bushels of wheat stacked in the fields, and 37 acres of corn, averaging 8 barrels to the acre.

6. Claimant further states that the quantities and reasonable prices and values are correctly stated in his particulars of demand hereto attached as a part of this petition and marked Exhibit A.

That this claim was presented to the House of Representatives of the United States and duly referred to the Committee on War Claims, and by said committee transmitted to this honorable court on the 23d day of April, A. D. 1866, and claimant begs leave to refer to the same as often as it may be necessary.

7. That there has been paid to claimant as rent by the said defendant on, to wit, September, A. D. 1868, the sum of $3,156 in respect to said claim. That no other payment has been made thereon, and that there is now due to him and unpaid the sum of $28,163.

The court, upon the evidence and after considering the briefs and arguments of counsel on both sides, makes the following

FINDINGS OF FACT.

I.

That the claimant was the owner of a farm in the District of Columbia, containing about 200 acres of land; that in the month of September, 1861, the military forces of the United States took possession of said farm, with the exception of the dwelling house thereon and 2 acres of ground surrounding the same; that said possession continued for the period of four years, to wit, until September, 1865; and that claimant had no beneficial use of said farm during such possession by the defendant, with the exception aforesaid.

That the engineer department of the Army of the United States, acting on behalf of said defendant, in the month of September, 1861, began the erection on said farm of forts, batteries, and earthworks, and the construction of rifle-pits, and completed the same and maintained them during such possession.

Digitized by Google

That the engineer department of the Army of the United States, acting on behalf of said defendant, in the month of September, 1861, began the erection on said farm of forts, batteries, and earthworks, and the construction of rifle-pits, and completed the same and maintained them during such possession.

Most of said farm was occupied by the Quartermaster-General's Department, for which the claimant has already been paid rent in the sum of $3,156 in full.

Twenty-seven acres were occupied by the engineer department, the rental value of which is $972. This latter sum has never been paid.

III.

During said occupancy a large amount of timber, from the woodland of the farm, was cut down and used by the Army, partly for engineering purposes and partly for fuel.

The value of this timber standing in the tree amounts to $5,041. It does not appear that any part of this sum has been paid.

IV.

The number and value of fruit trees, alleged in the claimant's petition to have been destroyed, have not been considered by the court, for the reason that under the first clause of section 3 of the Bowman Act the court has no jurisdiction of such claims.

V.

The claims for fencing consumed as fuel, stone, wheat, and corn were not presented to the Quartermaster-General nor to Southern Claims Commission, and therefore, on March 3, 1883, the date of the passage of the Bowman Act, were barred by the acts of March 3, 1873, section 3 (17 Stat., 577), and of March 3, 1879, section 3 (20 Stat., 650).

The court has not considered these claims because the last clause of section 3 of the Bowman Act provides that the court shall not have jurisdiction of any claim then barred by virtue of the provisions of any law of the United States.

On a preliminary inquiry the court, on the 24th day of December, 1888, found that the person alleged to have furnished the supplies or stores, or from whom they were alleged to have been taken, was loyal to the Government of the United States throughout said war.

The case was brought to a hearing on its merits on the 4th day of December, 1890. The claimants in their petition make the following allegations:

That they have a claim against the United States for stores and supplies taken from the deceased by the military forces of the United States for their use in the county of Washington and State of Maryland in the months of September and October, 1862, as follows:

396 panels, posts, and rail fence	$396.00
3 tons hay	36.00
1,840 chestnut rails	110.40
2 tons rye straw	10.00
240 bushels corn	120.00
11 cords oak wood	33.00
100 bushels wheat	120.00
30 tons clover covering	300.00
15 bushels potatoes	15.00
100 bushels apples	50.00
50 bushels peaches	50.00
20 bushels sweet potatoes	20.00
2 hogs, 300 pounds net	12.00
2 pigs, 200 pounds net	10.00
Total	1,282.40

The court, upon the evidence and after considering the briefs and arguments of counsel on both sides, makes the following—

FINDINGS OF FACT.

I.

Of the above-described property there were taken, as alleged, by and for the use of the Army, stores and supplies of the value of $462, for which neither the claimants nor their testator has ever been paid.

II.

The claim was presented to the Quartermaster-General under the act of July 4, 1864, who allowed for 23 cords of rails as wood, at $3 per cord, $69. This amount was reported by him to the accounting officers of the Treasury, and Congress made an appropriation for that amount by the act of 1879, chapter 287 (20 Stat. L., 633), to said claimants as executors. A check was drawn in their favor but they declined to receive the same "as a full and final payment" as provided by that act, and the same has been covered into the Treasury and has never been paid.

Speaker of the House of Representatives.

[Court of Claims. Congressional No. 878. George L. Gray vs. The United States.]

This case, being a claim for supplies or stores alleged to have been taken by or furnished to the military forces of the United States for their use during the late war for the suppression of the rebellion, the court, on a preliminary inquiry, finds that George L Gray, the person alleged to have furnished such supplies or stores, or from whom the same are alleged to have been taken, was loyal to the Government of the United States throughout said war.

Filed, January 16, 1888.

[Congressional. Facts and loyalty. Court of Claims, No. 878. George L. Gray vs. The United States.]

At the Court of Claims held in the city of Washington on the 3d day of November, A. D. 1890, the court filed the following statement of case and findings of fact, to wit:

STATEMENT OF CASE.

The claim in the above-entitled case for supplies or stores alleged to have been taken by or furnished to the military forces of the United States for their use during the late war for the suppression of the rebellion was transmitted to the court by the Committee on War Claims of the House of Representatives on the 17th day of May, 1886.

Charles F. Benjamin, esq., appeared for claimant, and the Attorney-General, by Felix Brannigan, his assistant, and under his direction, appeared for the defense and protection of the interests of the United States.

On a preliminary inquiry the court, on the 16th day of January, 1888, found that the person alleged to have furnished the stores, or from whom they were alleged to have been taken, was loyal to the Government of the United States throughout said war.

The case was brought to a hearing on its merits on the 5th day of June, 1890. The claimant in his petition makes the following allegations:

That stores and supplies belonging to him were taken from his farm near Winchester, Franklin County, Tenn., by United States forces for the use of the Army, itemized as follows:

Date.	Item.	Description.	Quantity.	Value.
1863.
July 10	1	Beef cattle	22	$576
	2	Salt ... bushels	12	12
	3	Flour ... barrels	4	20
	4	Hogs	110	234
	5	Sheep	30	90
	6	Bacon ... pounds	2,500	300
	7	Lard ... do	300	45
	8	Beans ... bushels	3½	7
	9	Peas ... do	10	10
	10	Dried beef ... pounds	100	20
Nov. 20	11	Cattle ... head	11	297
		Total		2,301

The court, upon the evidence and after considering the briefs and arguments of counsel on both sides, makes the following

FINDINGS OF FACT.

The total value to the United States of so much of the property set out in the claimant's petition as was taken from him by the United States forces for the use of the army amounts to $1,643.12.

It does not appear that any payment has been made therefor.

COURT OF CLAIMS, CLERK'S OFFICE,
Washington, January 8, 1891.

SIR: Pursuan tto the order of the court I transmit herewith a certified copy of the findings filed by the court in the aforesaid cause, which case was referred to this court by the Committee on Claims, House of Representatives, under the act of March 3, 1883.

I am, very respectfully, yours, etc.,

JOHN RANDOLPH,
Assistant Clerk Court of Claims.

Hon. THOS. B. REED,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

[Court of Claims. Congressional case No. 1049. Aaron Van Camp and Virginius P. Chapin vs. the United States.]

At a Court of Claims held in the city of Washington on the 5th day of January, A. D. 1891, the court filed the following statement of case and finding of facts, to wit:

STATEMENT OF CASE.

The claim in the above-entitled case was transmitted to the court by the Committee on Claims of the House of Representatives on the 22d day of June, 1888. Messrs. Goode & Goode, with E. E. Holman, esq., appeared for claimant, and the Attorney-General, by James H. Nixon, esq., his assistant, and under his direction, appeared for the defense and protection of the interests of the United States.

The case was brought to a hearing on its merits on the 23d December, 1890.

The court, upon the evidence and after considering the briefs and argument of counsel on both sides, makes the following

FINDINGS OF FACTS:

I.

Aaron Van Camp and Virginius P. Chapin are citizens of the United States, residing at Washington, District of Columbia, and Clarksburgh, in the State of West Virginia, respectively.

Digitized by Google

II.

Virginius P. Chapin was appointed United States commercial agent for the Navigators' Islands by President Fillmore, and acted as such until he was superseded by Aaron Van Camp in 1854, under an appointment by President Pierce. In May, 1855, they formed a copartnership, under the firm name and style of V. P. Chapin & Co.; built up a large mercantile establishment at Apia, Samoa, consisting of warehouses and storehouses, a pearl-shelling depot on the Penurhyn Islands, and an establishment at the Island of Tutuila for purchasing cocoanut oil. Van Camp left Apia on the 12th of May, 1856, on the United States Ship Independence for Valparaiso, having appointed Chapin to act as vice-consul during his absence. His departure for Valparaiso was caused by the necessity of his being at that place to look after the disposition of a large amount of property belonging to American citizens, consisting of the cargo of the American whale-ship Rambler, which arrived at Apia in distress in December, 1855. Said ship having been condemned as unseaworthy, her cargo was placed in the warehouses of V. P. Chapin & Co., by Elihu E. Winchell, her master; who having been unable to dispose of it after a stay of three months at Apia, gave it in charge to the Van Camp, with authority to him to make the best disposition of it he could for all concerned; and no opportunity having offered to dispose of the property at a fair price, and after consultation with Commodore Mervine, of the U. S. flag-ship, Independence, it was decided to ship the cargo by the American schooner Eudorus, Henry Seaman master, to Valparaiso, the schooner having been chartered for that purpose at the sum of $4,000.

III.

After the departure of Van Camp, as aforesaid, but before the departure of the Eudorus, one Jonathan S. Jenkins arrived at Apia, having been appointed several months before to supersede Van Camp as commercial agent for the Navigators' Islands, accompanied by Thomas F. Martin and James M. Conway, who claimed to have been injured by Van Camp in certain proceedings taken by him, in his official capacity, with respect to the American barks St. Mary and Elvira, while on the voyage from San Francisco to the Navigators' Islands. Jenkins prepared and signed papers, in which he assumed to create a consular court, and appointed Robert S. Swanston clerk, and Samuel J. Agnew marshal. He arrived off the harbor of Apia on the 16th day of May, 1856, and having learned that the Van Camp had left for Valparaiso, and that the Eudorus was in the harbor laden with property belonging to Van Camp and about to sail for Valparaiso, sent Martin and Conway on shore to see the British consul and request him to detain the Eudorus, informing him of the course he intended to pursue against the property of Van Camp. The next day Jenkins entered the harbor and his marshal, acting under the authority of an order signed by him, Jenkins, on the 16th of May, 1856, and directing him to take possession and control of "all the property of or belonging to Aaron Van Camp, late United States commercial agent for Apia, wherever it may be found, and of whatever kind or description it may be, and keep the same in safe custody, subject to the order of the court," proceeded to take possession of the property laden on board the Eurodus and to seize the private dwelling of Van Camp, together with the buildings, merchandise, etc., belonging to V. P. Chapin & Co., in which Van Camp had an interest.

IV.

Soon after landing at Apia, Jenkins also appointed three so-called associate judges to sit with him in his consular court in two proceedings, styled cases "in admiralty," one in the name of Thomas F. Martin and the other in the name of J. M. Conway against Van Camp, the proceedings of which court appear in the following so-called orders and decrees:

[United States Consular Court for the Consulate of Apia; in admiralty. T. F. Martin vs. A. Van Camp, in rem, before Jonathan S. Jenkins, U. S. consul, presiding judge; Horace D. Dunn, Henry Seaman, Josiah B. Leeds, associate judges.]

The court do find that the plaintiff, T. F. Martin, has fully proved the illegal seizure and sale of the bark St. Mary and property thereon, and the confiscation of the proceeds by the above A. Van Camp, late United States commercial agent for Apia.

The court do therefore award unto the said T. F. Martin the sum of eight thousand dollars in full of the value of the said vessel and property thereon belonging to the said T. F. Martin.

And do further award the sum of two thousand five hundred dollars ($2,500) as damages in consideration of the losses, detriment, and distresses directly entailed upon the said plaintiff, T. F. Martin, by the aforesaid illegal acts of the said A. Van Camp, late commercial agent for the United States for Apia.

[Court of the United States consulate, Apia, Navigator's Islands. Jonathan S. Jenkins, U. S. consul, presiding judge. In the cause in admiralty, J. M. Conway vs. Aaron Van Camp, in rem.]

The undersigned, associate judges of this court, after a patient hearing, and upon a careful examination of the testimony offered in the case of J. M. Conway vs. Aaron Van Camp, relating to the alleged seizure and sale of the New Grenadian bark Elvira, which said alleged seizure and sale transpired within the jurisdiction of the consular court of this place, have come to and can give no other opinion or give other decision than the following:

(1) It will be seen by reference to the testimony (all of which was offered on behalf and on the part of said plaintiff, and may, therefore, be supposed to be the most favorable to his, the said plaintiff's, interests) that the evidence of many of the witnesses conflict upon many essential points of time, of occurrence, and of mode of procedure and action of many of the parties interested, or said to have been interested, in the transaction connected with the complaint.

(2) That no testimony has established the fact that the captain of the said bark was forced to deliver up the possession of the said vessel or that he did so.

(3) That according to the testimony of the mate, Mr. Attwood, and others, the captain of said bark willfully neglected to take the necessary steps to insure the completion of his voyage, all of which we believe to have been purposely and willfully neglected by him.

(4) That the testimony shows that the said captain was acknowledged and obeyed by his crew of said Elvira for at least two (2) months after his arrival in this port, and that bills for supplies furnished to said vessel and for labor done on said vessel for some time after her arrival were refused payment by Aaron Van Camp unless they were properly certified to by Captain E. Alley, the master of the Elvira, upon whose endorsement they were paid by Aaron Van Camp.

(5) That the vessel was under a foreign flag, and that therefore Aaron Van Camp, as U. S. commercial agent, had no control of the bark Elvira in his official capacity, and could not therefore compel her sale or give proper title.

(6) That from the testimony the master of the Elvira appears to have wilfully misrepresented that a Mr. Colby was her owner, and by his general conduct in the matter appears to have been the principal in the said alleged fraud.

(7) That it appears from the testimony that Captain Alley had the papers of the Elvira in his possession for a considerable time after his arrival, amply sufficient to have refitted and sent her to sea while she was yet in his possession.

(8) That the said Aaron Van Camp did pay bills for expenses on account of the bark Elvira, such as seamen's wages and other claims, and that the amount realized from the alleged sale was so small as to leave a fair inference that the amount alleged to have been paid by the purchaser was little, if any, more than said charges, no moneys, however, having been testified to as having been received at the sale.

(9) That from the testimony taken as a whole the alleged fraud connected with said vessel in Apia appears to have been committed by and with the consent of Captain Alley, who, as master of the Elvira, represented and acted as agent for her owners, and that by his act he has committed barratry, and is therefore personally answerable.

(10) That the said bark Elvira is liable to seizure by her lawful owners wherever found, and such proceedings would be upheld in any civilized country; therefore, in accordance with the before-stated reasons, we, the undersigned associate judges of the United States consular court, can come to no, nor can form any, other decision than the following, viz:

That the offense was barratry of master and that no just cause of complaint can lay against the said Aaron Van Camp, and that therefore no damages can be given to J. M. Conway, plaintiff, to be paid from the property of the aforesaid Aaron Van Camp.

In witness whereof we have hereunto set our hands under the seal of the consulate of Apia on this 31st day of May, 1856.

I, Jonathan S. Jenkins, United States consul for the consulate of Apia, believing the testimony in the above cause fully proves that Aaron Van Camp, knowingly and wilfully, acting as the United States commercial agent for this port of Apia, did wrongfully, on or about the 2d day of July, 1855, sell and hold from the possession of said J. M. Conway the bark Elvira, I therefore grant the said J. M. MONITION EXPRESS AND JUDGMENT.

The undersigned, Jonathan S. Jenkins, after a careful examination of the evidence of V. P. Chapin, given in the case of T. F. Martin vs. Aaron Van Camp, do adjudge that the said V. P. Chapin has no right, title, or interest in the cargo of the American schooner Eudorus, which cargo is now lying attached on board of said vessel in this port of Apia, and that the use of the name of V. P. Chapin & Co., as shipper of said cargo, does not, in the face of the evidence of the above-named V. P. Chapin, prove ownership therein to the said V. P. Chapin, but that, by the said evidence and the several shipping papers connected with the cargo the property belongs solely and entirely to Aaron Van Camp.

And now, in accordance with the above decision, I do hereby command the United States marshal for the consulate of Apia to consider the said cargo shipped by V. P. Chapin & Co., in accordance with this my decision, and to proceed against it as the property of the said Aaron Van Camp, under the order of sale issued to him against the said Aaron Van Camp's property from this court and dated 30th May, 1856.

Given under my hand and seal of office this thirteenth day of May, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-six.

JONATHAN S. JENKINS,
U. S. Consul and Vice-Commissioner for the Consulate of Apia.

The undersigned, judge and associate judges of the consular court of Apia, Samoa, in the Navigators' Islands, on examining the papers relative to the whale and sperm oil and whalebone now on board the brig Eudorus, can find no other conclusion than that it, the said oil and bone, is the property of Aaron Van Camp, the bills of lading being from V. P. Chapin to the said Aaron Van Camp, and the letters of instructions to the supercargo and captain of the said brig being of the same purport as to consignments or ownership.

Given under my hand and the consular seal this 20th day of May, 1856.

JONATHAN S. JENKINS,
U. S. Consul and Presiding Judge.

[United States consulate, Apia, Upolu. Referee case in reference, Thos. F. Martin and J. M. Conway vs. Aaron Van Camp. Cause in admiralty.]

We, the undersigned, having been called upon by the United States consular court in full session to inquire into and decide upon the merits of a certain claim of Captain Henry Seaman, of the brigantine Eudorus, for the amount of charter-money agreed to be paid to him by Aaron Van Camp upon his delivery in Valparaiso a certain cargo shipped to the order of the said Aaron Van Camp, the said cargo having been seized under a judgment and monition, issued out of the U. S. consular court for this consulate, against the said Aaron Van Camp, in favor of the parties aforesaid, and unlivered here in this port of Apia, do decide:

(1) That Captain Seaman is entitled to his full charter-money as though he had fulfilled his charter-party, he having already broken ground, and the noncarriage of the said cargo to Valparaiso having been the result of the illegal and wrongful acts of the said Aaron Van Camp, and not of any insufficiency on the part of the Eudorus or her tackle, or of any unwillingness on the part of the said Henry Seaman to fulfill his contract, and that the said Seaman was forcibly, by orders of the said court, dispossessed of the said cargo. Charter-money, as per charter, $4,000.

(2) That the 20 log days named in the charter-party do commence from the day the vessel was detained, viz, 17th day of May, inclusive.

(3) That the expense of discharging the cargo do fall upon the said cargo, Captain Seaman having refused to unliver the freight, and having ordered his crew to refrain from aiding in the same.

Given under my hand and the seal of the consulate at Apia this 2d day of June, 1856.

We acknowledge to have received our fee of $10, as allowed by law.

NOTICE.

On Tuesday next, the 19th inst., will be sold, in pursuance of a judgment issued out of the U. S. consular court in favor of J. M. Conway, the remainder of the interest of A. Van Camp in the firm of V. P. Chapin & Co., consisting of sundry merchandise, of debts due the said firm, and of their investment at the Pennrhyn Islands, as will be more fully particularized at the time of sale.

JONATHAN S. JENKINS,
U. S. Consul.

Sale to commence at 10 o'clock a. m. at the store of S. Pritchard, esq., Metafell, 15th August, 1856.
(Rec., p. 73.)

V.

Pursuant to the foregoing orders and decrees all the property belonging to the said Aaron Van Camp individually was sold, and all of the property of V. P. Chapin & Co., at a great sacrifice. The value of this property is alleged by the claimant to have been as follows:

Aaron Van Camp.

Two lots, with the buildings and other improvements thereon	$16,000.00
Furniture and library in residence and outhouses (as enumerated by L. D. Haskins and V. P. Chapin)	4,000.00
Collection of shells and natural curiosities	10,000.00
Lot of medicines, medical books, and surgical instruments	500.00
1 milch cow	100.00
1 consular gig, with masts, sails, and oars, complete	300.00
Total of Van Camp's property	30,900.00

V. P. Chapin & Co.

Property taken and sold from on board schooner Eudorus	21,942.00
Stocks of goods in their store	15,000.00
Goods, wares, and other articles in the warehouses and on the premises of V. P. C. & Co. at Tutuila, Pennryhn Islands, and other places, including a sloop and other boats	29,192.00
550 gals. sperm oil, from the cargo of the Rambler	1,650.00
Account of charges for cooperage, lighterage, storage, &c., on oil from the Rambler	15,000.00
Total of property of V. P. Chapin & Co.	82,784.00

(Rec., pp. 31, 67, 68, 72, 86, 92.)

Property of Aaron Van Camp, agent for the owners and shippers of cargo on board the Rambler.

56 casks of sperm and whale oil, 200 bbls. of which was whale oil	$40,000.00
63,000 lbs. of whalebone, at 50 cts	3,150.00
	43,150.00
Less charges of V. P. Chapin & Co., for storage, cooperage, lighterage, &c.	15,000.00
	28,150.00

VI.

But the court finds that much of the evidence relied upon by the claimants to prove the loss and value of the property above described consists of ex parte affidavits, letters, and documents, which are not legally competent, and must be excluded from the consideration of the court. After excluding such incompetent evidence the court finds the value of the property taken under the proceedings set forth in Finding IV as follows:

Individual property of Aaron Van Camp	$17,400.00
Property of V. P. Chapin & Co	38,700.00
Lien of Chapin & Co. on property of the Rambler	4,000.00
	60,100.00

Digitized by Google

VII.

The property claimed by Van Camp as agent for the owners and shippers of the Rambler was of considerable value in excess of the lien of Chapin & Co. for lighterage, storage, cooperage, etc., which the court finds to have been $4,000, as set forth in Finding VI. But the said owners and shippers have not appeared as claimants or otherwise, nor does it appear that they ever made any demand on Van Camp for the property, or sought to hold him liable therefor.

VIII.

In 1858 the claimants brought two suits in trespass de bonis asportatis against Jonathan S. Jenkins for the property before described in the late circuit court of the district of Columbia. The defendant appeared in person and by counsel and defended. On the 27th of October, 1859, the cases came to trial, and a verdict was found for the plaintiff in each case as follows:

Aaron Van Camp v. Jonathan S. Jenkins	$63,223
Aaron Van Camp and Virginius P. Chapin v. The same	63,408

A writ of fieri facias was issued against the property of Jenkins in each of the above cases, which on the 18th of May, 1860, was returned wholly unsatisfied. It does not appear that the claimants have ever received anything upon either judgment. Jenkins, the defendant, is now deceased.

BY THE COURT.

COURT OF CLAIMS, CLERK'S OFFICE,
Washington, January 9, 1891.

SIR: Pursuant to the order of the court I transmit herewith a certified copy of the findings filed by the court in the aforesaid cause, which case was referred to this court by the Committee on War Claims, House of Representatives, under the act of March 3, 1883.

I am, very respectfully, yours, etc.,

JOHN RANDOLPH,
Assistant Clerk, Court of Claims.

Hon. THOS. B. REED,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

[Court of Claims. Congressional Case No. 1851. Julia A. Nutt, executrix of Haller Nutt, deceased, vs. The United States.]

This case, being a claim for supplies or stores alleged to have been taken by or furnished to the military forces of the United States for their use during the late war for the suppression of the rebellion, the court, on a preliminary inquiry, finds that said Haller Nutt, the person alleged to have furnished such supplies or stores or from whom the same are alleged to have been taken, was loyal to the Government of the United States throughout said war.

Filed December 1, 1890.

[Court of Claims. Congressional Case No. 1851. Julia A. Nutt, executrix of Haller Nutt, deceased, vs. The United States.]

At a court of claims held in the city of Washington on the 5th day, of January, A. D. 1891, the court filed the following statement of case and findings of fact, to wit:

STATEMENT OF CASE.

The claim in the above-entitled case for stores or supplies alleged to have been taken by or furnished to the military forces of the United States for their use during the late war for the suppression of the rebellion, was transmitted to the court by the Committee on War Claims of the House of Representatives on the 16th day of February, 1887.

S. Prentiss Knut, esq., appeared for claimant and the Attorney-General by John C. Chaney, esq., his assistant, and under his direction, appeared for the defense and protection of the interests of the United States.

On a preliminary inquiry the court found that Dr. Haller Nutt, deceased, and his executor, the present claimant, were loyal to the Government of the United States throughout said war.

The case was brought to a hearing on its merits on the 1st day of December, 1890. The claimant in her petition makes the following allegations:

That the said Haller Nutt was well known to General Grant and all other United States military and naval officers as a Union and loyal man, and that in recognition of this fact his whole property, before it was molested, was protected and made inviolate by the United States Army by reason of the "safeguards" granted to him by Generals Grant, McPherson, A. J. Smith, and other United States officers; that of the several safeguards so granted the following is a sample one from General Grant:

"A safeguard is hereby granted to the plantation, houses, stock, and other personal property of Mr. Haller Nutt, on Lake St. Joseph, Tensas Parish, La., known as 'Winter Quarters.' All officers and soldiers belonging to the Army of the United States are therefore commanded to respect this safeguard, and to afford, if necessary, protection to said Nutt and his property above referred to."

That notwithstanding these safeguards the said property was appropriated and taken by the United States military authorities in defiance of the laws and usages among civilized nations.

That the said Haller Nutt died suddenly in July, 1864, leaving petitioner with eight helpless children and utterly without the means of support, so that in preparing her claim for presentation to the Government of the United States for the said losses, she was without funds to procure the necessary evidence showing the whole of said losses, wherefore she was unable to present them all at the time of the creation of the Southern Claims Commission, but subsequently she was able to ascertain many of them, and petitioned Congress for relief, which resulted in the passage of the act of August 7, 1882 (22 Stats., p. 734), which is as follows:

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Quartermaster General of the United States is hereby authorized and directed to examine and adjust the claims of Julia A. Nutt, widow and executrix of Haller Nutt, deceased, late of Natchez, in the State of Mississippi, growing out of the occupation and use by the United States Army during the late rebellion of the property of the said Haller Nutt during his lifetime, or of his estate after his death, including live stock, goods, and moneys, taken and used by the United States or the armies thereof; and he may consider the evidence heretofore taken on said claim, so far as applicable, before the Commissioners of Claims, and such other legal evidence as may be adduced before him in behalf of the legal representatives of Haller Nutt, deceased, or in behalf of the United States, and shall report the facts to Congress, to be considered with other claims reported by the Quartermaster General: Provided, That no part of said claim upon which said Commissioners of Claims have passed on the merits shall be considered by the Quartermaster General."

VII. That in pursuance of said act the Quartermaster-General examined and adjusted the said claims and reported the facts to Congress, recommending the payment to petitioner of the sum of $256,884.05.

VIII. That petitioner did not consider the said findings just, the amount recommended to be paid her being far less than what is due her from the United States, yet, owing to her dire poverty and the sufferings of her family, she was willing to accept the same as final, were the amount so recommended paid without delay, and asked Congress to pay the same.

That July 5, 1884, an act was passed (23 Stats., 552) providing for the payment of certain claims reported by the accounting officers of the United States Treasury Department under the act of July 4, 1864, which provided for the investigation of claims of loyal citizens for stores and supplies taken by the United States Army during the late war in the loyal States; that this act was an annual appropriation bill, and amended in the Senate, the title being amended to read "and for other purposes," and this "rider" closing the bill:

Mississippi.—To Julia A. Nutt, widow and executrix of Haller Nutt, deceased, of Adams County, the sum of thirty-five thousand five hundred and fifty-six dollars and seventeen cents ($35. 556. 17.")

Said sum was paid petitioner, and received by her on account of said claims. No receipt, discharge, or acquittance of any kind was given by petitioner in consideration of such payment, her claim not being one of those "examined and allowed by the proper accounting officers under the provisions of the act of July 4, 1864."

That the property taken from the said Haller Nutt or his estate after his death, as embraced in said claims, consisted of the following items:

1 steam cotton gin and grist mill from Evergreen	$20. 000. 00
4 miles cypress fence from Winter Quarters and Evergreen	8, 537. 25
1½ miles of cypress fence from Longwood	3, 523. 13
2,020 bales of cotton from Winter Quarters and Evergreen, 500 pounds per bale, at 37½ cents per pound	377, 066. 66
10,000 feet of cypress lumber from Evergreen	600. 00
200,000 feet cypress lumber from Longwood	12, 000. 00

10 gates from Winter Quarters and Evergreen	$250.00
Household goods from Winter Quarters	19,910.00
7 kegs nails from Winter Quarters	42.00
2 barrels lard oil from Winter Quarters	60.00
100 barrels pork from Winter Quarters	6,000.00
Cypress raft from Winter Quarters	1,200.00
4 hogsheads hams from Winter Quarters, 1,200 pounds each, at 25 cents per pound	1,200.00
64 horses and mules from Winter Quarters, Evergreen, and Cloverdale, at $150 each	10,600,00
100 wagon-loads fodder from Winter Quarters	1,500.00
100 bales fodder from Winter Quarters and Evergreen	800.00
195,000 bushels corn from Winter Quarters and Evergreen	195,000.00
80,000 bushels pease from Winter Quarters and Evergreen	160,000.00
4,000 cords wood from Winter Quarters	16,000.00
2 roofed coal boats at Natchez	5,000.00
50 bushels sweet-potatoes from Winter Quarters	100.00
250 head sheep from Cloverdale and Longwood	1,250.00
60 head cattle from Cloverdale	2,400.00
24 milch cows from Longwood	1,200.00
4 six-mule wagons from Cloverdale	800.00
12 pairs harness from Cloverdale	120.00
30 axes from Cloverdale	26.25
1 pair timber wheels from Cloverdale	150.00
426,000 brick from Longwood	4,260.00
5 halters from Longwood	3.75
Cash at Natchez	8,787.00
Total	858,386.04

The court, upon the evidence and after considering the briefs and arguments of counsel on both sides, makes the following

FINDINGS OF FACT:

I.

The court finds that the safeguards set forth in the petition were given as alleged and that the property taken was taken subsequent to the giving of such safeguards, with the exception of the property described in items 16, 20, and 21, and a part of the property described in item 17, to wit, two coal boats laden with corn, fodder, and potatoes. This property was taken in September, 1862, by the gun-boats of the United States or their transports then on the Mississippi River.

II.

The court also finds that Dr. Haller Nutt died in July, 1864, leaving a widow, the present claimant, and eight children at that time without the means of support and in great need and distress.

III.

The court also finds that the claimant received the sum of $35,556.17, appropriated by the Act 5th of July, 1884 (23 Stat. L., 552), without giving any receipt, discharge, or acquittance, or releasing the United States from her alleged claims.

IV.

The court also finds that there have been paid by the United States to the claimant the following amounts, to wit: $6,345.36, $56,368.25, $35,556.17.

That the first amount of $6,345.36 was the refunding of a like amount of money deposited by Dr. Haller Nutt in a bank in Mississippi and taken therefrom by the military authority and subsequently deposited in the Treasury.

That the second amount, of $56,368.25, was paid upon an award of the Southern Claims Commission for property taken by General Grant's army in 1863, being exclusively the property embraced in the award of a military commission appointed under instructions of General Grant. The claim before the Southern Claims Commission and the award aforesaid did not embrace the property for which compensation is now sought; that is to say, the property described in the claimant's petition as above set forth in these findings of fact.

That the third amount, of $35,556.17, was paid for or on account of property for which compensation is now sought, as above described.

Digitized by Google

V.

The court also finds that a portion of the property included in the claim, to wit, a large quantity of cotton, alleged to have been seven hundred bales, of the alleged value of $111,328, was destroyed by troops of the United States.

The court decides that the above item of the claim is excluded from its jurisdiction by the third section of the Act 3d March, 1883 (22 Stat. L., p. 485): and the court therefore has not considered the same and does not find or report the facts relating thereto.

VI.

The court also finds with regard to one item of the claim, to wit, "1 cotton gin and mill burned by General Grant's troops" that the gin and mill referred to constituted one building; that the same had been taken possession of by military authority for the purpose of grinding corn; and that it was being so used at the time when it was destroyed by fire and that the fire was not intentional but accidental.

VII.

The court also finds that the claimant has sought in this case to add to or increase the amount of the Quartermaster-General set forth in his report to Congress on this claim bearing date December 22, 1882, by the taking of additional property not allowed or included in the report, and also sought to prove and establish a larger valuation for some of the items allowed by that officer than the amounts which he reported as the value of the property. But the court finds that so much of the evidence relied upon by the claimant consists of documentary matter such as contemporaneous certificates and letters of well known officers and of citizens of well established character, and the contemporaneous reports of the claimant's former superintendents and overseers, and his private journals and accounts, which documentary matter although it may commend itself highly to the moral sense of individuals is not admissible in evidence according to the strict rules of law, and therefore can not be received or considered in this court. The court accordingly finds that the claimant has not established by legal and competent proof any other or greater quantity and value of the property taken as alleged in her petition; and the court also finds that the defendants have not produced any evidence tending to impeach the report of the Quartermaster-General or to show error or mistake in the items and amounts allowed by him in his said report, to wit:

1 cotton gin and mill, burned by General Grant's troops	$20,000.00
1 cypress fence (complete) burned for fuel by General Grant's troops	3,686.40
Household goods, taken by General Grant's troops	7,155.00
27 horses and mules, at $150 each	4,050.00
100 loads fodder	1,500.00
15 bushels co n, at $1 per bushel (receipt filed)	15.00
153,700 bricks, at $7 per M, taken by Union troops	1,075.90
122,000 feet of cypress lumber, at $45 per M feet, taken by Union troops	5,490.00
8,289.60 feet cypress fence (complete)	1,119.12
6 horses, at $150 each (receipt filed)	900.00
5 halters, 35 cents each (receipt filed)	1.75
700 bales of cotton, burned in gin, 426 pounds to the bale, at 37½ cents per pound	111,328.00
4,000 cords of wood, at $3.50 per cord	14,000.00
1,700 acres of corn, 40 bushels to acre, 68,000 bushels, at $1	68,000.00
1,700 acres peas, 10 bushels to acre, 17,000 bushels, at $2	17,000.00
2 kegs of nails, at $6	12.00
2 cans of lard oil, at $15	30.00
100 barrels of pork, at $15.21 per barrel	1,521.00
Total	256,884.05

And the court finds and reports accordingly that no error or mistake has been shown in the above award of the Quartermaster-General, made under the act of 7th of August, 1882 (22 Stat. L., 734), and that the same remains wholly unimpeached, excepting and reserving nevertheless the item of claim set forth in the fifth of these findings of the facts, as to which, it being beyond the jurisdiction of the court, no report is made.

[Court of Claims. Congressional Case No. 1343. The Western Miami Indians vs. The United States.]

At a Court of Claims held in the city of Washington on the 5th day of January, A. D. 1891, the court filed the following statement of case and findings of fact, to wit:

STATEMENT OF CASE.

The claim or matter in the above-entitled case was transmitted to the court by the Committee on Indian Affairs of the House of Representatives on the 21st day of February, 1887.

Messrs. Embry & Merriman appeared for claimants, and the Attorney-General, by E. P. Dewees, esq., his assistant and under his direction, appeared for the defense and protection of the interests of the United States.

The case having been brought to a hearing on the 8th day of December, 1890, the court upon the evidence and after considering the briefs and arguments of counsel on both sides finds the facts as herein stated:

Preliminary to and as explanatory of the following findings, reference is had to the following treaties between the United States and the Miami tribe of Indians, and acts of Congress relating to said tribes, to wit:

(1) Treaty of November 6, 1838 (arts. 10 and 14, 7 Stat., 569).

(2) Treaty of November 28, 1840, 7 Stat., 583 (arts. 5, 7, and 8, and additional art. 12), 585.

(3) Treaty of June 5, 1854, and the amendment thereto (10 Stat., 1093; art. 1, 2, 3, and 4, and amendment).

(5) Act of Congress March 3, 1873, 17 Stat., 631, and the action of the Secretary of the Interior thereupon, as per letter of instruction of date May 9, 1873, as follows:

Washington, May 9, 1873.

SIR: Referring to your letter addressed to this Department on the 1st instant, and to mine addressed to you on the 3d, I have to call your attention to the fol owing:

By the fourth section of an act approved March 3, 1873, to abolish the tribal relations of the Miami Indians, and for the other purposes, the Secretary of the Interior is required, in ninety days from the passage of the act, to cause a census to be taken of all the Miami Indians entitled to a share in all the reserved lands and moneys set apart by the treaty between the United States and the Miami Indians, dated June 5, 1854 (Stats., vol. 10, page 1093), for that part of the tribe known as the Western Miamis, including in said census, "those persons of Miami blood or descent for whom provision was made by the third section of the act of June 12, 1858, if in the opinion of the Secretary of the Interior the said Indians are entitled to be so included under treaty stipulations; but in such census none shall be included unless justly entitled according to the provisions of said treaty."

This devolves upon the Secretary of the Interior the duty of determining whether said census shall include those persons of Miami blood for whom provision was made by the third section of the act of June 12, 1858 (Stats., vol. 11, 332).

The third section of the act of 1858 authorized the Secretary of the Interior to pay such persons of Miami blood as have been heretofore excluded from the annuities of the tribe since the treaty of 1854, and whose names are not included in the supplement to said treaty, their proportion of the tribal annuities from which they have been excluded, and he was also authorized and directed to enroll such persons upon the pay list of said tribe and to cause their annuities to be paid in future. The Secretary was also authorized to cause to be located for such persons 200 acres of land each out of the tract of 70,000 acres reserved by the second article of the treaty of June 5, 1854, to be held by such persons by the same tenure as the locations of individuals are held which have been made under the third article of said treaty.

A proviso attached to the amendment to the fourth article of the treaty of 1854 (Stats., vol. 10, page 1099) declares that no person other than those embraced in the corrected list agreed upon by the Miamis of Indiana in the presence of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs in June, 1854, comprising 302 names as Miami Indians of Indiana, and the increase of the families of the persons embraced in said corrected list, shall be recipients of the payments, annuities, etc., hereby stipulated to be paid to the Miami Indians of Indiana.

Under the third section of the act of June 12, 1858, there were added to the list of Miami Indians of Indiana, referred to in the proviso just quoted, sixty-eight names, and these remained upon such list and received their proportion of the annuities of Indiana until and including the year 1866, when they were dropped from said list, under the opinion of the Attorney-General, dated September 20, 1867 (Att'y Gen'l Opin., vol. 12, p. 236), to the effect that they were not properly included under the treaty.

The question now presented for consideration is whether these persons are entitled by treaty stipulations to participate in the proceeds of the sale of the lands reserved to the Miami tribe by the treaty of 1854 and authorized to be sold by the first section of the act of March 3, 1873.

The treaty of June 5, 1854, purports to be made by George W. Manypenny, on the part of the United States, and certain persons therein named, on the part of and representing the "Miami tribe" of Indians. It is also stated in the preamble that certain Miami Indians, resident of the State of Indiana, were present and assented to the treaty. In various parts of the treaty the Miami Indians in what is now Kansas are recognized as the Miami tribe, and it is clearly inferable, from certain sections of the treaty, that the Indians remaining in Indiana were not regarded as members of the tribe proper.

The first section of the treaty reserves for the use of the members of the "Miami tribe," as I think, 70,000 acres for their future homes, and also a section of 640 acres for school purposes, to be selected and assigned to the tribes.

The second section provides that each individual or head of a family of the Miami tribe now residing on said land shall be entitled to 200 acres, etc.

This section provides for the manner of selecting the land so reserved, and in certain cases directs it to be done by the chiefs of the tribe; they are also to select the 640 acres reserved for school purposes, and then it is provided that the residue of the 70,000 acres, after settling individuals as aforesaid, shall be selected in a compact body contiguous to the individual reservations and be held as the common property of the tribe. It is also declared that the selections herein provided for shall be reported to the agent of the tribe.

It is also provided that when controversies arise between individuals which can not be settled by the parties, the difficulty should be decided by the chiefs of the tribes, subject to appeal to the agent, whose decision should be final.

The third section of this treaty provides that, in consideration of the cession thereinbefore made, the United States agrees to pay the "Miami tribe" of Indians the sum of $200,000 in the manner therein set forth.

It seems to me manifest that a clear distinction is made by this treaty between the Miami tribes and certain Indians who had failed to accompany the tribe west of the Missouri, and continued to reside elsewhere, and that none are included as members of the tribe except those who had accompanied the chiefs of the tribe west of the Missouri, and that the benefits to be derived from the reservation of 70,000 acres for their future homes and their annuity or annuities guarantied by the third article of the treaty were secured to the members of the tribe of Miamis, as herein defined and explained.

The sixty-eight persons, therefore, who were, under the act of June 13, 1858, added to the list of Miami Indians of Indiana are not entitled to any share in the proceeds of the lands that are to be sold under the first section of the act of March 3, 1873; nor are they entitled to any of the annuities which, by the treaty of 1854, are guarantied to the Miami tribe of Indians.

I have, therefore, to direct that those persons of Miami blood or descent for whom provision was made by the third section of the act of June 12, 1858, be not included in the census which is to be made under the fourth section of the act of March 3, 1873 (U. S. Stats., 17, p. 632), and you will instruct Superintendent Hoag to take such census accordingly.

The superintendent should further be directed in taking the census to make two lists, one containing the names of all the Indians entitled to the benefits of the act of March 3, 1873, who may elect to become citizens of the United States, and their minor children, the other the names of all who elect to remain under the care of the United States and to unite with the Wea, Peoria, Kaskaskia, and Piankeshaw Indians, in the Indian Territory, according to the provisions of a contract made January 15, 1872, between the Western Miami Indians of Kansas and said Wea, Peoria, and Kaskaskia and Piankeshaw Indians.

You will cause instructions for the guidance of Superintendent Hoag in the performance of the duties thus devolved upon him to be made out and submitted to this office for approval.

Very respectfully,

C. DELANO,
Secretary.

(6) Act of Congress of May 15, 1882, and the opinion of the Attorney-General thereupon (17 Atty. Genl. Op., 400).

FINDINGS OF FACT.

I.

In compliance with the treaty of 1840, above cited, most of the Miami tribe of Indians removed to Kansas in the year 1846. A large number of the tribe, besides those who had special permission under the said treaties and acts of Congress to remain in Indiana, did not emigrate with the tribe, but remained in Indiana and adjacent States and between the dates of such removal and the treaty of 1854 the annuities due the tribe were divided. One part was distributed among the Western Miamis, or those who resided on the ceded lands in Kansas, and the other part was distributed among the Miamis of Indiana.

II.

In June, 1854, soon after the treaty, the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, in consultation with the head men of the Indiana portion of the tribe, revised and corrected the list of those remaining in Indiana and who were entitled to a distribution of the fund to be paid to the Indiana Miamis, which constituted a list of 302 persons, and which is referred to and made a part of the amendment to the treaty above referred to.

III.

Under the act of 1858 the Secretary of the Interior, in the month of October, 1858, took from the funds set apart for the Western Miamis, and without their consent, the sum of $18,370.89, and paid out the same to 68 persons (to which 5 persons were afterwards added) who were decided by the Indian Department to have been of partial Miami blood. This payment was made from the following funds then in the possession of the United States:

(1) From a balance remaining of the seventeenth and twentieth installments, per second article of the treaty of November 28, 1840, being the proportion of the Miamis of Kansas of $12,500, per fourth article of the treaty of June 5, 1854	$2,679.76
(2) Part of the fifth of six equal installments to the Miamis residing on the ceded lands, for purchase of former perpetual and other annuities and relinquishment of claims, per fourth article of treaty of June 5, 18 4	15,691,13

And stipulated in said article to be paid to the Miamis residing on the ceded lands.

IV.

Under the same act the Secretary of the Interior allotted to said 68 persons (afterwards increased to 73) 200 acres each out of the 70,000 acres reserved to the Miamis by the treaty of 1854, amounting in the aggregate to 14,533.38 acres. Said selections and allotments were reported to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs on the 18th of July, 1859, and approved by the Secretary of the Interior October 7, 1859. The lands allotted to said 73 persons were so allotted without consultation with the tribe and without the consent of the chiefs obtained therefor.

V.

The persons so admitted to participate in said payment of money and allotments of land were then placed upon the roll of the Miamis of Indiana and received the annuities in common with the latter until their names were stricken from such roll under the opinion of the Attorney-General in 1867 (12 Atty. Genl. Op., p. 236). These persons did not emigrate to the West with the tribe, nor did they reside on the ceded lands in Kansas prior to such allotments, but remained in the Eastern country, and it is not shown that these persons, most of whom were stricken from the list of the Miamis of Indiana in 1854, as above stated, were of Miami blood.

The reasonable value of the lands so allotted to said 73 persons in November, 1859, the date of the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, was an average of $3 per acre, amounting in the aggregate to $43,600.14.

MATHEW WOODYARD.

Letter from the Assistant Clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the findings of the court in the case of Mathew Woodyard against the United States.

JANUARY 16, 1891.—Referred to the Committee on War Claims.

COURT OF CLAIMS, CLERK'S OFFICE,
Washington, January 15, 1891.

SIR: Pursuant to the order of the court I transmit herewith a certified copy of the findings filed by the court in the aforesaid cause, which case was referred to this court by the Committee on War Claims, House of Representatives, under the act of March 3, 1883.

I am, very respectfully, yours, etc.,

JOHN RANDOLPH,
Assistant Clerk Court of Claims.

Hon. THOMAS B. REED,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

[Court of Claims. Congressional No. 4959. Mathew Woodyard vs. The United States.]

This case, being a claim for supplies or stores alleged to have been taken by or furnished to the military forces of the United States for their use during the late war for the suppression of the rebellion, the court, on a preliminary inquiry, finds that Mathew Woodyard, the person alleged to have furnished such supplies or stores, or from whom the same are alleged to have been taken, was loyal to the Government of the United States throughout said war.

Filed April 22, 1889.

[Court of Claims. Congressional Case No. 4959. Mathew Woodyard vs. The United States.]

At a Court of Claims held in the city of Washington on the 5th day of January, A. D. 1891, the court filed the following statement of case and findings of fact, to wit:

STATEMENT OF CASE.

The claim in the above-entitled case, for supplies or stores alleged to have been taken by or furnished to the military forces of the United States for their use during the late war for the suppression of the rebellion, was transmitted to the court by the Committee on War Claims of the House of Representatives on the 10th day of July, 1888.

G. W. Z. Black, esq., appeared for claimant, and the Attorney-General, by W. J. Rannels, esq., his assistant and under his direction, appeared for the defense and protection of the interests of the United States.

On a preliminary inquiry the court, on the 22d day of April, 1889, found that the person alleged to have furnished the supplies or stores, or from whom they were alleged to have been taken, was loyal to the Government of the United States throughout said war.

The case was brought to a hearing on its merits on the 11th day of December, 1890. The claimant in his petition makes the following allegations:

That there was taken from the claimant's field near Brentsville, Va., the following described property:

May 25, 1863, 1 horse, taken for the use of the United States, May 25, 1863, by General Newton	$125.00
October, 1863, 2 horses, taken October, 1863, by First Regiment Maine Cavalry	275.00
October, 1863, 30 barrels corn at $10, taken for the use of the United States by First Regiment Maine Cavalry	300.00
October, 1863, 9 hogs, taken by General Newton and Colonel Mann	135.00
October, 1863, 1 beef	30.00
Total	865.00

The court, upon the evidence and after considering the briefs and arguments of counsel on both sides, makes the following

FINDINGS OF FACT.

I.

There was taken from the claimant's field near Brentsville, Va., a quantity of corn standing in the shock by the First Maine Cavalry for the use of the Army in 1863, but it does not appear what quantity of corn was taken and the court is unable to find the value thereof.

II.

The court finds that all of the remaining property above described was taken by military authority from the claimant at the same place during the year 1863 by military authority for the use of the Army, the reasonable value of which was $490.

[Court of Claims. Congressional case No. 1959. Robert E. Tweedy vs. The United States.]

At a Court of Claims held in the city of Washington on the 5th day of January, A. A. 1891, the court filed the following statement of case and findings of fact, to-wit:

STATEMENT OF CASE.

The claim in the above-entitled case for supplies or stores alleged to have been taken by or furnished to the military forces of the United States for their use during the late war for the suppression of the rebellion was transmitted to the court by the Committee on War Claims of the House of Representatives on the 2d day of March, 1887.

G. W. Z. Black, esq., appeared for claimant, and the Attorney-General by James H. Nixon, esq., his assistant and under his direction, appeared for the defense and protection of the interests of the United States.

On a preliminary inquiry the court, on the 18th day of February, 1889, found that the person alleged to have furnished the supplies or stores or from whom they were alleged to have been taken was loyal to the Government of the United States throughout said war.

The case was brought to a hearing on its merits on the 8th day of December, 1890. The claimant in his petition makes in substance the following allegations:

That in the years 1863, 1864, and 1865 the military forces of the United States for their use took from the claimant from his plantation in the State of Alabama stores and supplies amounting in value to the sum of $7,560, consisting of horses, mules, hogs, corn, fodder, and harness.

The court upon the evidence, and after considering the briefs and arguments of counsel on both sides, makes the following

FINDINGS OF FACT:

I.

In the years 1863, 1864, and 1865 the military forces of the United States for their use took from said claimant, at said place, stores and supplies of the kind and quantity alleged in said petition; that the value of said stores and supplies to the United States at the time of the taking was the sum of $3,879.

II.

It does not appear that said stores and supplies have been paid for, either in whole or part.

ZOÖLOGICAL PARK COMMISSION.

LETTER FROM THE SECRETARY OF THE COMMISSION FOR THE ESTABLISHMENT OF A ZOOLOGICAL PARK IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, TRANSMITTING THE FINAL REPORT OF SAID COMMISSION.

JANUARY 21, 1891.—Referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION,
Washington, D. D., January 19, 1891.

SIR: I am instructed by the Commission for the Establishment of a Zoölogical Park in the District of Columbia to present this its final report. The report, signed in duplicate, I have the honor to inclose to you.

Very respectfully yours,

S. P. LANGLEY,
Secretary Smithsonian Institution and Secretary Zoölogical Park Commission.

The SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

REPORT OF COMMISSION

JANUARY 19, 1891.

To the Senate and House of Representatives in Congress assembled:

The Commission for the Establishment of a Zoölogical Park has the honor to state that the purchase of the 166.48 acres of land mentioned in its report to Congress of January 16, 1890, has been completed by the condemnation of certain lands, at prices which have been approved by the President, as follows:

Owner.	Number of acres.	Condemnation price approved by the President.
Pacificus Ord	24.570	*$16,696.73
J. P. Klingle	6.180	9,270.00
Part of cemetery	1.700	3,000.00
E. E. Hayden	.670	1,897.00
McPherson & Finley	.315	1,372.00
J. L. Kervand	†1.060	233.10
		32,468.83

* The actual condemnation price was $16,836.48, but the Government has deducted $139.75 on account of unpaid taxes.

† At the date of the last report of the Commission this land was unclaimed, but since then, Mr. Kervand has established his claim to it.

Digitized by Google

The entire cost of the land and the expenses incidental to the of Commission are shown in the subjoined abstract:

Cost of land acquired by agreement	$158,355.76
Cost of land acquired by condemnation	32,468.83
		$190,8
Clerical, legal, and other expenses		8,7
Total expenditure		199,6

It will be seen that the expense of purchase has been brought w the $200,000 appropriated by Congress, and that their remains a ance of $385.84. That the purchase has been an advantageous o the Government appears to be shown by the fact that in the two since it was made the value of land in that region has increased siderably over 100 per cent.

The Commissioners desire to add that from their care not to ex the limits of the appropriation, they were obliged to omit, on acc of its higher cost, the purchase of about 8 acres of land on the sou side of the Park, as indicated on the accompanying map, in spite c fact that the nature of the ground makes it, in their opinion, fo interest of the Government to secure it, and they respectfully re mend its acquisition at a cost of not over $50,000.

Having covered into the United States Treasury all the fund maining in its possession, the Zoölogical Park Commission bel that it has completed the duties with which it was charged by th of Congress of March 2, 1889, and respectfully presents this as its report.

HENRY L. POPE.

Letter from the Assistant Clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the opinion and findings filed by the court in the case of Henry L. Pope against the United States.

JANUARY 22, 1891.—Referred to the Committee on War Claims.

COURT OF CLAIMS, CLERK'S OFFICE,
Washington, January 21, 1891.

SIR: Pursuant to the order of the court I transmit herewith a certified copy of the opinion and findings filed by the court in the aforesaid cause, which case was referred to this court by the Committee on War Claims, House of Representatives, under the act of March 3, 1883.

I am, very respectfully, yours, etc.,

JOHN RANDOLPH,
Assistant Clerk Court of Claims.

HON. THOMAS B. REED,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

[Court of Claims. Congressional No. 534. Henry L. Pope vs. The United States.]

This case, being a claim for supplies or stores alleged to have been taken by or furnished to the military forces of the United States for their use during the late war for the suppression of the rebellion, the court, on a preliminary inquiry, finds that Henry L. Pope, the person alleged to have furnished such supplies or stores, or from whom the same are alleged to have been taken, was loyal to the Government of the United States throughout said war.

Filed March 28, 1887.

[Court of Claims. Congressional case No. 534. Decided on the Proofs. Henry L. Pope v. The United States.]

OPINION.

NOTT, J., deliverd the opinion of the court:

This is the third time that the quantum of the damages in this case has been under consideration. But the counsel for the claimant has pressed the cause of his client with such earnestness and good faith that the court deems it proper now to declare the reasons for which it must adhere to its former conclusion.

The suit is to recover for the use and occupation of certain vacant lots in the city of Louisville from April 1, 1863, to May 1, 1866. The use and occupation consisted in the commissary department erecting on the premises a large storehouse. The case has been once remanded to enable the claimant to produce further evidence on the question of value, but no instance has been shown of the actual rental of such property. A number of witnesses have indeed testified that in their judgment $400 a year or $500 a year would be a fair rent; and if their judgment was based upon knowledge, it would be entitled to great consideration; yet, inasmuch as it does not appear to be based on the transactions of men, we must regard it as nothing better than the opinion of witnesses. The failure to show actual transactions of this character leads to the conclusion that in Louisville, as in other parts of the world, a temporary lease of unimproved city property is not a marketable commodity; that such property really has little or no rental value.

The claimant has sought to supply this needed evidence by proving the value of the fee simple in 1863, in 1864, in 1865, and in 1866, and has asked the court to allow 7 per cent. on the average of these estimates, which would result in $181.96, $336, $434, $170.87, equal to $1,122.83 for the entire term.

This court decided at a very early day, in Johnson's Case (2 C. Cls. R. 391), that "the rule for the measure of damages for the temporary occupation of lands by the Government is the value of such temporary occupancy at the time of entry, as though the claimant had leased and the Government had rented the premises." And the rule has been steadily adhered to (4 C. Cls. R., 248; 8 id., 243). The relations of landlord and tenant become fixed at the time of entry; and where the holding continues and becomes a tenancy from year to year neither of them is subject to the fluctuations of real estate in the market. If the Government is the tenant the accounting officers can not inquire annually what the land is worth; neither can the owner augment the current rent because the property will sell for more than when the Government entered upon it. Rent once fixed continues until it be changed by agreement. If the occupancy of the Government be unreasonably continued, or changed conditions render the rent unreasonably small, the landlord must procure an express agreement, or take measures to bring the occupancy, or the implied lease, to an end. So long as he does nothing, he assents to a rental based on the value of the occupancy at the time of entry.

It is true that in this case the claimant has testified that the occupancy began without his consent and against his wishes. But the damages which may be recovered in an action of trespass do not belong here. The Government is never a trespasser; its entry is always lawful. If the acts of its officers were tortious the owner's remedy is against them. He may not assent to the entry in form, and it may be in fact against his wishes, but if he afterwards brings an action for use and occupation he thereby acknowledges that he did consent. Every person who acquires property in this country, real or personal, in effect subscribes to an agreement to hold it subject to the right of the Government to take it for public use on the payment of just compensation. All property is held on this condition, whether it be the most tangible known to the law, real property, or the most intangible, the patented mind-work of the inventor. There is no action of trespass against the Government for the one nor of infringement for the other. The damages must be estimated as if the owner expressly consented to the occupancy or taking for reasonable compensation, but neglected to fix the amount.

We come now to the value of the present occupancy, to the implied rent which the Government should have paid for these vacant lots in the city of Louisville. As has been said, the leasing of other vacant lots has not been shown. The owner did indeed lease these immediately after the Government vacated them, for a corresponding period of three years, at $500 a year; but he leased them when the value of the realty had risen from $3,600 to $7,800, and he leased them to the parties who had purchased the commissary storehouse which stood upon them. The building was worth nothing without land for it to stand upon, and while it stood upon these lots and the tenants controlled it, the lots were not, so far as those tenants were concerned, unimproved property. At the end of three years their occupancy ceased, the building was destroyed or removed, the property reverted to its former condition of unimproved, and from that time to this has never been leased. We must therefore reject this leasing as a criterion of value, and restrict our inquiry to what was the value of the property in its unoccupied, unimproved condition, in the spring of 1863.

It is a matter of common knowledge that in every American city large quantities of unimproved land, commonly called vacant lots, are held as investments, which yield neither rents nor profits. It is also a matter of common knowledge that when such property is partially improved by a barn, or shed, or small tenement the owner is glad to lease it for 2 or 3 per cent., while he continues to hold it for speculative purposes. In the present case it appears by the testimony of the claimant that these lots were bought and held for speculative purposes, and that the holding of the Government worked no injury to the owner, for during this occupancy their value rose from $3,600 to $7,800, and when it ceased he was for a while enabled to receive for them $500 a year. The court, therefore, has taken the value which the claimant's witnesses agree in placing upon the property in 1863 viz, $3,600, and has allowed 2½ per cent. on that valuation as the annual rental for each of the three years, viz, $90, giving for the period of occupancy $278. On the former hearing, the court, by another process, found $300 to be the value of the occupancy. The difference is not material, and the order of the court is that the findings which were filed March 19, 1888, be reported to Congress.

[Court of Claims. Congressional Case No. 534. Henry L. Pope vs. The United States.]

At a Court of Claims, held in the city of Washington on the 19th day of March, A. D. 1888, the court filed the following findings of fact, to wit:

FINDINGS OF FACT.

The claim or matter in the above-entitled case was transmitted to the court by the Committee on War Claims of the House of Representatives on the 19th day of February, 1886. C. D. Pennebaker and John J. Weed, esquires, appeared for claimant, and the Attorney-General, by Heber J. May, Esq., his assistant, and under his direction, appeared for the defense and protection of the interests of the United States.

The case having been brought to a hearing on the 1st day of March, 1888, the court, upon the evidence and after considering the briefs and arguments of counsel on both sides, finds the facts to be as follows:

I.

The claimant, a citizen of the United States, residing at Louisville, Ky., during and since the war of the rebellion, alleges in his petition:

That on or about the said 1st day of April, 1863, the United States, through its authorized officer and agent, Maj. H. C. Symonds, a commissary of subsistence in he United States Army, stationed at said city of Louisville, entered upon and took possession of three lots of land, owned by him and in his possession; that the United States thereafter, and until on or about the 1st day of May, 1866, continued to use and occupy said three lots of land for military purposes; that the reasonable value of the use and occupation of said three lots of land, so as aforesaid used and occupied by the United States, was $50 per month; and he claims from the United States the sum of $1,850, as the reasonable value of the use and occupation of said three lots of land, for and during the period above specified.

II.

The court finds that said three lots of land were owned by the claimant, a loyal citizen of the United States, and were taken possession of by said commissary of subsistence, who built thereon for the use of the United States a storehouse, which he used for the storage of flour and other property of the United States from April, 1863, to about May 1, 1866, when the storehouse was sold for the benefit of the United States and the claimant resumed possession of the land.

The rental value of said three lots of land for the whole time while so occupied by the commissary was $300, which has never been paid.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith a copy of council memorial No. 1, of the twenty-ninth legislative assembly of New Mexico, on the subject of a Spanish land grant court, for the purpose of adjudicating titles in this Territory.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

B. M. THOMAS,
Secretary of New Mexico.

The SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

COUNCIL MEMORIAL NO. 1.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Whereas there is urgent necessity for the enactment by the Congress of the United States of a law establishing a court or tribunal whose duty it shall be to hear and determine as to the validity, character, and extent of claims made to lands by communities and private individuals within the Territory of New Mexico, and which are based upon grants or concessions alleged to have been made by the Governments of Spain and Mexico: Therefore,

Be it resolved by the legislative assembly of the Territory of New Mexico, That the Congress of the United States be, and it is hereby, requested to enact at once a law that will create a court or tribunal with power to hear and adjudicate all such claims in a prompt and speedy manner, and the general features of the bill upon this subject that was lately passed by the lower House of Congress, meets with the commendation of this body; but this body most earnestly protests against such portions of such bill as provide that the court thereby created shall sit or hold any of its sessions in the city of Washington, believing that if such a provision is retained in the bill and the same becomes a law, great injustice would be done to a large number of claimants in this Territory, and that if they shall be compelled to present their claims before a court or tribunal in Washington City, the necessary cost and expense in doing so would be a practical denial of the right, and their claims would of necessity have to be abandoned.

Resolved, That a copy of this memorial be forwarded to the Hon. Antonio Joseph, Delegate in Congress from this Territory, with a request that he present the same to the Senate and House of Representatives, and also that a copy thereof shall be sent to the President of the United States, Speaker of the House of Representatives, and President of the Senate.

This case, being a claim for supplies or stores alleged to have been taken by or furnished to the military forces of the United States for their use during the late war for the suppression of the rebellion, the court, on a preliminary inquiry, finds that Mary Ellen Saffold, the person alleged to have furnished such supplies or stores, or from whom the same are alleged to have been taken, was loyal to the Government of the United States throughout said war.

[Court of Claims. Congressional case No. 2155. Mary Ellen Saffold v. The United States.]

At a Court of Claims held in the city of Washington on the 12th day of January, A. D. 1891, the court filed the following statement of case and findings of fact, to wit:

STATEMENT OF CASE.

The claim in the above-entitled case for supplies, or stores, alleged to have been taken by or furnished to the military forces of the United States for their use during the late war for the suppression of the rebellion, was transmitted to the court by the Committee on War Claims of the House of Representatives on the 10th day of February, 1888.

Messrs. Earle and Pugh, esqs., appeared for claimant, and the Attorney-General, by James H. Nixon, his assistant, and under his direction, appeared for the defense and protection of the interests of the United States.

On a preliminary inquiry the court, on the 18th day of March, 1889, found that the person alleged to have furnished the supplies or stores, or from whom they were alleged to have been taken, was loyal to the Government of the United States throughout said war.

The case was brought to a hearing on its merits on the 15th day of December, 1890.

The claimant in her petition makes the following allegations:

"That she is a citizen of the United States, residing in the State of Alabama, wherein she resided during the late war of the rebellion, and at different times the United States military forces, commanded by General Wilson, took from your petitioner quartermaster stores and commissary supplies for the use of the said army to the value of $5,192.50, itemized as follows:

	1. 12 mules, at $150	$1,800.00
	2. 3 horses, at $150	450.00
	3. 2,000 pounds of bacon, at 30 cents	600.00
	4. 500 bushels of corn, at $2	1,000.00
	5. 300 pounds of sugar	90.00
	6. 3,000 pounds of fodder	30.00
	7. 100 gallons of molasses	100.00
	8. 200 pounds of lard	60.00
A	9. 300 bushels of wheat	750.00
B	10. 75 bushels of pindars	112.50
C	11. 6 barrels of flour	90.00
D	12. 20 bee-gums of honey	60.00
E	13. 100 turkeys, chickens, and ducks	50.00
	Total	5,192.50

That she presented her claim for all the foregoing items, except the latter five, to the Southern Claims Commission under the act of March 3, 1871, and they were disallowed on account of suspected disloyalty.

The court, upon the evidence and after considering the briefs and arguments of counsel on both sides, make the following

FINDINGS OF FACT.

I. The total value to the United States of so much of the stores and supplies set out in the eight items first named in claimant's petition as were taken from her by the United States forces for the use of the Army amounts to $2,033, for which no payment appears to have been made.

II. The five items last named in claimant's petition have not been considered by the court for the reason they were not presented to the Southern Claims Commission and are therefore barred by the act of March 3, 1879 (20 Stat., 650).

By section 3 of the Bowman act (22 Stat., 485) the court is forbidden to take jurisdiction of any claim then barred by virtue of the provision of any law of the United States.

AMENDED PETITION.

The honorable the judges of said court:

Your petitioner respectfully shows as follows, to wit: That she is a citizen of the United States, residing in the State of Alabama, wherein she resided during the late war of the rebellion, and at different times the United States military forces, commanded by General Wilson, took from your petitioner quartermaster stores and commissary supplies for the use of the said army to the value of $5,192.50, itemized as follows:

1. 12 mules, at $150	$1,800.00
2. 3 horses, at $150	450.00

4. 500 bushels of corn, at $2	1,000.00
5. 300 pounds of sugar	90.00
6. 3,000 pounds of fodder	30.00

	7.	100 gallons of molasses	$100.00
	8.	200 pounds of lard	60.00
A	9.	300 bushels of wheat	750.00
B	10.	75 bushels of pindars	112.50
C	11.	6 barrels of flour	90.00
D	12.	20 bee-gums of honey	60.00
E	13.	100 turkeys, chickens, and ducks	50.00
		Total	$5,192.50

II. Your petitioner further states that said claim for compensation for said stores and supplies enumerated in the foregoing paragraph, except the latter five, were presented to the Southern Claims Commission, under the act of Congress approved March 3, 1871, and was by said Commission disallowed about A. D. 1873, and reported such action to Congress in its "third general report."

III. The ground upon which the claim was disallowed was a suspicion of disloyalty, and your petitioner, being satisfied of the injustice of such a conclusion, petitioned Congress of the United States for relief, and on the 10th day of February, 1888, said claim, together with all the papers in the case, were referred by the Committee on War Claims of the House of Representatives to the Court of Claims, under section 1 of an act of Congress approved March 3, 1883, entitled "An act to afford assistance and relief to Congress and the Executive Departments in the investigation of claims and demands against the Government."

IV. That no assignment or transfer of said claim, or any part thereof or interest therein, has been made, except as stated herein; that she did not give any aid or comfort to the late rebellion, but was throughout that war loyal to the Government of the United States. Wherefore your petitioner prays that when the facts shall have been ascertained as to her loyalty and the justice of her claim, the same may be reported to the House of Representatives of the United States, or to the said Committee on War Claims, as provided in said act of March 3, 1883.

FORT BROWN MILITARY RESERVATION.

JANUARY 31, 1891.—Referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed.

JANUARY 6, 1890.

Mr. HOLMAN submitted the following, which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs:

Whereas it appears by an act passed March 3, 1885, the sum of $160,000 was appropriated to enable the Secretary of War to acquire a good and valid title for the United States to the Fort Brown Reservation, Tex., and to pay and extinguish all claims for the use and occupation of said reservation: Provided, That no part of this sum should be paid until a complete title be vested in the United States; and

Whereas it is alleged that disputes have arisen between claimants as to their respective shares of this appropriation, and that the Secretary of War has not paid any part of said amount; and

Whereas by an act of Congress passed in 1875 the sum of $25,000 was appropriated for the purchase of the grounds and payment of rent of the said Fort Brown, and in the report of General Sherman was considered as sufficient; and

Whereas from documentary evidence on file in the War Department, the Quartermaster-General's office, and from the testimony of Army officers and civilians it is alleged that the payment of the sum of $160,000 would be a fraud on the Government:

Resolved, That the Committee on Military Affairs be instructed to investigate the subject-matter herein named, also to inquire into and report as to what necessity exists, if any, for a military post at said point and the cost to the United States of said post since 1865, and to report by bill or otherwise.

Resolved, That the Secretary of War be requested to withhold the payment of any part of said sum of $160,000 for the grounds and rents of the said Fort Brown Reservation.

the person alleged to have furnished the supplies or stores, or from whom they were alleged to have been taken, was loyal to the Government of the United States throughout said war.

The case was brought to a hearing on its merits on the 21st day of January, 1891. The claimant in his petition makes the following allegations:

That he is a citizen of the United States, residing in the county of Marion, State of Kentucky; that he resided during the late war of 1861 in the county of Marion and State of Kentucky; that he has a claim against the United States for stores or supplies taken by or furnished to the Army or Navy of the United States for army or navy use at or near his said residence at the times hereinafter stated, and by the officers named; said property being reasonably worth at the time and place the value here given, that is to say:

October 24, 1862:

1. 85 bushels corn, at 60 cents	$51.00
2. 1,600 pounds hay, at 75 cents	12.00
3. 17 cords wood, at $4	68.00
4. Sorrel horse	125.00
Total	256.00

The court, upon the evidence and after considering the briefs and arguments of counsel on both sides, makes the following.

FINDINGS OF FACT.

I.

There were taken from the claimant during the war of the rebellion, by and for the use of the Army, stores and supplies as alleged in the petition of the value of $124, for which he has not been paid.

BY THE COURT.

THE JEWS IN RUSSIA.

FEBRUARY 5, 1891.—Referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed.

Mr. HITT, from the Committee on Foreign Affairs, reported the following RESOLUTION:

[As a substitute for resolution introduced by Mr. Cummings of date December 19, 1890.]

Resolved, That the members of the House of Representatives of the United States have heard with profound sorrow the reports of the sufferings of the Jews in Russia, and this sorrow is intensified by the fact that such occurrences should happen in a country which is and long has been the friend of the United States, which emancipated millions of its people from serfdom, and which defended helpless Christians in the East from persecution for their religion, and we earnestly hope that the humane and enlightened spirit then so strikingly shown by His Imperial Majesty will now be manifested in checking and mitigating the severe measures directed against men of the Jewish religion.

PROTEST OF THE CREEK DELEGATES AGAINST THE PASSAGE OF H. R. BILL 12768.

February 6, 1891.—Referred to the Committee on the Judiciary and ordered to be printed.

Mr. Rogers, of Arkansas, (by request) presented the following:

PROTEST OF THE CREEK NATION OF INDIANS AGAINST THE EXTENSION OF THE JURISDICTION OF THE UNITED STATES COURT IN THE INDIAN TERRITORY.

To the honorable, the Senate and the House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

The undersigned delegates of the Creek Nation of Indians would respectfully call your attention to House bill 12768, which proposes to extend the jurisdiction of the United States court in the Indian Territory. The bill, if enacted into a law, we submit, will, in effect, destroy the right of local self-government guarantied to our people by numerous treaty stipulations, and guaranties dating as far back as the year 1832.

Article fourteenth of Creek treaty proclaimed April 4, 1832, says:

The Creek country west of the Mississippi shall be solemnly guarantied to the Creek Indians, nor shall any State or Territory ever have a right to pass laws for the government of such Indians, but they shall be allowed to govern themselves, so far as may be compatible with the general jurisdiction which Congress may think proper to exercise over them.

Article fourth of treaty proclaimed August 28, 1856 says:

The United States do hereby solemnly agree and bind themselves, that no State or Territory shall ever pass laws for the government of the Creek or Seminole tribes of Indians, and that no portion of either of the tracts of country defined in the first and second articles of this agreement shall ever be embraced or included within or annexed to any Territory or State; nor shall either, or any part of either, ever be erected into a Territory without the full and free consent of the legislative authority of the tribe owning the same.

Article fifteenth of same treaty says:

So far as may be compatible with the Constitution of the United States, and the laws made in pursuance thereof, regulating trade and intercourse with the Indian tribes, the Creeks and Seminoles shall be secured in the unrestricted right of self-government, and full jurisdiction over persons and property within their respective limits.

Article tenth of Treaty proclaimed August 11, 1866, says:

The Creeks agree to such legislation as the Congress and President of the United States may deem necessary for the better administration of justice and the protection of all rights of person and property within the Indian Territory: Provided, however, (That) said legislation shall not in any manner interfere with or annul their present tribal organizations, rights, laws, privileges, and customs.

No one of the five civilized tribes of the Indian Territory has asked for any change in its relations with the United States, or signified any dissatisfaction with their local judiciary, or complained of a lack of proper protection of their person or property. The Indians of the Territory are not prepared to be subjected to the multifarious and, to them, imcomprehensible, laws of the United States; nor are they disposed to give up their own nationalities and laws, which answer the purpose of their civilization, prosperity, and happiness. They each have a written constitution and code of civil and criminal laws; they have their own executive officers, chosen by the people; legislatures, courts, schools, and other institutions in successful operation, the same as any State or Territory of the United States.

Life and property, in each of these Nations, are as carefully guarded and protected, and the laws are as sacredly administered and enforced by the local courts throughout the Indian Territory as anywhere in the United States.

In view of these facts and the further fact that the enactment of a law such as is contemplated by the bill mentioned would be a flagrant violation of solemn treaty stipulations, we respectfully, but earnestly, enter our protest against the passage of said bill, and also against any interference on the part of Congress with the rights, privileges, and institutions established by our people in pursuance of treaty stipulations.

[Court of Claims. Congressional Case No. 764. John C. Bailey, administrator of Andrew Nichols, deceased, v. The United States.]

At a Court of Claims held in the city of Washington on the 26th day of January, A. D. 1891, the court filed the following statement of case and findings of fact, to wit:

STATEMENT OF CASE.

The claim in the above-entitled case, for supplies or stores alleged to have been taken by or furnished to the military forces of the United States for their use during the late war for the suppression of the rebellion, was transmitted to the court by the Committee on War Claims of the House of Representatives on the 30th day of April, 1886.

On a preliminary inquiry the court, on the 21st day of May, 1888, found that the person alleged to have furnished the supplies or stores, or from whom they were alleged to have been taken, was loyal to the Government of the United States throughout said war.

The case was brought to a hearing on its merits on the 19th day of January, 1891. The claimant, in his petition, makes the following allegations:

Your petitioner, John C. Bailey, administrator of Andrew Nichols, deceased, respectfully represents—

That decedent was a citizen of the United States, residing in Marshall County, State of Mississippi; that decedent resided during the late war of 1861 6 miles south of Holly Springs, in the county of Marshall and State of Mississippi, and that claimant's post-office address was Holly Springs, county of Marshall, State of Mississippi; that he has a claim against the United States for supplies and stores taken by or furnished to the Army of the United States for army use, at or near Holly Springs, in said county, stated at $1,853 25 (originally stated at $2,969.50), viz:

(1) 350 bushels corn, at $1	$350.00
(2) 6,000 pounds fodder, at $2	120.00
(3) 80 cords of wood, at $3	240.00
(4) 1 large black horse	200.00
(5) 1 lot of shop tools and iron	30.00
(6) 1 fine 4-year old colt	200.00
(7) 1 large sorrel horse-mule	125.00
(8) 100 bushels corn, $1	100.00
(9) 18 new cotton sheets, at 75 cents	13.50
(10) 1 axe	1.00
(11) 10 water buckets, at 50 cents	5.00
(12) 975 pounds fresh beef, at 10 cents	97.50
(13) 500 pounds fresh beef, at 10 cents	50.00
(14) 200 pounds bacon, at 20 cents	40.00
(15) 300 pounds flour, at 8 cents	24.00
(16) 25 bushels Irish potatoes, at $1	25.00
(17) 2,200 pounds fresh pork, at 10 cents	220.00
(18) 100 pounds fresh beef, at 10 cents	10.00
(19) 75 pounds salt, at 3 cents	2.25
Total	1,853.25

The court, upon the evidence, and after considering the briefs and arguments of counsel on both sides, makes the following

FINDINGS OF FACT.

I. In the latter part of the year 1862 and the early part of 1863 the military forces of the United States, for the use of the Army, took from the said decedent from his farm at the place aforesaid stores and supplies consisting of corn, fodder, horses, mules, beef, pork, and wood, amounting in the aggregate value to the United States of $1,067. All items not herein specified are disallowed.

It does not appear that any payment has been made for said supplies.

[Court of Claims. Congressional case No. 775. Henry C. Nichols v. United States.]

At a Court of Claims held in the city of Washington, on the 3d day of February, A. D. 1891, the court filed the following statement of case and findings of fact, to wit:

STATEMENT OF CASE.

The claim in the above entitled case for supplies, or stores, alleged to have been taken by or furnished to the military forces of United States for their use during the late war for the suppression of the rebellion, was transmitted to the court by the Committee on War Claims of the House of Representatives on the 30th day of April, 1886.

leged to have been taken, was loyal to the Government of the United States throughout said war.

The case was brought to a hearing on its merits on the 19th day of January, 1891. The claimant in his petition makes the following allegations:

That he is a citizen of the United States, residing in Marshall County, State of Mississippi; that he resided during the late war of 1861 7 miles south of Holly Springs, in the county of Marshall and State of Mississippi, and that his post-office address was county of Marshall, State of Mississippi; that he has a claim against the United States for supplies and stores taken by or furnished to the Army or Navy of the United States, for Army or Navy use, taken at or near Holly Springs, in said county, stated at $1,396.75, viz:

(1) 1 black mule	$175.00
(2) 1 bay mare	150.00
(3) 1 beef, 300 pounds, net, at 10 cents	30.00
(4) 40 barrels corn, at $4	160.00
(5) 7 stacks fodder, at $9	63.00
(6) 3 hogs, 500 pounds, net, at 10 cents	50.00
(7) 20 barrels corn, at $4	80.00
(8) 9 head cattle, at $20	180.00
(9) 20 head hogs, 3,000 pounds, at 10 cents	300.00
(10) 700 pounds bacon, at 25 cents	175.00
(11) 1 barrel flour	10.00
(12) 100 pounds salt, at 5 cents	5.00
(13) 50 pounds sugar, at 12½ cents	6.25
(14) 25 pounds coffee, at 50 cents	12.50
Total	1,396.75

The court, upon the evidence, and after considering the briefs and arguments of counsel on both sides, makes the following

FINDINGS OF FACT.

1. There were taken from the claimant during the war of the rebellion by and for the use of the Army, stores and supplies as alleged in the petition, of the value of $980, for which he has not been paid.

The claimant took the benefit of the bankrupt act prior to the presentation of his claim to the Claims Commission. In their report adverse to the claim, the Commissioners say:

"It appears in evidence that the claimant has passed through bankruptcy, and his claim, if any existed, has passed by assignment to his assignee. The claim is therefore disallowed without further investigation."

The claimant was discharged in bankruptcy in 1868, and prior to the passage and approval of the act of March 3, 1871, creating the Claims Commission.

On a preliminary inquiry the court, on the 16th day of January, 1888, found that the person alleged to have furnished the supplies or stores, or from whom they were alleged to have been taken, was loyal to the Government of the United States throughout said war.

The case was brought to a hearing on its merits on the 21st day of April, 1890. The claimant in his petition makes the following allegations:

That in March, 1863, and November, 1864, the military forces of the United States took from the said decedent, for their use, stores and supplies of the kind and quality, to wit: Eight mules and four horses, of the value of $1,660; said property at the time of the taking was in Williamson County, Tennessee.

The court, upon the evidence and after considering the briefs and arguments of counsel on both sides, makes the following

FINDINGS OF FACT.

In the year 1863 and 1864, at the place aforesaid the military forces of the United States took for their use from the said decedent stores and supplies of the kind and quality aforesaid, amounting in the aggregate to the sum of $1,060 value to the United States.

II. It does not appear that any payment has been made for any of said property so taken.

The Claims Commission in substance found said decedent loyal, but rejected the claim upon the ground that the sons of the decedent, who are legatees, had been in the Confederate army.

On a preliminary inquiry the court, on the 28th day of January, 1889, found that the person alleged to have furnished the supplies or stores, or from whom they were alleged to have been taken, was loyal to the Government of the United States throughout said war.

The case has been brought to a hearing on its merits. The claimant in his petition makes the following allegations:

"That he has a claim against the United States for stores and supplies taken by or furnished to the U. S. Army, at or near Winchester, Frederick County, Va., for army use at the times hereinafter stated and by the officers named, said property being reasonably worth at the time and place the value here given, that is to say:

"1. 150 acres standing timber, 500 cords, at $2	$1,000
"2. 25,000 rails, 500 cords wood, at $2	1,000
"3. 1 log barn and stable used as firewood, 20 cords wood, at $2	40
"4. 1 cow	40
"5. 25 head sheep, at $2	50
"6. 1 hog (weight, 350 pounds gross), at 10 cents per pound	35
"7. 1 fanning-mill	12
"Total	2,177

"All the property was taken in October, November, and December, 1864, by Gen. P. H. Sheridan's army; items 1, 2, and 3 by General Merritt's command or Colonel Stag's; the remaining items by Lieutenant Wood, Twenty-fifth New York Cavalry."

The court, upon the evidence and after considering the briefs and arguments of counsel on both sides, makes the following

FINDINGS OF FACT.

That there were taken, as alleged, from Sampson Touchstone (since deceased), from his farm near Winchester, Frederick County, Va., during the late war, by the military forces of the United States, and appropriated to their use, timber and rails reasonably worth the sum of $1,125. The taking and appropriation of the other property specified in the petition is not proved.

LEVEES OF THE MISSISSIPPI RIVER.

COMMITTEE ON LEVEES AND IMPROVEMENTS
OF THE MISSISSIPPI RIVER,
Tuesday, January 6, 1891.

The committee met at 10 a. m., Hon. J. C. Burrows in the chair.

The committee having under consideration a bill to repair and build the levees of the Mississippi River, to improve its navigation, to afford ease and safety to its commerce, and to prevent destructive floods, this day heard statements thereon.

STATEMENT OF GEN. C. B. COMSTOCK, U. S. ARMY.

The CHAIRMAN. I will say, General Comstock, that we have had several bills introduced and referred to this committee, one of which I hold in my hand, providing for an appropriation of $9,000,000 to be used in the repair and building of levees on the Mississippi River from the head of the Passes, near its mouth, to Cairo, which said sum shall be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War in accordance with the plans, specifications, and recommendations of the Mississippi River Commission and approved by the Chief Engineer: Provided, That not more than $3,000,000 shall be expended during any one year: Provided further, That the said work shall be constructed and protected in cooperation with the riparian States and local authorities. You are president, I believe, of the Mississippi River Commission.

General COMSTOCK. I am.

The CHAIRMAN. How long have you held that position?

General COMSTOCK. I think about 2 years; the previous time about 2 years.

The CHAIRMAN. How long have you been connected with the Commission?

General COMSTOCK. Since 1879.

The CHAIRMAN. The matter we are inquiring about is directed chiefly to the construction of levees as necessary adjuncts to the improvment of low-water navigation on the Mississippi, and we will be glad to hear you on the subject: First, the plan possible of improving the low-water navigation on the river adopted by the Commission, the channel works, and then to what extent levees are necessary as an auxiliary to that work.

General COMSTOCK. The general plan adopted by the Mississippi River Commission is this: It has noticed where the river now is very wide, say 1½ to 2 miles wide in straight reaches, there is shallow water and where the river is not over, say, 3,000 feet wide in straight reaches there is deep water, say 10 feet; so the Mississippi River Commission concludes that by contracting the river the depth of the water will be increased in these wide places. The contraction work has been effected by building spurs or dikes out into the river so as to narrow it in the expectation of collecting the sediment between these dikes. This contraction of the river of course increases the velocity of the water and that tends to increase the scour on the other bank and on other banks in the vicinity; therefore the Commission have found it necessary also to protect the caving banks in the vicinity in any reach they have undertaken to improve. This method has been applied at Plum Point Reach, and there the work is well towards completion. It has been applied to Lake Providence Reach, and it has produced results there similar to those obtained in the Plum Point Reach, but Congress three or four years ago in the river and harbor bill prohibited the building of bank protection as a rule, that is, generally prohibited it, and one of the results of that and of a lack of appropriations was that we were unable to take care of the work we had already done at Lake Providence Reach, and we lost a large amount of the bank protection in consequence of it.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me ask you, there, a question in regard to this channel work. How much has been done on the river?

General COMSTOCK. On the Plum Point Reach the stretch they are at work upon is about 17 miles.

The CHAIRMAN. And at Lake Providence Reach?

General COMSTOCK. At Lake Providence Reach the total distance must be about 20 miles.

The CHAIRMAN. And has channel work been prosecuted at any other points except those two?

General COMSTOCK. No; unless at Memphis, which was mainly for the protection of Memphis, where work was done on the bank above Memphis to keep the river as it is.

The CHAIRMAN. These general improvements have been carried on only for about 37 miles?

General COMSTOCK. That is about the distance.

The CHAIRMAN. What portion of the river in miles requires channel improvements in order to afford ease and safety to navigation?

General COMSTOCK. I should think it would be three-fourths of the river from Cairo to Red River.

The CHAIRMAN. You think from Cairo to Red River three-fourths of the distance would require this channel work?

General COMSTOCK. Would require contraction work or bank protection work.

The CHAIRMAN. What is the distance from Cairo to the Red River by the river?

General COMSTOCK. The distance is about 730 miles, I think. In regard to the distance of three-fourths of the river, I was not aware I was to be questioned upon the general subject of improvements and therefore I have not brought with me the papers which were presented to the committee of the other House, I think a year ago, and in saying three-fourths of the distance that must be regarded as only an approximation.

The CHAIRMAN. Yes; we understand that.

General COMSTOCK. That distance you asked me for is 764 miles.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, now, general, if you will give us your ideas in relation to the construction of levees in conjunction with channel work as a necessary adjunct to the improvement of low-water navigation we will be obliged.

Mr. BOATNER. Mr. Chairman, I would like, in connection with the question, that the witness would address himself also to the other feature of the Mississippi River Commission bill. If you recollect it is stated in the bill that the object of the creation of the Commission is to improve the navigation of the river, or rather devise means for the improvement of the navigation of the river and the prevention of disastrous floods. Now, I understand this bill is to practically carry into effect the latter clause of that bill which seems to have been overlooked as an independent work, and I would like, general, in your statement in reference to the improvement of the navigation of the river, that you would also give us your views on the feasibility of constructing levees of sufficient strength and height to confine the river to its channel and prevent disastrous floods.

The CHAIRMAN. I intended to follow your idea also, but I would like for the general to give us, in the first place, his understanding of levees as a means of improving the low-water navigation of the river and then to follow up with the suggestion made by Mr. Boatner.

Mr. STOCKDALE. Mr. Chairman, first on that point I would like to ask the question as to how long any of this bank protection has been in place in the river and has been a permanent protection to the bank?

Mr. BOATNER. With the permission of the chairman I would like to make this suggestion. General Comstock has been for a long time in this business and he knows a great deal about the subject, and I anticipate he knows pretty well what we would ascertain, and I ask that he be permitted to make a general statement on the subject to cover the points and afterwards in regard to a matter of detail which any member of the committee would like to know about it could be inquired into specifically.

The CHAIRMAN. I understood that a member of the committee, Mr. Stockdale, desires to ask some question in regard to bank protection; what was your question?

Mr. STOCKDALE. How long has any of this bank improvement been in place, and is it regarded by the Commission as a permanent protection when it is so completed?

General COMSTOCK. I think we put in the Bullerton bank protection in about 1882, under water and above water, both. It has stood 8 years very well. In our bank protection we have used a good deal of brush, which has acted under water very well. That which is above low water decays, and as it decays we must add stone so that ultimately when the protection is permanent we would have a layer of stone from low water to the top of the bank.

Mr. STOCKDALE. Will stone stay there?

General COMSTOCK. We have tried it, and we have not lost any yet. From St. Louis down for about 25 miles the river has been improved using that method, and it has stood very well.

Mr. BOATNER. There is work at Vicksburg which was done 8 or 10 years ago which is intact. I noticed it the other day as I came across.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, general, if you will enter upon the other subject.

General COMSTOCK. In reference to your question as to building levees in improving low-water navigation, I do not think it is a cheap way of improving the river and I do not know that they improve it at all. The trouble is, as I stated before, where the river is excessively wide the water is shallow. At Plum Point Reach there is a place where the river was a mile and a half wide and when we began the work the water went down sometimes to 5½ and 6 feet. Now below that wide place 4 or 5 miles there is a place where the river is narrow and the water is very deep. If you examine the velocities of that deep place and the shallow place I spoke of, you will find at low water the velocity is very slight in the deep place and high relatively in the shallow place. As the river rises the velocity increases in the deep place until it becomes very high. It increases in the shallow place but it never goes as high. The tendency in these deep places of the high velocity is to scour out during floods the material which it takes to one of the lower places, one of those wide places where there is a low velocity and where part of that material is dumped, and the result is during the high water the bed of the river rises in these shallow places. As the river falls again the low-water velocity becomes greater than it is in the deeper places and this falling water cuts out a channel through the sand which has been dumped. This is what the pilots call cutting out bars and is well known on the river, as the river is continually carrying on this process of building up bars; and by building levees a mile and a half apart you are going to increase the velocity so slightly that the question is whether you will increase the velocity enough to more than counterbalance the greater velocity in the deeper water and the greater scouring. That is the theoretical side of it. In 1874 Colonel Suter made a report mentioning the depth of the worst bars of the Mississippi River. We have for 2 or 3 years for part of the river similar data since that time. In 1888 and 1889 it was a very low-water year, so we know what bars there were with less than 10 feet on them then. Since 1880 there have been something like $8,000,000 or $9,000,000 spent on levees below Memphis. If levees had deepened the water it ought to show itself in some degree on those bars, and if the list of bars be examined there are nearly as many in 1888 and 1889 as there were in 1874 and the subsequent years, so that, so far as our experience goes, I do not see—of course this method of the measurement of water is not an exact one, it is only a rough one—any positive evidence that levees have lowered the bars. I am in hopes they will do it somewhat, but it is a thing I am very uncertain about, and therefore I am uncertain that the building of levees is going to materially improve low-water navigation, which is done by increasing the depth over the bad bars.

The CHAIRMAN. I suppose when the river is flooded it flows over the channel works.

General COMSTOCK. At many of them it does.

The CHAIRMAN. What in your judgment will be the effect if levees should be constructed so as to confine the flooded waters of the river within a definite channel; what would be the effect upon low-water navigation if they should be built of sufficient height to control the flooded waters absolutely and hold them within a narrow space, a reasonable space?

General COMSTOCK. As I said, I hoped we could build levees that will produce some improvement in low-water navigation, but I have not evidence enough yet to lead me to think that it is an economical way of improving the condition of the river.

The CHAIRMAN. How much of the river is now leveed?

General COMSTOCK. About 1,300 miles on the river below St. Louis, both banks.

The CHAIRMAN. How much would have to be added to make the levee system complete from Cairo down?

General COMSTOCK. The St. Francis Front has had very little done in many years and the levees are in a bad condition. I do not know what gaps are in this front, but they will amount to many miles. Then at Helena, or 15 miles below there, there is a gap that will be filled up with the present appropriation within some 30 or 40 miles. Then from Cypress Creek, which is below the Arkansas River, the levees are continuous down to the forts below New Orleans, with the exception of the gap where the Red River comes in, a gap of about 20 miles.

Digitized by Google

The CHAIRMAN. Is it possible, in your judgment, to construct a system of levees of sufficient height and strength to restrain the flood waters of the river within a narrow channel?

General COMSTOCK. I am not myself in favor of constructing a system of levees that are narrow. I differ in some respects with other members of the Commission in that they think having levees close together is going to improve the river. I do not feel confidence in it, but they may improve the river. On the right bank of the river, the west side, the levees almost as a rule have followed the bank of the river closely. Where they do that, by any caving of the bank they have to move them back beyond the caving, and the United States has built levees, I think, twice or three times in places on account of the bank caving away. On the Mississippi side the Mississippi engineers have been much wiser, and as a result they have a good many miles of the river leveed 3 or 5 miles back from the river and these levees are perfectly safe. I should suppose that 25 per cent. of the money spent in levees since 1880 has been lost by caving since the levee was built.

The CHAIRMAN. That is 25 per cent. of the money spent on the levees?

General COMSTOCK. Yes, sir; therefore I think levees should be put where they are safe, even at additional cost, and the flood waters going down instead of finding a narrow way find this wide way, which will diminish in some degree the height of the levees ultimately necessary.

The CHAIRMAN. You said something about confining the waters within a channel of, say, 3,000 feet——

General COMSTOCK. I do not think I mentioned that. Part of the lower river is hardly more than 3,000 feet wide and the levees are on the banks of the river.

The CHAIRMAN. As an engineer do you think it practical to construct a system of levees of sufficient height and strength to restrain the flood water of the Mississippi?

General COMSTOCK. Oh, yes.

The CHAIRMAN. That could be done?

General COMSTOCK. Oh, yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Now suppose that could be done, would not that restrain the flood waters and scour out the channel?

General COMSTOCK. That is the same question I answered.

The CHAIRMAN. But you say you have some doubt.

General COMSTOCK. I am in doubt about it. I am in hopes it will do it, but our experience on the Mississippi River yet so far is that it has not done it.

The CHAIRMAN. Would this be true, the narrower you brought the levees together the greater would be the probability of scouring the channel?

General COMSTOCK. If I wanted to scour the bed and not to protect the country I should put the levees as close together as I could.

The CHAIRMAN. Have you made any estimate of the probable cost of constructing a system of levees which would restrain the flood waters of the Mississippi?

General COMSTOCK. I have not, but this is a general idea, that levees should be made straight and all necks cut off if possible without costing very much more. I have not made an estimate on this, but the Commission submitted an estimate very recently of the cost of raising the levees 5 feet. That estimate was $16,000,000 I think.

Digitized by Google

Mr. BOATNER. Is it not the experience of the Commission that the river has almost invariably shoaled below crevasses and large breaks in the levees?

General COMSTOCK. It has in a number of cases.

Mr. BOATNER. Is it not the experience of the Commission that these shoals have disappeared on the reconstruction of these levees?

General COMSTOCK. In some cases.

Mr. BOATNER. Well, it is the opinion of some of your associates, is it not, that the construction of levees does assist in improving the navigation of the river in concentrating the current and washing away the accumulations of silt and drift and matter which obstruct the flow of the water and create bars?

General COMSTOCK. Yes, sir. In reference to the last question I might say I entirely agree that scour will occur in all places where the water is tolerably deep, that is, where the velocities are already high, levees will increase the velocity; but the question is whether the scouring power is going to be sufficiently increased in the wide, shallow places. They are the places which obstruct navigation.

Mr. BOATNER. I understand you to say that the velocity being so high in the deep places causes a scouring and causes a corresponding deposit in these wide reaches of the river?

General COMSTOCK. There is a deposit in the wide reaches.

Mr. BOATNER. And when the water fell this deposit would be scoured away by the force of the low-water current?

General COMSTOCK. In the shoal places.

Mr. BOATNER. And if the levees are allowed to give way at these wide places, and in addition to the slackening of the current to which you have referred, so as to cause the eddies and swerves which invariably follow these crevasses, would not these breaks cause a much larger deposit than would be precipitated if the levee should be maintained?

General COMSTOCK. I would say, if these views I hold are correct, if you had levees built so as to hold all the water where the river was very wide, and you were to take these levees away absolutely for 20 or 30 miles that the depth on the worst shoal would not change very much.

Mr. BOATNER. That is if all the levees were away?

General COMSTOCK. Take Plum Point reach, for instance. If this bar-building process is true which I have described, suppose with the original great width you removed all the levees for 30 miles, that bar would still remain there; it would not change much.

Mr. BOATNER. You do not think it would increase the bar and lower the level of the river to allow the water to escape from the bank at a shallow place?

General COMSTOCK. Now, if you make a small crevasse, say about 1,000 feet wide where the river was deep, it might be there you would find some shoaling; but if you take a reach of say 20 miles, I think the bar would not be much worse after taking the levees away than before, or be much better after building the levees than before.

Mr. BOATNER. You are of the opinion, however, that it is entirely feasible and practicable to construct a line of levee on either side of the river which will prevent disastrous floods.

General COMSTOCK. Oh, yes; reservoir embankments are built 40

Digitized by Google

and 50 feet high, and this is merely a reservoir embankment to endure a short time, 50, 60, or 100 days.

Mr. STOCKDALE. About what difference would be the distance between the levees following the river and building them across the points as you suggest?

General COMSTOCK. It varies a great deal at different parts of the river. At many places of the river the length straight down the river is half of what following the river would be.

Mr. STOCKDALE. And how much higher would the levees have to be, say those on the banks, taking into consideration the fall of the land as it recedes from the river on the one hand and the closer you get to the water on the other?

General COMSTOCK. We have not had surveys made over many of these points, and as to that question I could not answer positively. The river has wandered so much through the valley, and there are so many ridges, that it would be difficult to tell without any accurate survey. The shortening of the levee about counterbalances the increased height for some of the points on the St. Francis front, but whether that would be true on the whole or not I am unable to say.

The CHAIRMAN. Suppose you were to construct levees simply to prevent disastrous floods, where would you build them?

General COMSTOCK. It is difficult to say where, because localities differ a great deal. Wherever I could cut off and cross a neck without increasing the expense I would. Wherever I could build it back from a caving point without increasing the expense largely I would build it away back, so as to avoid the difficulty of building a high levee every 3, 5, or 10 years. If you wish to have a permanent and complete system of levees and to take care of them when close to the river you have to protect your cav ng banks. That is done on the Po. The bank must be protected by stone and brush work just to hold these levees.

The CHAIRMAN. To protect the bank from caving.

General COMSTOCK. Yes, sir; with a view to the safely of the levees. One-third is probably too large, but there are long reaches protected, and you find levees 15 or 20 feet high protected by stone.

Mr. BRICKNER. For instance you are speaking of building these spurs like that [illustrating] and you say it will increase the velocity of the water.

General COMSTOCK. Yes, it of course diminishes the water way, and anything that does that increases the velocity.

Mr. BRICKNER. Will not it have the tendency to throw the water on the other side?

General COMSTOCK. Yes, sir; that is the reason we have to protect the opposite bank in order to prevent scouring.

Mr. BRICKNER. Now if you had a continuous levee would not that increase the velocity of the water without throwing it on the other side of the stream?

General COMSTOCK. If we had high levees that would increase somewhat the velocity of the water.

Mr. BRICKNER. After you have increased the velocity of the water would not that have a tendency to scour out the channel and make it permanent?

General COMSTOCK. If the only mission of the rising water was to scour, it would. The velocity is increased everywhere as water rises. Now, it might be supposed as the result of that, that everywhere the bed would be scoured out when the water height was increased 5 or 10 feet; but the river in fact does not scour out everywhere. During high stages the bed fills up in these shallow places, so the deeper water and higher velocity instead of giving a lower bed to the river gives a higher bed to the river in very wide places, which are the shallow ones.

Mr. BRICKNER. Does it not create more pressure the more water you get in it?

General COMSTOCK. There is more weight of water on the shoal.

Mr. BRICKNER. After the velocity is increased does that collect sediment on the bottom?

General COMSTOCK. Yes. On this Plum Point reach, where it is 1½ miles wide, I said they increased all the way up. That is not strictly accurate, because much of these bars is formed when the water is falling.

Mr. BRICKNER. That is true; but suppose that it narrowed in this continuous levee and this continuous levee would hold the water closely together, would it become as low or as shallow as it will by throwing out these spurs and allowing—

General COMSTOCK. I do not think I quite catch your question.

Mr. BRICKNER. Would these bars form if there was a continuous levee?

General COMSTOCK. They form now at wide places when the river rises 30 and 40 feet, and I think they would form then. I do not think it would change the action on the bed, and I do not think it would cut the bed out, but it is impossible to say just exactly the importance of these facts. I only judge from the fact that the bed itself rises.

Mr. BRICKNER. Now, I understand these spurs are put out diagonally, like this [illustrating with a book].

General COMSTOCK. Very often at right angles, square to the bank.

Mr. BRICKNER. Does it not break over it in high water?

General COMSTOCK. They are pile dikes of two, three, or four rows, and about 10 feet apart in the rows, and sometimes brush is woven in making a kind of wicker work. The water flows through and the result of that is that the sand is deposited right below.

Mr. BOATNER. Is it not an invariable result that there is an immediate accumulation of silt behind these dikes, I mean these spur-dikes, unless there is a very strong current there?

General COMSTOCK. That is what we build them for, and we almost always get an accumulation of silt behind them.

Mr. BOATNER. That proves conclusively that any interruption to the current of the Mississippi River causes an immediate precipitation and deposit.

General COMSTOCK. No; it proves that the interruption which we form by those dikes cause a precipitation and deposit.

Mr. BOATNER. In the course of your investigation have you found any interruption to the current of the Mississippi River which did not cause precipitation and deposit of silt carried in the current?

General COMSTOCK. That is a question which is difficult to answer. That seems to imply that the higher the velocity the more the sediment carried. That is not true; it is very far from true.

Mr. BOATNER. This is true, that the carrying capacity of the river or the capacity of the water to maintain and to carry is in the ratio of the velocity of the current.

General COMSTOCK. What its carrying capacity is I do not know. I know what it carries, and I know it often carries much more sediment at medium velocities than at the highest; it depends not only upon the velocity of the water but on the fineness and supply of sediment, and the supply of sediment comes largely from the Missouri River, is very fine, and is carried a long way. The amount of sediment a river carries depends upon the velocity and also upon its fineness. Gravel the Mississippi River will scarcely carry at all, whereas clay is carried from Cairo to the Gulf of Mexico by low velocities as well as high.

Mr. BRICKNER. I was raised there on that bottom and I know by actual experience and observation that before the mere interruption of fence, in the case of an overflow where a fence does not wash away, or there is a piece of levee—say there is a crevasse here and a crevasse there [illustrating], that there is invariably a large deposit immediately behind the standing levee or immediately behind the fence, and I have never known it to fail. Now, I will ask you as a gentleman who understands these subjects, if that is not conclusive evidence of the fact that the interruption of the current which causes temporary stagnation of the water does not cause a deposit, and that is what causes the formation of sand-bars and other bars in the bed of the river?

General COMSTOCK. I do not doubt that large crevasses form sand-bars, and in the bed of the river in some places, but the question is not whether they form bars in general, but whether they build up low-water bars, which impede navigation. It is undoubtedly a fact that during high stages these bars build themselves up and are cut down by the low stage of the river. I make a distinction, which is, that where you have deep water and a tolerably narrow place, if you increase the height of the water by levees the probability is you will scour out the bed of the river there, and if you diminish the height of the water you may cause a partial deposit; but the worst bars are built up higher during high stages and are cut down when the river falls.

Mr. BOATNER. Are the banks on Plum Point Reach high?

General COMSTOCK. They are moderate banks; they are not as high as Vicksburg or Natchez. The river oscillation is only about 35 feet.

Mr. BOATNER. And have the levees been well maintained on that reach for the last 20 years?

General COMSTOCK. No. The levees on the St. Francis front are in a very bad condition as a rule. The Commission has built a line of levees at Plum Point Reach, and some private owners there, I think, extended them somewhat on the west bank. On the west bank there is a good line of levees, and I think it must be 20 or 30 miles long.

Mr. BOATNER. How long since that levee has been completed and made a continuous line?

General COMSTOCK. I think that work was done about 1888.

Mr. BOATNER. Have you observed any improvement in the depth of the water since the construction of this levee?

General COMSTOCK. I am not able to say. I think prior to the construction of this levee in 1887 the river went down, I think, to 8½ feet, in 1886, and since that levee was built, one year, 1887, I think the river went to 8½ feet, and in 1889 while the least depth was 10 feet the river was not as low by 1 foot as in 1887. That is to say, we built contraction works producing an increase in depth. Then we built the levee, and now it is very difficult to separate the effect of the levee from that of the contraction work. My judgment is if the levee had not been built you would have about as much water as now.

Mr. BOATNER. You do not concur in the theory that the confinement of water between levees increases the velocity of the current, and thereby increases the capacity of the river to carry sediment and also to scour out the bottom and increase the depth?

General COMSTOCK. Some of it I agree to and some I do not. More water increases the velocity of a river, but on bars inasmuch as when the river rises say 20 to 40 feet and then falls again, these bars are built up I am not sure the building of levees is going to increase the depth on the bars.

The CHAIRMAN. Your judgment is the scouring of the bed of the river, except where there is very deep water, and the cutting of the bars occurs when the water receded, and it is reached by channel works instead of high velocity?

General COMSTOCK. Yes, sir; the lowering of the bar is done during the low-water stage and the raising is done during the high-water stage.

Mr. STOCKDALE. What conditions, if you have any opinion on that subject, produces these bars? Can you attribute it to the current or form of the soil, or what in your opinion is the cause of these bars being at these particular points?

General COMSTOCK. That question has not come up in the Commission, but I think I express the general views of the Commission when I say that the cause of these bars is the width of the river. At one time some of the members of the Commission thought there was gravel in the river which caused the bars, but I do not think there is. I think it is merely the width of the river. The river on a straight reach wanders about, and if it happens to take a notion now to scour into one bank and after that the other bank, it does it, and that widens the river.

Mr. STOCKDALE. How would it do say, to produce these dikes from both banks——

General COMSTOCK. That is exactly what we do. It is this way [illustrating]: We do not do it from both because one bank has deeper water than the other and it is better to build it up in the shallow, so we generally put our dikes out from the convex side. That is what we did at Plum Point. In some cases it may be necessary to put the dikes on both sides.

Mr. STOCKDALE. Of course the banks of the river are lower opposite these bars or shallows than they are elsewhere; that is, they are lower in comparison with the bed of the river.

General COMSTOCK. Yes, sir.

Mr. STOCKDALE. That is the very point I wanted to ask; if these levees were built on these banks where you have your dike to keep the water from scouring out these places between?

General COMSTOCK. As I said before, I think we have some experience which does not yet show clearly the advantage of the levees, and then this question of the raising of the bars that I speak of——

Mr. STOCKDALE. I have always heard that the bars rise during high water. For instance, if the water is at one stage, say 20 feet, when the water gets to 30 it will not be that much deeper, but the bottom will rise 5 feet where the surface rises 10.

Mr. BOATNER. Is it universal that the low banks are found opposite these shallow places in the river?

General COMSTOCK. No; the height of the bank, in my opinion, is determined very largely by the amount of water which is flowing in the river.

Mr. BOATNER. What I judge by is the depth of the country overflowed. There are some points you need a levee 12 feet, and other points where you need a levee 2½ feet, and there are some points where no levee at all is necessary; but I mean to say, is not the bank relatively low wherever you find these shallow places? That is, would not it require a high levee to protect the country from floods opposite these shallow places in the river?

General COMSTOCK. No; there are shallow places where the banks are high. The height of the bank is determined by the amount of water flowing in the river. At Cairo, in 1882, there was 1,800,000 cubic feet of water flowing per second in the river, and the river rose 52 feet above low water. Going down to Plum Point Reach there was a flow, in the flood of 1882, of about 1,200,000 cubic feet per second, which is 600,000 cubic feet per second less than at Cairo, and high water was about 35 feet above low water. At Lake Providence Front the river flood is something over 40 feet, and the banks are low. At Vicksburg it is over 50 feet, and the banks are high. At Lake Providence you had, in 1882, only about 1,000,000 cubic feet per second flowing there, and at Vicksburg you probably had 1,500,000 cubic feet per second.

Mr. BOATNER. Is it your recollection that the banks are lower at Lake Providence than opposite Vicksburg?

General COMSTOCK. I do not speak of any definite point. I only speak about them in a general way. This oscillation is what fixes the height of the bank.

Mr. BOATNER. I am afraid I have not made myself understood. You know the bank of the Mississippi rises and falls.

General COMSTOCK. Yes, sir.

Mr. BOATNER. There are places where the river has cut through bends and the bank is high, and there are other places where the lowland runs out nearly to the river, slopes up very gradually, and where the water from time immemorial has run out. I call your attention to the fact that there are a number of bayous which formerly connected the Ouachita system and the Mississippi River, and where they formerly put out from the river the banks are low. Now, what I want to get from you is this: Is not it a fact that the banks of the river are low opposite to these shallow places to which you refer?

General COMSTOCK. You mean low counted from low water?

Mr. BOATNER. I mean taking the highest point on the river as a starting point.

General COMSTOCK. That is a point I have not examined, and I am not prepared to say that as compared with other banks they are low.

Mr. STOCKDALE. I do not exactly understand that the fluctuation of the river has decreased uniformly as it goes towards the mouth, but I understand the fluctuation is greater at Vicksburg than at some points above there.

General COMSTOCK. Yes, sir.

Mr. STOCKDALE. How do you account for that, by overflows?

General COMSTOCK. Yes, sir; when you get down to Helena the fluctuation there is [examining memorandum] Cairo extreme oscillation is 53 feet, Plum Point, 34.5, and the cause of it is that enormous escape along the St. Francis Front. At Helena the extreme oscillation is 48 feet. At Vicksburg the extreme oscillation is about 53 feet, 10 feet more than Lake Providence only a few miles above, and the cause of that at Vicksburg is the enormous return flow of the Yazoo bottom which raises the river there and increases the oscillation. So the amount of oscillation depends upon the amount of water flowing in the main river. Where you have the largest amount, something like 1,600,000 feet per second, which is about the largest amount anywhere in the river now, you have an oscillation of from 40 to 45 feet and more.

Mr. STOCKDALE. You make that computation at what stage of the water, the highest?

General COMSTOCK. Yes, sir. That was the flood of 1882 which measured 1,600,000 at Columbus, nearly the same amount at Helena, and 1,500,000 at the Red River.

Digitized by Google

Mr. STOCKDALE. How far do you go, just to the bank; suppose the water is over the country?

General COMSTOCK. In these figures I confine myself to the river alone. We measure also that out in the country.

Mr. BRICKNER. As I understand, the bars form only when the water is high, at the highest point?

General COMSTOCK During the high stages of water where you have, say, a wide and shallow place with 6 feet at low water, as a rule the bar rises during the high stages of the river, and when the river falls and gets down to 10 or 15 feet above low water instead of having 15 plus 6, which would be 21 feet of water, you may have only 15 feet.

Mr. BRICKNER. That is because the velocity of the water being decreased as it widened out into the country.

General COMSTOCK. I think the cause is that the velocity of that wide place is considerably less than it is in the deeper places above it, the deep and narrow places above and below, and that the bed has risen during high water.

Mr. BRICKNER. If that could be confined and the velocity of the water could be equaled above and below, would it then form bars?

General COMSTOCK. If you narrow it down to the same width as above and give more depth, then the bars would disappear in part—would be lowered—that is what we are trying to do by the contraction works.

Mr. BRICKNER. That is what I could not understand.

Mr. BOATNER. Have you any record of the number of miles of levee which gave way in the flood of 1882?

General COMSTOCK. Nothing very accurate.

Mr. BOATNER. Have you a record of what gave way in 1890?

General COMSTOCK. About 6½ miles, I think.

Mr. BOATNER. Is not it less than those breaks in 1882?

General COMSTOCK. Yes; it is very much less than 1882, and in 1882 also were old breaks which occured in the 10 or 20 years preceding; there were very large gaps, I think maybe 60 miles of gaps in 1882.

Mr. BOATNER. Was there any line of levee from St. Francis Front to the mouth of the Red River, practically; was not the water running practically broadcast over the country in 1882?

General COMSTOCK. They were practically down as far as Arkansas City, and then from Arkansas City down to the Red River they were very badly broken in 1882 on both banks of the river.

Mr. BOATNER. The flow of the water was practically uninterrupted from the west bank of the river to the Ouachita system, was it not?

General COMSTOCK. I am not able to say whether one-third of the levees were down or what percentage it was, as I do not recollect it this moment.

Mr. BOATNER. Can you state what was the difference in the flood height of the water between Vicksburg and the mouth of the Red River at the high stage of the water in 1882 and 1890?

General COMSTOCK (consulting memoranda). Lake Providence, 2.7; Vicksburg, 0.3; Red River—I have not got a note of it here.

Mr. BOATNER. How much higher in 1882 than in 1890?

General COMSTOCK. It was 2.7 feet higher at Lake Providence in 1890, and three-tenths at Vicksburg.

Mr. BOATNER. At both of those places the flood height was actually higher in 1890 than in 1882?

General COMSTOCK. Yes, sir.

Mr. BOATNER. As a fact, in 1882, the whole country west between those points down to the mouth of the Red River was a perfect sea of water, ranging from 16 to 25 feet, and in 1890 there was practically little of that country overflowed at all?

Digitized by Google

General COMSTOCK. The levees are in better condition there and cause a rise of the flood surface——

Mr. BOATNER. It is contended that the higher you build levees the higher the bottom of the river will rise, but if you apply that to some places at Vicksburg and Natchez you will have the river running above the surface of the ground.

The CHAIRMAN. You say you have constructed these channel works to the extent of about 37 miles, and there is something over 700 miles more of channel work; I did not understand you that the same work must be carried on on the balance of the river?

General COMSTOCK. Oh, no, not all.

The CHAIRMAN. Only in places?

General COMSTOCK. In places.

The CHAIRMAN. These two reaches are the worst, that at Plum Point and that at Providence Reach?

General COMSTOCK. Yes, sir; and the most expensive.

Mr. STOCKDALE. Did I understand the length was 700 miles?

The CHAIRMAN. Seven hundred and sixty and something to the Red River, so it would be something over 700.

Mr. STOCKDALE. That is as far as the channel would be needed, to the Red River?

The CHAIRMAN. There is deep water below?

General COMSTOCK. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you know how much has been expended at Plum Point Reach and at Lake Providence Reach since the work commenced?

General COMSTOCK. Something over $3,000,000 at Plum Point Reach.

Mr. BOATNER. Will you state how much of that in levees at Plum Point Reach?

General COMSTOCK. I think not over $175,000.

The CHAIRMAN. How much at Lake Providence Reach?

General COMSTOCK. Up to October 31 a little less than $3,000,000.

Mr. LAWLER. I have no questions to ask in regard to this, but I would state to the chairman that Mr. Blanchard is present, and he is very familiar with this subject, and I ask that he be allowed to ask any questions he may see fit.

Permission was granted by the committee.

Mr. BLANCHARD. This is a matter in which I have some experience and which has been before the River and Harbor Committee of the House, of which I have been a member for some years. The Mississippi River Commission theory of the treatment of the Mississippi River is, first, contraction of the channel; next, revetment to hold the banks, and, third, levees on the banks. Is not that it?

General COMSTOCK. That is the opinion of a majority of the Commission.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Now, you concur with the first two and not with the last?

General. COMSTOCK. Not with the last.

Mr. BLANCHARD. You are in a minority of the Commission as regards the value of levees as an adjunct to the general improvement?

General COMSTOCK. Yes, sir.

Mr. BLANCHARD. And have been all along?

General COMSTOCK. That is my idea.

Digitized by Google

Mr. BLANCHARD. The Mississippi River Commission is composed of 7 members, I believe?

General COMSTOCK. Yes, sir.

Mr. BLANCHARD. How many of them are engineer officers of the United States Army?

General COMSTOCK. Two besides myself.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Two of them in favor of levees as adjuncts to general improvement?

General COMSTOCK. One of them.

Mr. BLANCHARD. How many of the Commission are in a minority on that subject?

General COMSTOCK. Well, the question has not come up in that form. Heretofore Congress has prohibited the building of levees except to improve navigation, and I do not think the question has come up which required that decision under the old river and harbor act.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Then heretofore Congress has made an appropriation to the Mississippi River Commission for the improvement of that river and for levee building where in the judgment of the Commission levee building was necessary as a part of their plan for the improvement of the channel. In this idea you have been in a minority, have you not; have not you signed the minority reports every year?

General COMSTOCK. I do not think levees are a cheap way of improving the Mississippi River.

Mr. BLANCHARD. You have differed with the majority of the Commission in regard to that?

General COMSTOCK. Yes, sir.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Then part of the plan for the treatment of the river as an adjunct to the channel improvement is levee building?

General COMSTOCK. That has been the vote of the majority.

Mr. BLANCHARD. The majority have voted that way all the time?

General COMSTOCK. They have voted for levees.

Mr. BLANCHARD. As a necessary adjunct to channel improvement?

General COMSTOCK. When money has been appropriated they have voted to give money to levees.

Mr. BLANCHARD. And they have done this on the idea that that was needed in their plan for channel improvements?

General COMSTOCK. I suppose so; of course.

Mr. BLANCHARD. The work that has been done at Plum Point Reach, which is above the city of Memphis, and the Lake Providence Reach, which is above the city of Vicksburg, and the result that has been achieved there, has it equaled the expectations of the Commission as regards deepening the channel of the river?

General COMSTOCK. At Plum Point it has been nearly equal to the expectation of the Commission, but at a greater expense than the Commission expected. At Lake Providence Reach, as I have said before, we have lost a good deal of work in consequence of Congressional legislation, and there the results have not been equal to our expectation.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Was not Plum Point Reach one of the worst bars in the whole river, and now gives perhaps as little trouble as any?

General COMSTOCK. Now it rarely gives any trouble at all.

Mr. BLANCHARD. It has been deepened there from, say 5 feet low water to about 8 or 10 feet, as a result of their work?

General COMSTOCK. Yes, sir; it has been deepened from 5½ to 10 feet.

Mr. BLANCHARD. The result at Lake Providence Reach is, while the work there has not been developed as much as it has been at Plum

Digitized by Google

Point, it has been satisfactory, has it not, in achieving the end of deepening the water there at low-water season?

General COMSTOCK. We have succeeded in improving the low-water depth.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Now, while you do not believe levee building is necessary to low-water improvement of the river, you believe in the levee system as a means of preventing destructive floods in the river?

General COMSTOCK. I think that is the only way of protecting the country.

Mr. BLANCHARD. On that point there is no disagreement between the members of the Commission?

General COMSTOCK. No, sir.

Mr. BLANCHARD. You said three-fourths of the river, in your opinion, approximating it, from Cairo to Red River, a distance of 760 miles, would require work. You do not mean to say it would require both protection and revetment work, do you?

General COMSTOCK. As I stated before, I made an estimate for the Senate committee last year, and I have not that paper and I do not carry these figures very readily in my head and should say that three-fourths was rather over than under what my estimate was.

Mr. BLANCHARD. You mean it would require three-fourths, approximating that, of either contraction or revetment work, not both?

General COMSTOCK. No.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Is it not a fact that contraction works are only needed where the river is abnormally wide?

General COMSTOCK. It is to keep the river as it is now and prevent its wandering away.

Mr. BLANCHARD. The revetment work is needed to hold the bank, to preserve the regimen?

General COMSTOCK. It is needed to keep it where it is.

Mr. BLANCHARD. The contraction work is relied upon to give the depth of water on the bars?

General COMSTOCK. Yes, sir.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Do you not know that some experiments have been had in the Missouri River in respect to what caused the immense deposit of silt? For instance, even wire screens have been placed on the Missouri River in order to test this, and where the wire screens have been placed in the river, with meshes a foot apart, they have caused a large deposit of silt.

General COMSTOCK. Where there is a river holding the amount of silt that the Missouri does you can hardly, under certain circumstances, put anything in the water that would not produce a deposit.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Is that not an evident fact that any interruption to the normal velocity of the current will produce this deposit of silt?

General COMSTOCK. The normal velocity is something that does not convey any definite idea to my mind. The velocity of a river varies with every foot of rise and every mile of length, and there is hardly such a thing as normal velocity, unless you take the average of everything.

Mr. BLANCHARD. As I understand it, the normal velocity of a current is the velocity of a current along a reach of river that is steady in its depth and width.

General COMSTOCK. Even in that it would vary at various points on the river and at different stages.

Mr. BLANCHARD. The Mississippi River Commission certainly submitted a report to Congress asking for—what was it—$12,000,000?

Digitized by Google

General COMSTOCK. Sixteen million dollars.

Mr. BLANCHARD. For levee building for the purpose of protecting the country from destruction by flood, and in the judgment of a majority of the Commission that was deemed sufficient with the work to be done by the State and riparian owners, and raise the levee to a point to shut out floods such as last year——

General COMSTOCK. It is not so stated there.

Mr. BLANCHARD. What was the object of that?

General COMSTOCK. To build it 5 feet above the flood of 1890.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Was not the maximum amount of water which came down in the flood of 1890 perhaps greater than ever before in the Mississippi River?

General COMSTOCK. No.

Mr. BLANCHARD. When was it greater?

General COMSTOCK. In 1882.

Mr. BLANCHARD. How much greater?

General COMSTOCK. Below Helena some 200,000 feet a second greater.

Mr. BLANCHARD. This 5 feet they propose to build the levees up with this $16,000,000, would it shut out a flood like that of 1882?

General COMSTOCK. No; not in my opinion.

Mr. BLANCHARD. But it would in the opinion of a majority of the Commission?

General COMSTOCK. It is not so expressed.

Mr. BLANCHARD. If the levees were built 5 feet above high water of 1890, what land would the flood of 1882 overflow?

General COMSTOCK. Lake Providence Front and Plum Point.

Mr. BLANCHARD. The levees there would have to be higher?

General COMSTOCK. Yes, sir; they would. I might say I made an estimate in 1883 that levees 10 feet above the flood of 1882 would be needed at Lake Providence. Levees have been built about 2 to 3 feet along the lower part of the Yazoo bottom above the flood of 1882 and the engineer of that district has submitted to the Commission an estimate of raising it 5 feet above 1890. A flood of 200,000 a second more would require a further raising of something like 3 feet.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Was the river overflowed in 1890 along Plum Point and Lake Providence Front?

General COMSTOCK. Yes.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Running over the tops of the levees there?

General COMSTOCK. I suppose it did at Raleigh, and on the Mississippi side the levees broke by water filtering through or under them.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Did not run over the tops of them?

General COMSTOCK. I suppose it would have run over the levees in the flood of 1890 for many miles on the right bank had they not been temporarily raised.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Is it not a fact that what breaks occurred in the levees in 1890 did not aggregate more than 5 or 6 miles all told?

General COMSTOCK. Yes, sir.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Out of 1,300 miles of levee?

General COMSTOCK. Yes.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Were not these breaks produced more because the levees were weak rather than not high enough?

General COMSTOCK. On the other side there are a great many miles where the water was level with the top of the levee.

Captain KINGMAN. There are a great many miles where it would have to be raised. I suppose from the mouth of the Red River down to Hermitage, for 30 or 40 miles, we raised it, and a little below Vicksburg we must have raised as much more, in some cases a few inches and in other cases as much as 2 feet.

Digitized by Google

Mr. BLANCHARD. How much money has been expended by the Mississippi River Commission since its organization in levee construction? Just approximate it.

General COMSTOCK. It has been something over $3,000,000.

Mr. BLANCHARD. All told?

General COMSTOCK. All told.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Is it not a fact that the levees now in the Mississippi River are much better than when the Commission first took hold of it?

General COMSTOCK. Far better than they ever have been before.

Mr. BLANCHARD. And the danger to the country from flood is less now than it was then?

General COMSTOCK. It takes higher floods to get over the levees and of course high floods are rare.

Mr. BLANCHARD. The amount of money expended by the Mississippi River Commission alone is nothing like expended by the riparian owners and levee districts?

General COMSTOCK. No; I guess about ten or eleven million have been spent, all told.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Including what the Government has spent?

General COMSTOCK. Including what the Government has spent.

Mr. BLANCHARD. The Government has coöperated with the levee boards of the States, etc.?

General COMSTOCK. In many cases.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Very advantageously?

General COMSTOCK. Yes.

Mr. BLANCHARD. You spoke in the beginning of your testimony about an inhibition placed in one of the river and harbor bills against the using of money for bank protection. That only lasted through the period of one bill; the succeeding bill left that off.

General COMSTOCK. Yes, but unfortunately 2 years before that we expended nearly all the appropriation, so for that year we were without money.

Mr. BLANCHARD. And a good deal of damage was done by that?

General COMSTOCK. Yes, sir.

Mr. BLANCHARD. That was the only bill in which there was any inhibition, and you have gone ahead with your efforts in bank protection?

General COMSTOCK. Yes, sir.

Mr. BRICKNER. Down near Lake Providence Front you said that 5 feet, in addition, that has been added to the levee would not take care of 200,000 more feet of water. How wide is the stream there between levees?

General COMSTOCK. Near Lake Providence there is one place where the levees come within a mile of each other.

Mr. BRICKNER. Do you know the velocity of the stream? Have you a record of that?

General COMSTOCK. On the Mississippi bank there has been an endeavor, in many cases, to get the levees back by cutting off bends, but the rule has been to build a levee to protect the riparian lands, and of course there is a cry if that land is left outside of the levee; therefore the temptation is to build levees on the bank of the river.

Mr. BRICKNER. Levees are built 5 feet above the flood of what year?

General COMSTOCK. The levees were built in the lower part of the Yazoo Basin 2 or 3 feet above the flood of 1882, and the engineer there estimates 5.7, I think, to raise it to 3 feet above what the 1890 flood would have been if confined.

Digitized by Google

Mr. BRICKNER. And you think it would have to be 10 feet, as I understand you?

General COMSTOCK. I think he wants to counterbalance the difference between the flood of 1890 and 1882. I think he wants to add at least 3 feet more to its height.

Mr. BRICKNER. You think it is about a mile wide there?

General COMSTOCK. Yes, at one place.

Mr. BRICKNER. The flood of 1882 was 200,000 cubic feet per second more than it was in 1890?

General COMSTOCK. Some such quantity as that.

Mr. BRICKNER. And 10 feet, you think, would not check that 200,000 feet per second additional?

General COMSTOCK. This 5.7 feet he proposes, that is his estimate; that is, that the flood of 1890, if it had been confined, would be 2.7 higher than it actually was, and he estimates that the levee should be raised for safety 3 feet; that makes 5.7 above the flood of 1890.

Mr. BRICKNER. What was the actual depth of the stream there?

General COMSTOCK. It is very variable. Where they are doing work, in some places it is 60 and 70 feet deep. At Stack Island at low water it is not over 10 feet, and 45 feet at high water.

Mr. BRICKNER. Have you the velocity of the water?

General COMSTOCK. No; I do not think I have. I suppose the velocity runs about 7 or 8 feet a second and from this down to 2 and 3 feet.

Mr. STOCKDALE. That estimate requiring 2.7 feet higher to hold the flood of 1890 had it been confined, is upon the basis that the bottom of the stream is constant and it does not scour out any.

General COMSTOCK. Yes, sir.

Mr. BOATNER. Are you able to state the relative velocity of the current at Vicksburg in 1882 and 1890?

General COMSTOCK. No, I do not think we have any measures of that. We have some measures below there, but I do not think we have those.

Mr. BOATNER. Well at any point between Vicksburg and the mouth of the Red River?

General COMSTOCK. I have not made a record of these velocity observations, but I may state in a general way that the high water velocity varies from something like 6 feet up to about 10 feet per second from New Orleans up to Columbus, depending upon the width of the river; the low water velocities on the shoals go down to 3 feet per second and in deep places they go down considerably below that.

The CHAIRMAN. We are greatly obliged to you, General Comstock, for appearing before us this morning.

Thereupon the committee adjourned to meet at 10 a. m., Wednesday, January 7, 1890.

COMMITTEE ON LEVEES AND IMPROVEMENTS
OF THE MISSISSIPPI RIVER,
Wednesday, January 7, 1891.

The committee met at 10 a. m., Hon. J. C. Burrows in the chair.

STATEMENT OF CAPTAIN SMITH S. LEACH, CORPS OF ENGINEERS, U. S. ARMY.

The CHAIRMAN. You are connected with the Army?

Captain LEACH. Yes, sir; a captain of engineers.

The CHAIRMAN. How long have you held that position?

Captain LEACH. I have been a captain since September, 1884, and I have been in the Engineer Corps since July, 1875.

The CHAIRMAN. Have you at any time been connected with the Mississippi River Commission?

Captain LEACH. Yes, sir; I was its secretary from its organization, in 1879, until March, 1885, at which time I was transferred to the charge of one of the districts and afterwards two districts, the first and second, and I remained in charge of them until last June.

The CHAIRMAN. Did either of these districts embrace Plum Point or Providence Lake?

Captain LEACH. The first embraced Plum Point reach.

The CHAIRMAN. So you had that work in charge.

Captain LEACH. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. The matter before the committee is expressed perhaps in the title of the bill as tersely as I can state it, "To repair and build the levees of the Mississippi River, to improve its navigation, to afford ease and safety to its commerce, and to prevent destructive floods." We will be glad to hear from you on this subject with regard to the construction of levees as a necessary adjunct to the improvement of the Mississippi River, and in your own language describe the relative value of the levees as a part of that improvement, and the necessity, if such, for their construction.

Mr. BOATNER. And I would suggest also, Mr. Chairman, the feasibility of protecting the valley from destsuctive floods by means of levees.

The CHAIRMAN. That is suggested in the title of the bill.

Captain LEACH. In relation to your first inquiry, it is as a factor in the improvement of the navigation of the Mississippi River, that a levee system is absolutely necessary and demands the attention of the General Government. So far as the Government is concerned, as I apprehend its functions, the prevention of overflow is not a necessity, although desirable. The improvement of navigation seems to be a necessity. It is a charge which is committed to the General Government in the nature of affairs, and it is the avowed policy of the Government to improve the navigation, and therefore the discussion of the value of a levee system in that respect is a very important one.

The Mississippi River performs a dual function. It is the final outlet of a very extended system of inland drainage and it is also our most important avenue of inland commerce. It happens, very fortunately, that in respect to both these functions the same remedies produce useful results, for in both it is now defective. It is not as good an avenue of commerce as it ought to be by any means, neither is it as good a drain as it ought to be. If measures to make the one better were injurious to the other, the question would be complicated, if not hopeless; but it so happens that whatever may be done to make it a better drain will improve the navigation, and whatever is done to make it a more navigable stream will also increase its capacity as a drain. The reason of this unity is essentially the fact that both the discharging capacity of the channel, which determines its usefulness as a drain, and the least depth of the water flowing in it, depend, in an alluvial stream, flowing in a bed of its own formation, on the velocity of the water, and whatever permanently increases that velocity improves the stream both as a drain and as a navigable highway.

The velocity of a flowing stream depends upon two elements in its regimen; of course the conditions being that the size of the valley, the amount of rainfall, and the general dimensions of the channel are determined by nature. A change in the flow of an alluvial stream, whatever you measure it by, proceeds from a change in one or both of two quantities. The first is the angle of fall or slope as determined at any point by the difference of level between the water surface of the stream at two points of known distance apart, and determined in the main for the whole stream by the total fall from its head, or where you first consider it, to the sea, where its fall terminates. In the Mississippi River the slope is approximately fixed. It will be very difficult to effect any change in the slope which would have any appreciable effect upon the velocity, or which would increase the flood-drainage capacity and at the same time improve navigation. The fall from Cairo to the sea, in round numbers, is 300 feet. It would be impossible to make that 290, because no measures we can take will depress the bed at that point by that amount. It is equally impracticable to make it 310 feet, because that means putting 10 feet more water over the heads of the people living in that vicinity. We can not increase the slope if we would; we would not dare to do it if we could, and we could not decrease it if we would, and the result is we must keep the slope as it is and operate upon something else.

The CHAIRMAN. Why do you say you would not dare to increase the slope?

Captain LEACH. Because it involves the raising of the flood surface and increases the height of the water over the heads of the people, and as a result would require us to build levees up to this enormous height. The increase is a question of practicability, while depression is a question of possibility. Of course it is impracticable and improper to elevate the flood surface so long as anything else is available to be done.

Now the other quantity which enters into the discharging capacity and the navigable value of a stream besides the inclination or slope is the mean depth. This occurs in the expression for the velocity in the same terms as the slope, the square root of each. It follows, therefore, that any percentage of change in the slope will have the same effect upon the flow of the stream as an equal percentage of change in the mean depth and no more. The slope is a quantity very difficult to change, as I endeavored to explain, but the mean depth is very easy to change, and of course if you increase the mean depth you increase the discharging capacity of the river and make it a better drain; while increasing the mean depth makes it a deeper stream and better for navigation. The increase of mean depth will have for its result—not necessarily for its cause—a diminution of the width of the stream. The principal phenomenon in the bed of a river which produces a decrease in the mean depth and discharging capacity is one referred to yesterday, although not completely discussed, and is known by pilots as the "flattening out" and "cutting out" process. In the unregulated condition of the river, its present condition, as the water approaches the flood stage, the channels that have been excavated during low water are filled up, and this process goes on and in fact achieves its maximum at times when a sharp decline from the flood has set in. The pilots have a rule of thumb, which is a good one, that there is during this period of flattening out as much water on the bars as on the gauge, the zeros of the gauges being near low water. If the gauge shows 25 feet, they expect 25 feet over those flattened bars. That is, the bed of the river during the high water rises to approximately the same plane that is occupied by the surface of the water during low stage. I state this in this pointed way in order to make it forcible as an illustration. The bottom of the river when the bars are flattened out is at the same level as the surface of the water at standard low water.

The CHAIRMAN. Then you agree with General Comstock that bars are formed during high water?

Captain LEACH. In the unregulated condition of the river they are. That is to say, the culminating action takes place then, but there is another feature in it. In the present condition of the river these bars are cut out as the river falls. When the river falls and these bars become high enough to make shoals or dams, as of course they do, the river becomes violent and demands and finally cuts a channel through at some haphazard place, now here and now there, very shallow and tortuous, and very frequently almost at right angles to the general direction of the stream. This cutting-out process is very varied, and it is very uncertain, and it is during this cutting-out process that the greatest difficulty of navigation occurs. The pilots do not know whether it has begun, or whether it is going on, or where it has begun, or where it is going on, or how much it is going to be; in fact they do not know anything about what channel they have in front of them. These low-water channels are cut in very erratic places and in very tortuous directions, and often directly across the bed of the stream, and you will often find a boat running at low water stern on to one bank and head on to the other bank, and it will run straight to that bank until they have to stop their engines and back at full speed, so difficult and tortuous are the low-water channels. Now, high water comes along and of course it flows in a steady volume nearly parallel to the general direction of the stream and across these ditches. If you have a large crack in the floor and you attempt to sweep across it, you will fill it up with dust in front of the broom, but if you sweep in the direction of the crack you will get it clean, and that illustration, although it is a homely one, suits this case very well. If this low-water channel can be made to cut out in the direction the high water flows, the high water will keep it clean and often deepen it. If it is permitted to cut it out in a direction antagonistic to the high water, it will be filled up. This depends upon the regulated or unregulated condition of the current, and whether it flows in the same direction at low water as at high water or not; I mean if the thalweg—excuse me for being technical—the main thread of current is made to flow over the same track, at all stages, the river is regulated.

The CHAIRMAN. Then your idea is by a regulation of the low-water channel to cut it in the same direction as the high water would carry it?

Captain LEACH. Mainly so, though not strictly. There are cases where it would be advisable to operate on both and effect a compromise, but the effort will always be to bring them together. Upon the local circumstances and conditions depends whether you would entirely operate on the low-water direction or partially on the high water. In other words, when you come right down to the fundamental principle of it, it is to get the current of the river under control. That is all there is of it, for when you have anything under control you can make it go anywhere you want to, and when you do that the river is improved, because I take it for granted that no man would want to do anything detrimental to his own interest.

One more point I wish to make in that connection. When we have this change from the unregulated to the regulated condition, when we have the high-water current passing down in the direction of the low-water channel and not across it, we have a phenomenon which is the reverse of what has been described; instead of the bottom being higher at high water and lower at low water, the bottom is lowest at high water and fills up a little at low water.

Take as an example Plum Point Crossing on the Plum Point Reach, which is a regulated crossing. It has been under my charge from 1885 until last June. I instituted there a series of observations of the depth and velocity, taken from three to ten times a month. These observations show continuously without a possibility of an appreciable error the history of that crossing and prove conclusively the fact that I have stated, that in a regulated crossing where the current is at all times over the same track the high water, instead of filling up the channel, deepens it, and the higher the water and the stronger the current the more complete will be the control and the greater will be the deepening at high water and the less the probability of detrimental filling at low water. There is still a little change in the bed at that crossing, which is due, however, to the fact that the control is not a perfect one but approximate only. The control of the water is the principle on which it is necessary to operate for the improvement of the river. That control is designed to secure the scouring of the channel always in the same line. A man can not dig a hole if he does not put his shovel in the same place twice, neither can you excavate a channel if by working constantly in a new place you fill up the channel you made yesterday and commence on a new one to-day. The velocity of course plays an important part and it is the chief factor in the scouring. When I speak of the thalweg of the river I mean the thread of the greatest velocity; in other words, that part of the current of the river which is capable of performing the most work. That is the secret of the whole thing. Control the current so as to utilize all its force instead of letting it come down through a fall of 300 feet crippled in quantity and force. If you allow the water to go to waste of course you lose that much potential and that much work.

As I said, it is necessary to operate very frequently on the high-water current as well as the low-water current. If there is anything true about what I have stated, it is that this control, to make a complete improvement of the river, must be made perfect. Partial control of the river produces a partial improvement of the river, but we want the greatest possible improvement of the river, and therefore we should have complete control, which alone will do it. Complete control can be affected only by two agencies operating together. One is a protection from caving and shifting of the present position of the natural bank of the river, and the other is extending these banks up to the highest known water level to prevent escape of the water by overflow. The first of these agencies of course is bank revetment, and the second levees. To estimate their relative value would be very difficult. They go together. Some idea can be formed of what complete improvement will be, and it is known that complete improvement will result from both of these agencies operating together, but what the one or the other will produce alone, I do not believe anyone can say; but I will say this, that neither the one nor the other will alone produce complete improvement, because complete improvement means complete control and complete control is impossible without both of these agencies.

The CHAIRMAN. This bank revetment is necessary for the control of the river at its low stage and the levees at the high flood tide?

Captain LEACH. Yes, sir; those are their separate functions.

The CHAIRMAN. And the river must be controlled in both of these ways to produce complete improvement?

Captain LEACH. Yes, sir, it must. Of course the bank protection acts, in addition to its own especial function of control at channel-contained stages, to protect the levees also, because we would not be able to maintain them without complete bank protection.

Mr. CATCHINGS. I would like for you to develop that idea somewhat.

Captain LEACH. You can readily see that using the levee as an instrumentality for controlling the current, it must be somewhere near the current to be controlled. In other words, we must get the levees near the bank at places where control is most necessary, and the places where the river has a tendency to escape from the direction of the channel are those where the caving takes place and where it is desirable to approach the levee as near to the bank as possible. Of course to bring a high levee costing $25,000 a mile within 500 or 600 yards of a rapidly caving bank is manifestly imprudent. At the same time that levee ought to be there and the bank ought to be protected; both ought to be done, and the one will make the other possible. Therefore the rational course is to build a levee near the bank where the conditions demand it should be, and provide at the same time, or previously (and previously would be better), for the protection of the bank in front of it; and it also follows that in cases of levees which have been built a considerable distance from the river—and large levees have been built back from the river as a matter of safety—and where caving is in progress and threatens the levee, it would be better, even if it cost more money, to protect the bank and preserve that levee than to build another. In the case of large levees it costs less to protect the bank than——

Mr. CATCHINGS. As at Bolivar.

Captain LEACH. It has cost much less than a new one in that case.

The CHAIRMAN. Is the condition of the soil such, is it so saturated with water, that it is difficult to put a levee very near the stream?

Captain LEACH. I do not think there are any conditions of saturation that need cause apprehension. The ground water of course leaves the margin of a stream sooner than the soil farther back. The ground on the margin is higher in elevation than that further back, and therefore it is the first ground to get dry, and it is usually of a more open and porous character and has a tendency to dry out quickly.

The CHAIRMAN. I remember it was stated, and I happened to be on the river as chairman of a special committee, that instances have been known where acres of land away from the stream some distance beyond the bank just sunk down out of sight.

Captain LEACH. Extending, however, to the bank.

The CHAIRMAN. No, sir.

Captain LEACH. The witness then has a more extended knowlege than I have.

Digitized by Google

Mr. BOATNER. That is a mistake.

Mr. CATCHINGS. You mean the bank undermines and acres dropped in?

The CHAIRMAN. No, the land went out of sight.

Captain LEACH. I know of a case at Helena where there was a piece of bank that had a railroad track on it and the thing let go and went down and tilted in this fashion [illustrating]. One edge of it slipped just so [illustrating]. But I do not know of any case where the ground has settled and left the bank intact, except in the traditional earthquake cases at New Madrid.

The CHAIRMAN. Then there is no engineering difficulty in placing levees very near the bank of the stream?

Captain LEACH. The engineering difficulties are reduced to a minimum, if we get protection of the bank, by putting the levees close along the bank.

The CHAIRMAN. If the banks are fully protected by revetment there is no difficulty in establishing levees very near the bank?

Captain LEACH. No, sir.

Mr. BOATNER (to the chairman). In the case you speak of, do you mean it would be caved out, or do you mean the ground sank behind the bank, leaving a standing piece of bank between the sunken place and the river?

The CHAIRMAN. I mean a sinking of land entirely away from the river.

Mr. BOATNER. That is not so, and I have never heard of such a case in Louisiana.

Mr. CATCHINGS. I would like for you to make some remarks upon this idea. If you had your banks perfectly revetted and protected by spur dikes and mattress works, would not that dispense very largely with the contraction works that secure a protection of the channel?

Captain LEACH. My belief is that the development of contraction works will be far less than heretofore contemplated. I think the necessary control of the current will be secured by the protection of the banks and completion of the levees, and will give all the improvement possible, because developing all the force which resides in the mass of the water and its height above the sea.

Mr. CATCHINGS. So by operating on the levee theory you gradually dispense with that which has been made prominent in the work up to this time, namely, contraction of the shallow places?

Captain LEACH. That is my opinion.

Mr. CATCHINGS. And that would be a fact in determining the economy of levee building?

Captain LEACH. Yes, sir.

There is one point which occurs to me, which I think I have not touched upon. It was mentioned yesterday, and is the probable amount of the effect of a complete levee system upon the depth of the channel. The statement was made that observations thus far do not show that recent low waters gave any greater depth on some bad bars than low waters of some years ago, at a time when the levee system was by no means as perfect as now. That statement of course was only very general, and a rigid discussion of the data, I think, would qualify it. However, this is to be remembered, that the levee system has no aspect in which it is neutral in respect to channel development. There is a certain point below which the absence of levees causes a certain deterioration of the channel, and there is a point above which the presence of levees gives a betterment of the channel. Now, the effect of the levee system must be regarded as the sum of the injuries prevented and the betterment caused, and even though it produces no actual deepening of the channel, yet it prevents the degradation which would have taken place in the mean time if the levee had not been built. Is that clear, Mr. Chairman?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Captain LEACH. We may have had a levee system for, say, 10, 15, or 20 years, and even if we can not say there is an inch more water over the bars, still it has been a large factor in preventing the deterioration which would have taken place if it had not been there. With that point covered I think I have explained the subject of the relation of levees to navigation as completely as I can do it.

Mr. CATCHINGS. You tried at Plum Point for a long time with the contraction works and the water was allowed at flood time to escape over points. Now, I will ask you, when you finally constructed a levee to prevent the escape of the water there, was not a greater depth at low water over the bar?

Captain LEACH. I noted and reported an increase of about a foot in the depth of the two bars under my observation, which I could attribute to no other cause, since no other change of conditions had taken place.

Mr. CATCHINGS. So there is an actual illustration showing that the confinement of flood does have a beneficial effect upon the low-water stage.

Captain LEACH. To my mind, that can be interpreted only in that way.

Mr. CATCHINGS. I want also to establish the fact that it is essential if you want to get the best work out of the river that the levee should be constructed on the bank and not across bends.

Captain LEACH. I think that is undoubtedly true. Of course, there will be exceptions on a river as variable as the Mississippi to almost any general statement. I have in my mind one instance where I think it would be decidedly better to make some variation in the line of the levee; on the Mississippi side just opposite the mouth of Cypress Creek. But the conditions which are found here are so unusual that the exception only adds force to the rule.

Mr. CATCHINGS. But as a rule you would follow the natural curvature of the bank?

Captain LEACH. Yes, sir.

Mr. BOATNER. You stated that you considered levees as necessary elements to the control of the river. Will you please state what effect you observed follows the escape of water through a crevasse, or through any point where there has been any levee, what the effect is upon the channel?

Captain LEACH. We have made a number of measurements, and the effect invariably observed has been a considerable filling of the channel below the point of escape. We have also observed a reverse process on the closure of some of these same crevasses recently opened and others opened before, and we have in every case observed a deepening of the channel commensurate in amount with the shoaling observed at the time of the break. We have measured both sides of it, and never failed in any case to find data on which we could found conclusions to that effect.

Mr. BOATNER. This shallowing occurs on the opening of a crevasse, and the deepening of the channel occurs on the reconstruction of the levee.

Captain LEACH. Of course, these measurements can not be kept up continuously, but our measurements have been taken immediately before and immediately after the opening and closure of the crevasses in the sense of having preceded and followed the next flood. The result of the observation of the closure of the crevasses and the deepening of the channel has been in every case the effect of one flood, and one flood only.

Digitized by Google

The CHAIRMAN. Are you familiar with the theory of Captain Cowden?

Captain LEACH. Somewhat.

The CHAIRMAN. What is your opinion in relation to that Captain LEACH. Captain Cowden's theory has a protean habit. I have come across it in many aspects, and I do not know how it will turn up next, but it has never been able to commend itself to my attention in any form that it has been presented, and I doubt if it ever will be. I depend upon the theory that the escape of water from the channel is inevitably accompanied by the degradation of the size of the channel below the point of escape.

Mr. CATCHINGS. His theory is opposite——

Captain LEACH. To everything I have seen and everything I believe.

Mr. BOATNER. Does not that come back to the fact that the bed of the river is changeable and accommodates itself to the volume of water which it has to carry?

Captain LEACH. That is true.

Mr. BOATNER. Then if part of the volume is taken away the channel contracts to the amount of water it has to carry.

Captain LEACH. That is true for all natural and all artificial channels which carry water charged with silt.

Mr. BOATNER. And the bed of the river increases or its capacity to carry water would increase just in proportion to the volume it has put upon it.

Captain LEACH. Yes; if the control exercised on the current prevents its wasting the force that is in it.

Mr. BOATNER. Now, it is stated by a good many people who do not know anything about it at all, most of them do not live in the valley and never have been there, who have two ideas; one is that the higher the levees are built the higher the bed of the river goes up; the other is that it is utterly impracticable and a waste of money and time to confine the waters of the Mississippi to a channel, in other words, to protect the country from overflow. Now in the course of your experience as an engineer in charge of that work, tell us if you have observed anything in support of the theory that the bed of the river rises?

Captain LEACH. There is absolutely none. There is no observation which substantiates it in any possible degree.

Mr. BOATNER. Is there any engineering difficulty in the way of protecting that country from overflow?

Captain LEACH. No, sir.

Mr. BOATNER. It is a question of money.

Captain LEACH. It is a question of money and a question of vigilance and organization. I do not think that the case demands or the people ought to expect that a range of artificial mountains will be built.

Mr. BOATNER. This bill proceeds upon the theory of coöperation between the Federal and the municipal authorities. As an officer of the Commission have you found any difficulty in successful coöperation with the States and the municipal authorities in your work?

Captain LEACH. I have had no difficulty in coöperation as to the construction. As to the maintenance, where difficulty would come if there were any, I have not had any experience.

Mr. CATCHINGS. Can you state the relative magnitude of the floods of 1882 and 1890?

Captain LEACH. The flood of 1890 from the mouth of the White River down was larger than the flood of 1882. From the vicinity of Memphis to the mouth of the White River it was approximately the same as the flood of 1882, and above Memphis it was a little less.

Mr. CATCHINGS. So that taking the reading of the gauge at Cairo the flood of 1882 was the greatest?

Captain LEACH. The flood of 1882 was higher at Cairo.

Mr. CATCHINGS. The flood was greater below because of the great accession of water from the White River, the Arkansas River, etc.

Captain LEACH. That is my belief.

Mr. CATCHINGS. So that in dealing with this question of the lower valley we may say that the flood of 1890 was greater than that of 1882?

Captain LEACH. I think that is certainly true.

Mr. BLANCHARD. How did General Comstock make the error with regard to the flood of 1882 in saying it was 200,000 feet per second greater?

Captain LEACH. That I do not know. That conclusion is personal to General Comstock from certain measurements I made. My conclusion is personal to me from the same measurements. If there is any difference between us, I made the measurements and probably may be more familiar with them than anyone else. The measurements made by Captain Kingman support my views entirely. The particular point disputed is the maximum discharge, which I claim can not properly be compared in two floods unless the conditions of restraint are similar.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Your estimates were made under your immediate supervision?

Captain LEACH. Yes, sir.

Mr. BLANCHARD. And General Comstock, president of the Commission, was not charged with the supervision of these measurements, but they were furnished by you?

Captain LEACH. He had no data at all personal to him, but simply took the results which I reported and upon them he arrived at a different conclusion. His conclusion I believe to be erroneous.

The CHAIRMAN. Now I want to ask you a question or two. The result of all this I understand you to say that it is essential in the improvement of the low-water channel of the river to protect the levees?

Captain LEACH. I think, sir, it unquestionably is, and I believe the greatest difficulty we have had to contend with in the development of this whole subject has been the unfortunate idea that gained credence in earlier years that there was some difference between good low-water navigation and good navigation. There is no such thing as good low-water navigation which does not inevitably involve complete regulation of the river.

The CHAIRMAN. Is it feasible as a matter of engineering to build a system of levees throughout that length of river that will hold the flood waters?

Captain LEACH. Starting from the remark I made a few minutes ago about the non-necessity of constructing a range of mountains for that purpose, I will say that the amount named in this bill, nor twice, nor three times, nor any amount I can think of, will build a system of levees behind which the people can sit in idleness and watch the flood go by and which will resist the floods themselves. It is a fight, a war, between the two, and the enemy is alert and very shrewd and persistent. It is no more possible to build a system of levees which without care and attention will resist floods than it is to build a fortification which will repulse an enemy without a garrison. Whatever is done must be by a proper system of levees, reënforced by the most incessant care and watching, especially at time of high water, and more or less in the entire year. What the people need is a line of intrenchments of which you can say, if you come out and make a good fight, you are bound to win.

The CHAIRMAN. Then there is no engineering difficulty in building levees of sufficient height and strength to hold the flood waters?

Captain LEACH. None whatever, if they are properly cared for.

The CHAIRMAN. The building can be done?

Captain LEACH. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Then they require constant care and watchfulness on the part of the people along the line of levees?

Captain LEACH. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Now that can be done only by the people in every district along where the levee is erected. Then you believe in this improvement and the maintenance of these levees in coöperation with the State?

Captain LEACH. Unquestionably.

The CHAIRMAN. You think that is wise.

Captain LEACH. I think that is perfecly wise.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you think it wise for the United States Government to take absolute control of the levees, build and care for them, and relieve the people from all responsibility?

Captain LEACH. That would insure perfect administration and a constant attention and the best disposal at all times of materials and men at hand.

The CHAIRMAN. Have you made any estimate of the cost of building a system of levees of sufficient height and strength to hold the flood waters of the Mississippi from Cairo to the Gulf?

Captain LEACH. I have made no personal estimate. There is an estimate made, however, by gentlemen who are better qualified to figure this out than anyone else in this country. I refer to the engineer committee that made an estimate and report to the Vicksburg convention. They named some $10,000,000, and from what I know of the present condition of the levees and the requirements, I am satisfied that with $9,000,000 plus $1,000,000 that has been already allotted by the Commission and the coöperation as heretofore by the people, a system will be built of which you can say as I said awhile ago, "if you come out and make a fight you are bound to win."

The CHAIRMAN. You say coöperation with the people. Suppose an appropriation was made by the Government of $9,000,000, to what extent must the people coöperate in money to make that perfect system of levees of which you speak?

Captain LEACH. I think that nothing more will be required of them than heretofore.

The CHAIRMAN. How much is that?

Captain LEACH. That is in the neighborhood, I think, of $1,000,000 a year, or something like that. This, however, I say under correction. I have not these figures in my mind just now.

The CHAIRMAN. How much more in expenditure would be required beyond the $9,000,000 of this bill and the $1,000,000 already appropriated to make this perfect system of levees?

Captain LEACH. I think that if this money was appropriated and expended at the rate named in the minimum time of 3 years—but that is hardly long enough and the amount of work involved is more than could be executed in 3 years—and if the people for 3 or 4 years continue the taxation and raise money as before that will complete the system.

Digitized by Google

The CHAIRMAN. Thirteen million?

Captain LEACH. Thirteen or fourteen million will give a system adapted to the needs.

The CHAIRMAN. You would say that 15 million would be sufficient?

Captain LEACH. I should not hesitate to say that 15 million would be ample. That will make a levee that will be in its final condition—leaving aside the question of thousands and thousands of yards caved into the river that the people have paid for—1,500 miles long, containing in the neighborhood of 130,000,000 or 140,000,000 cubic yards of earth and worth at prevailing prices from $35,000,000 to $40,000,000, to which the Government will have contributed, when the levee is done, in the neighborhood of $12,500,000.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, let me ask you what proportion of the river is now leveed, I mean with levees sufficiently high and strong with ordinary care to keep the river within bounds at floods?

Captain LEACH. I doubt whether any considerable part of the present line of levees would not be strengthened if this project were undertaken. I think that perhaps with the exception of a very few miles, probably in the Upper Yazoo district, and with the exception of a few very extraordinary levees which are really dams, like Bolivar, nearly all the line would be strengthened. In some cases the strengthening would be very slight, and in other cases it would be a little more.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, would you expect that the expenditure of this amount, and the building of this continuous system of levees of sufficient height and strength to hold the flood waters in connection with your low-water improvement and channel improvement, would give perfect navigation from Cairo down as the result of it?

Captain LEACH. Perfect navigation, Mr. Chairman, is a term that can scarcely be defined.

The CHAIRMAN. Perhaps I put that too strong, but you would expect as a result a benefit to navigation throughout the entire length?

Captain LEACH. To a great degree, and so much so as to absolutely revolutionize the carrying trade of that river. Of course it is in river as in ocean commerce. There seems to be no limit of depth to which they can build ships, and it has been the experience on the Mississippi River that they build them to scrape the bottom right along, and the more water you get the deeper they build them, and I do not know whether we will ever have such a channel that somebody will not build a boat large enough to rub at some places. When I say improve navigation I mean that when these conditions are realized the navigation will be as good as that stream can make for itself. Every ounce of force that is in it will be utilized to form a channel.

The CHAIRMAN. Can you give me any estimate of the extent of country that would be protected from the destructive influence of floods by the construction of such a levee system?

Captain LEACH. I think about 30,000 square miles.

The CHAIRMAN. What kind of land?

Captain LEACH. It is the best agricultural land I have ever seen.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, are you able to state to the committee not only from personal observation but from a scientific point of view that this channel system made by levees will not in a series of years elevate the bottom of the river?

Captain LEACH. I am able to state that absolutely and I am as certain of that as of any conclusion in the domain of science of which I have any knowledge at all.

Digitized by Google

The CHAIRMAN. Do you know any instance in which that has not proven true? How about the Po?

Captain LEACH. There is no evidence whatever that the Po has raised its bed at any point in two centuries. There is evidence to the contrary quite positive that at other points it has lowered its bed in the neighborhood of a foot, and the general conclusion arrived at is that on the Po there has been no appreciable change in the bed of the river. But the Po is not the Mississippi by any means; it is an entirely different character of stream. It is different in these respects. Its alluvial part is much nearer the mountain sources, its slope is much higher, and it is a more torrential stream than the Mississippi, and the material of the bed is on an average a great deal coarser than the Mississippi.

The CHAIRMAN. It has been suggested that the language of this bill "the construction of levees from the Mouth of the Passes to Cairo" ought to be changed to read "to a point near Cairo. Do you know anything about that?

Captain LEACH. Above Cairo there is a short stretch of overflowing river extending to a place called the Chain of Rocks. Now, the St. Francis levees if carried out rigidly in logical completeness would extend from New Madrid up past all this country and join the high ground here [bringing out map and examining the same]. Here is the Chain of rocks and the river flows through a rocky cut here [illustrating].

The CHAIRMAN. And here are the highlands, here?

Captain LEACH. Yes, sir. There are also highlands lower down at Columbus and Hickman and on the east side of the river between Columbus and Memphis, all near the river and along there the benefit of the levees is not sufficient to compensate for their expense, and while they may be very desirable and even essential in other places they are not essential there.

The CHAIRMAN. Then you would approve of a modification, and instead of saying to Cairo you would say to the highlands or some other point?

Captain LEACH. I would say to the vicinity of Cairo and then the question could be discussed in detail with more complete data. The nature of the country that prevails from between New Madrid and Commerce on the west bank of the river makes it practically an isolated basin. Now, the question of closing that basin will depend upon its size and the injury the outflow is going to cause and the cost of the levee to close it. This will settle the question whether to build there or not. A large quantity of the water that goes out there now is returned by natural causes to the river at New Madrid.

The CHAIRMAN. And so can not spread over the country below?

Captain LEACH. No, sir; except a very small quantity at very high flood. I have of course expressed no opinion whether it is desirable to close that or not because the question can only be determined by a detailed study.

Mr. CATCHINGS. The Government began contributing to levee building in about 1882?

Captain LEACH. Yes, sir.

Mr. CATCHINGS. After the great flood and great disaster to the levees. Can you state how much money the Government has contributed to that purpose up to the present time?

Captain LEACH. I can not give exactly the amount, but I can give it near enough to serve the purposes of the committee. It is in the neighborhood of $3,000,000.

Digitized by Google

Mr. CATCHINGS. Now, can you give an estimate ot the amount which the various levee districts have expended in their States?

Captain LEACH. I do not think I have that with me. I found in the New Orleans Times-Democrat in an editorial article some months ago, a reference to a report of the Bureau of Statistics for 1887 giving the exdenditures on levees of States since 1865 to 1886——

Mr. CATCHINGS. But I wanted to know the amount of money that the Government has expended since 1882.

Captain LEACH. Since the Government began to contribute to levees I think the relative expenditure has been about four to one.

Mr. CATCHINGS. So you mean that $16,000,000 has been expended altogether?

Captain LEACH. I mean that for every dollar the Government has paid the people have paid four.

Mr. CATCHINGS. That would make it $15,000,000.

Captain LEACH. These are all approximate figures and I hope the committee will bear that in mind.

Mr. CATCHINGS. Very much of that $15,000,000 is given and in fact most of it for the protection of levees and the actual building of levees?

Captain LEACH. Yes, sir.

Mr. CATCHINGS. And for maintenance?

Captain LEACH. Very little for maintenance.

Mr. CATCHINGS. Yet the effect of that practice after the great disaster of 1882 was to give these people about 75 per cent. of absolute protection?

Captain LEACH. Yes, sir.

Mr. CATCHINGS. Suppose that the levees were constructed by the Government in coöperation with the States and levee districts, say that the work of construction would no longer figure in the matter, then the question of maintenance would come up. Now, can you give us an estimate of what would be required to properly maintain that levee system, supposing we had it constructed?

Captain LEACH. That involves the question of what is included in the maintenance of it.

Mr. CATCHINGS. That is what I want you to explain to the committee.

Captain LEACH. After the levee is constructed, the principal items of its maintenance are to prevent any sort of traffic on it and all disturbances in its immediate neighborhood, and to keep on it a complete and tough sod; that requires what I do not think has been generally done; that the right of way of the levee be made perhaps a little wider than it is now, and to fence it in, so that the entire right of way shall be covered with sod. It requires that that sod shall be grazed judiciously by cattle and sheep, and hogs kept off it, which involves having a fence, and there should be, in order to carry out these provisions, an efficient levee police maintained the year round.

Mr. CATCHINGS. That covers what is embraced in the expression "cost of maintenance."

Captain LEACH. I think so.

Mr. BOATNER. Ought there not to be an annual inspection of levees?

Captain LEACH. That would be a part of the police system, to make sure that the provisions deemed necessary are carried out. You gentlemen know these things will be onerous as well as I do. The people want to plow up to the base of the levee and raise cotton on the right of way, and it will take a good deal of weight and persuasion and perhaps some force to prevent them doing it, but we can not have safe levees while they raise cotton on the right of way.

Mr. BOATNER. That is true, but the point I was making there was, if we once had the levees constructed that the people could maintain them as they ought to be maintained without incurring anything like the expense they have been annually put to.

Captain LEACH. Oh, no; not $10 in the hundred.

Mr. BOATNER. It would be entirely within their power to keep it maintained.

Captain LEACH. The State engineer of Louisiana has made an estimate which is a little short of my own, made previously and independently, that of the moneys spent since 1875 on levees 75 per cent. had been spent for rebuilding levees caved into the river, and 25 per cent. in the care and extension of their levees. Seventy-five per cent. had been spent to replace levees that had caved into the river; in other words, 75 per cent. of the entire expense was caused by the neglect of the General Government to fix the banks.

Mr. BOATNER. If this bill should become a law and the levees should be constructed, as we hope to see them some day, and as you have described them, if constructed the work of the Government would not cease. That is to say, the Government would still pari passu continue the work of holding the banks by suitable revetment; so if this bill which Mr. Burrows has in charge becomes a law the Committee on Rivers and Harbors ought to continue the annual appropriation to be expended by the River Commission to fix and preserve the banks.

Captain LEACH. I think it would be folly to pass this bill, or anything like it, unless the Government can be committed as far as our institutions will permit to a constant, regular, and adequate supply of funds for the work of protecting the banks. In view of the fact that no such guaranty is absolutely possible, it seems to me it would not be at all amiss to provide that such portion of this money as may be necessary may be expended in bank protection where the levees are threatened; make it available for all purposes which bear directly upon the maintenance of the levee system.

Mr. BOATNER. That brings us to another question. I think I was informed by an engineer officer, I think Captain Kingman, about this: Is it not a fact that the breaking of levees and the disturbing of the channel, which is occasioned by that, causes the caving of the river at other points?

Captain LEACH. Undoubtedly.

Mr. BOATNER. Does it then follow in the construction of the levee system that the confinement of the water to the channels would largely decrease the caving and thereby largely decrease the necessity for revetment work of which you speak?

Captain LEACH. I do not know that that follows, and I would hardly be prepared to accept it as a sequence of the first proposition. If levees have any effect on the caving of banks, it will probably be to transfer it to other points rather than to diminish its aggregate amount. With a complete system of levees in contemplation, the necessity for bank protection is increased rather than diminished.

Mr. BOATNER. I want to call your attention to this fact. There was in the State of Louisiana, I know, from the Gulf to the Arkansas line, before the war a complete levee system and levee police. The municipal regulations required an annual inspection of levees, and officers were appointed to take care of them, and it was an offense to use them as roads or as things of that sort, and they were divided into districts, and hands were allotted to each district, who were expected to be called out to work on these levees at any time necessary. Now from 1850 to 1862—there was an overflow in 1850; there was no more until 1862—is there any data which would show whether or not the caving in the river has increased since that time, since the levee system has become insufficient?

Captain LEACH. I do not think there is any data resulting from measurement. Of course there is evidence, such as it is, of pilots, residents, and others which would probably be balanced pro and con. I think it is safe to say there is at present no data from which you can draw a conclusion one way or another.

Mr. BLANCHARD. When the levee system shall have been perfected on the lines you have laid out and the right of way shall have been fenced in and the levees sodded, say, how much would it take in dollars and cents in your opinion to maintain that system a year; would a million dollars do it?

Captain LEACH. I have not made any figures on that question but I should say yes; $1,000,000 would more than do it.

Mr. BLANCHARD. You mean it would more than keep it in perfect condition?

Captain LEACH. I think so, and there is another element of necessary deterioration which I had not mentioned. Of course every road which reaches the river from the interior has got to cross that levee and wears it down, and these crossings would have to be periodically restored, and the cost included in the amount required for maintenance. It seems to me there should be a guard of say a man to 5 miles or even 10 miles with the necessary organization for supervision. There would be about 1,500 miles of levee and it would take about 150 men.

Mr. CATCHINGS. That would pay all expenses, fencing, sodding, etc.?

Captain LEACH. To keep the bank sodded would be a small expense, and that would be mainly at first.

Mr. CATCHINGS. Keeping up the fence for 1,500 miles would be a very considerable expense.

Captain LEACH. Of course you know at a time of overflow the whole people will turn out en masse to work just as they do now.

Mr. STOCKDALE. A fence that was constructed of cedar posts and wire would not require much to keep it up.

The CHAIRMAN. But you know an ordinary fence rots down in a few years.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Now, then, after the levee system is once perfected, $1,000,000 divided between the States, levee boards, and riparian proprietors would maintain it?

Mr. CATCHINGS. Mr. Blanchard, it would not take half of it.

Mr. BLANCHARD. If that is so I would like for the captain to state what in his opinion would be enough.

Captain LEACH. I would not like to make an offhand statement in such an important matter for record. I am not familiar with some of the matters involved and my guess is not better than anybody else's. As to the cost of keeping up fences, for instance, I fancy any member of the committee might estimate closer than I can.

The CHAIRMAN. Into the Mississippi River are flowing other streams. Must not some of them be leveed or otherwise the water of those streams will flow back of the levees and overflow the country?

Captain LEACH. That will be the case only to a limited extent at the lower ends of the basins, and the injury caused to the Mississippi proper by any action which takes place in that way will not be comparable to the cost of leveeing these valleys in. The injury done by an outlet or crevasse or avenue of escape of water is measured not exclusively by the size of the hole, but is measured by the containing volume of the vessel or basin into which the openings discharge. Of course a small hole in a large tub will take off more water in considerable period of time than a large hole in a small tub.

The CHAIRMAN. I am not speaking of the Mississippi, but here is the Red River and some other rivers flowing into the Mississippi. Unless you build levees for these tributaries will not the waters from these streams overflow and flood the country unless they are leveed?

Captain LEACH. No, sir, except of course to a limited extent, as I explained before. If you will allow me to make a little diagram here on paper, I think I can make it clear. It is only proposed to carry the Mississippi levees to a point say within 10 or 20 miles of the mouths of these tributary streams. For instance, the Yazoo levee ends a distance like that above the mouth of the Yazoo [illustrating]. Here this levee ends and they select some natural high point, the highest they can get, and run it up to that and quit. Now, the length of the river from Cairo to the Gulf is about twice the air line distance. The river, in traversing the front of the Yazoo basin, goes twice the length of that basin. If we suppose in going that distance it falls at the rate of 6 inches a mile, it follows that the basin must have twice the fall, or a foot to the mile. Now, the water from the tributary streams will take the same level at the point of confluence as the Mississippi. Therefore the amount of land that can be overflowed will depend primarily upon the level of the Mississippi at the lower end of that levee. If the Mississippi is 5, 6, or 7 feet above the bank there, the water can only back up behind this levee to a point where the ground is 5 or 6 or 7 feet higher, or to 5 or 6 or 7 miles above the mouth of the tributary. Therefore the amount of land which can be overflowed is limited.

The CHAIRMAN. So there is no danger of any extended overflow from the tributaries?

Captain LEACH. None at all. I say under correction, for I may be mistaken, but nothing to the contrary has come to my attention, that I do not think the Yazoo River has been out of its banks since the levees along that front were completed. The great overflows of former times were caused by the Mississippi crevasse water. Now, with the Mississippi kept out of them, their channels seem to be large enough. I think that is true generally. The Red River is perhaps a little different, as it is a much longer and larger stream, and has an extensive drainage area of its own.

The CHAIRMAN. Will it be necessary in order to protect the country from disastrous floods from that river to build levees on that stream?

Captain LEACH. If it be a question of improving the Red River and its regulation and control, everything I have stated in regard to the Mississippi comes in.

The CHAIRMAN. Suppose these levees are built on the Mississippi River of sufficient height to protect the country from overflowing, is there not danger of overflowing from the Red River unless it is leveed?

Captain LEACH. Not to any considerable extent or any considerable distance and not involving perhaps as much as 5 per cent. of what is known as overflowed land.

Mr. BOATNER. The Red River is leveed generally very largely.

Mr. BRICKNER. There is a question I would like to ask in regard to this proposed system of dividing the lower Mississippi. Could that be done would it have the tendency to slacken the current below where the outlet or division would be, and by so doing would that form bars and fill up or partially close up the lower portion of the Mississippi provided the division was made?

Captain LEACH. To what point of division do you refer?

Mr. BRICKNER. To divide it and let it into Lake Borgne there.

Captain LEACH. The effect undoubtedly will be to shoal the river below. The channel having less water to carry than before will adapt itself to the carrying of less water than before. It will be diminished in cross-section and increased in slope. To increase the slope the upper end has got to be raised, therefore at the upper end the flood surface will be raised. While it is true that there is 120 feet of water mostly along there and while it is true that a deposit of 40, 50, or 60 feet might be made in the channel without interfering in the slightest degree with navigation, yet attention must be given to the fact that this channel of 120 feet deep does not exist all the way out into the Gulf; that while 40, 50, or 60 feet deposit is taking place in this channel, the existence of which a steamboat will never know, there will be a deposit of 4, 5, or 6 feet taking place on the bars and in the channel at the jetties which would greatly impede navigation.

Mr. BRICKNER. In your opinion, if that outlet was made it would——

Captain LEACH. It would destroy the jetty channel, and that is the life now of the Mississippi River.

Mr. STOCKDALE. Have you in your mind the difference of level between the Mississippi and Lake Borgne?

Captain LEACH. I have in my mind all the conditions of the problem, which I have studied repeatedly.

Mr. STOCKDALE. What would be the effect upon Lake Borgne if the river was turned into it?

Captain LEACH. It would fill it up.

Mr. STOCKDALE. What do you think would be the course of the waters of the Mississippi River?

Captain LEACH. There would perhaps always be a division of water at that point. The lake will fill up, the channel such as it is will extend rapidly, and having no longer any control will have a tendency to spread out. It will take a larger width than it has and assume a less depth than it has, and while at first there will be, you may say, an enormous channel in both directions, both channels will begin to close. The artificial channel, however, will suffer the most, and the result will be in the course of time the volume taken off by the crevasse will be very much reduced. A larger volume will be thrown into the main channel for transportation, and the main channel, having diminished in size, will be no longer be able to take care of it, and the result will be a destructive overflow.

Mr. STOCKDALE. From the topography of that country where would the waters go after passing through Lake Borgne?

Captain LEACH. They go right out through the sound; I do not remember the geography exactly, but I know they have a course of 25 or 30 miles before they get out into the Gulf proper, and a much longer distance to reach deep water.

Mr. STOCKDALE. The current as it goes through Mississippi Sound takes a course nearly parallel to the coast.

Captain LEACH. I hardly think the added volume of the Mississippi there would follow that channel. I think the resistance will be less in the other direction after it gets out of the lake, and I think the tendency would be to make a bee line for deep water.

Digitized by Google

Mr. STOCKDALE. You do not think it would go along the shallow water?

Captain LEACH. I do not think it would.

Mr. BOATNER. Is it not a fact that as soon as the Mississippi water strikes the warm water of the Gulf it drops its deposit?

Captain LEACH. Yes, sir.

Mr. BOATNER. Would not that cause bars and cause the current to extend out a little towards this channel?

Captain LEACH. It is undoubtedly true, where the river discharges into the still water of the Gulf or of any sedimentary river discharging into any large body of still water, that the deposit takes what we have defined as a fan-shaped form.

Mr. BOATNER. Would not the effect of that be that the artificial channel which is proposed to be made would eventually shut itself up by building a wall unless it was kept open by artificial means?

Captain LEACH. It will depend upon what the final conditions of the relative resistance may be between the outlet channel and the present main channel. That I do not think could be determined from any data we have at the present time, and while we are very certain the depth will be much diminished, whether it will cease to flow entirely I am unable to say.

Mr. BOATNER. Is not there a place there called Cubit's Gap?

Captain LEACH. That is one, and the Jump is another.

Mr. BOATNER. That was formerly opened there and it is closed.

Captain LEACH. I do not think that was ever closed, but it is so far closed as not to be serviceable, and you can hardly get an oyster sloop through.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Is that the tendency of the river itself to close the outlets?

Captain LEACH. Yes, sir.

Mr. BLANCHARD. I understand where the river makes a cut for itself the first high water closes both ends of the old channel?

Captain LEACH. It usually closes one end very soon and the other later. The tendency is to contract the area, and when it first commences the closure is very rapid. It becomes less and less, so that after a few years the contraction is so small that it is scarcely appreciable, and while I say that Cubit's Gap and the Jump and all outlets have a tendency to close, the closure in its final stages is so slow and so constantly diminishing in rate that it may be doubted whether it ever becomes absolutely complete except by the coöperation of causes exterior to the outlet itself.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Have you studied the river problem existing on the Yellow River of China?

Captain LEACH. No, sir. There has been up to the present no data of any kind of any value whatever of the condition of the Yellow River of China.

Mr. BLANCHARD. The reason I asked is a Senator in the United States Senate, in discussing the value of the levee system and criticising it and condemning it, stated that levees had been tried on the Yellow River of China and found to operate very disastrously, and I thought perhaps you had taken that in your study.

Captain LEACH. There is no data upon which one can make a study. There are of course traditional accounts of enormous overflows and we have newspaper accounts of overflows in some recent years. To me it is certain, from the topography throughout that part of Asia, that the Yellow River is not comparable with the Mississippi in any sense.

Digitized by Google

Mr. BOATNER. I want to call Mr. Blanchard's attention to the statement made by General Comstock, in which he reviewed the Yellow River of China and the Po and some streams in which the statement had been made that the bottom had raised in consequence of levees, and showed from the best authorities that that result had not occurred on either one of those streams. I think General Comstock testified at length on that subject.

Mr. BLANCHARD. When was that?

Mr. BOATNER. Last session, either before your committee or a Senate committee.

The CHAIRMAN (to Captain Leach). Have you anything further you would like to state in connection with this subject?

Captain LEACH. There is nothing from my point of view. If I have left any point unexplained or obscure, I would be very glad to give any information I can.

Thereupon the committee adjourned until Thursday, January 8, at 10 a. m.

COMMITTEE ON LEVEES AND IMPROVEMENTS
IN THE MISSISSIPPI RIVER,
Thursday Morning, January 8, 1891.

The committee met at 10 a. m. Present, Mr. Burrows (the chairman) and Messrs. Boatner, Brickner, Blanchard, Catchings, and Stockdale.

STATEMENT OF CAPTAIN DAN C. KINGMAN, OF THE CORPS OF ENGINEERS, U. S. ARMY.

The CHAIRMAN. You are in the Army, Captain Kingman?

Captain KINGMAN. Yes, sir; I am a captain of engineers, U. S. Army.

The CHAIRMAN. How long have you been in the service?

Captain KINGMAN. Since 1875 as an Engineer Officer.

The CHAIRMAN. Have you at any time been connected with the Mississippi River Commission?

Captain KINGMAN. I was on duty as a district officer under that Commission for 4 years, from 1886 to 1890. My district included that portion of the river from Warrenton to the Head of the Passes, about 450 miles.

The CHAIRMAN. You had charge of that section of the river?

Captain KINGMAN. Yes, sir; of all the work in progress, and all surveys and observations made on that section of the river.

The CHAIRMAN. Are you familiar with the Mississippi River Commission and its work for the improvement of the navigation of that river?

Captain KINGMAN. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. The inquiry we have in hand relates to the building of levees as a necessary adjunct or auxiliary to the improvement of the navigation of that stream. Have you given that subject any special attention?

Captain KINGMAN. Yes, sir; I have given it a good deal of attention

The CHAIRMAN. I would be glad if you would state to the committee your opinion in reference to the construction of levees as a means of improvement of low water navigation, and also as a means of preventing disastrous floods and overflows. State your knowledge upon that subject fully, in your own way.

Captain KINGMAN. The condition of the Mississippi River, the laws which govern its flow, the causes which operate to injure its navigable channel, and the defects from which it now suffers, as well as the means which have been adopted to correct them, have already been pretty thoroughly set forth by Captain Leach and others. These means include the construction of levees, and of revetments to prevent the caving of the bank, and of works to contract the channel. All of these are considered necessary for the purpose of improving the navigation of the river. That levees are necessary seems to me to be proved by the simple statement that in order to secure the best navigation of which the river is capable it is necessary to have complete control of the river at all stages, and particularly at those stages at which it is capable of doing the most harm or the most good. This can be secured only by the creation of artificial banks, higher than those that the forces of the river can produce, thereby causing the stream to pass down at all stages in a comparatively narrow channel. It is a well known fact that wherever water escapes from the channel of an alluvial river at a comparatively well defined point, as at a crevasse, that the channel is impaired in the vicinity of the break. This has been demonstrated a great many times, and particularly during the recent high water. The largest crevasse, and the one which discharged the greatest amount of water during the flood of 1890, was the one known as the Nita Crevasse, 65 miles above New Orleans. Its maximum discharge was 400,000 cubic feet per second, or one-third of the amount of water passing in the river channel, immediately above the break.

While two-thirds of the water passed down to the mouth of the river one-third escaped through the crevasse. The surveys made when the river was falling showed that the effect of the crevasse had been to diminish the effective area of cross-section about 25 per cent., that is to say, the cross-section below the crevasse was only 75 per cent. of what it had been before the break occurred, when the river was in its normal condition.

Mr. STOCKDALE. What do you mean by "cross-sections?"

Captain KINGMAN. If you imagine the river to be cut square across, so that you can see the end of it, the end so exposed would be the cross-section.

Mr. BOATNER. It lost 25 per cent. of its carrying capacity?

Captain KINGMAN. Yes, sir. The maximum amount of water that escaped was 33 per cent., and I suppose that if the crevasse had continued to act long enough the loss of area of cross-section would have been nearly as great. The shoaling ceased 4 or 5 miles below the outlet. If the escape of water through this opening had continued long enough, then the whole channel clear down to the mouth would have been impaired; for the channel of the Mississippi is of its own formation—the net result of all the forces that have been acting upon it up to the present time. If you could compare the maps of the river as it now is with a map made 100 years ago you would find great changes almost throughout the entire length of the channel, except along the lower portion of it. If it occupies the same channel now that it then did, it is often because it has been away, and wandered back to it again. This channel has been formed by the river itself. The reason for its present size is that the river will make a channel large enough to carry the average flood discharged, and when a flood greater than the average is poured into the channel it will be overtaxed; therefore, if you reduce the average annual discharge by allowing some portion of the water to escape, the channel will readily respond to the new conditions, and will soon be proportionally reduced in carrying capacity, and for that reason will be no better able to carry its portion of an extraordinary flood than it formerly was to discharge the entire volume.

So on the Mississippi River, with an incomplete system of levees, with an imperfect system, or with no system at all, we shall have at every flood a number of pretty well defined points at which a portion of the water will escape from the main channel and flow for long distances in lateral channels remote from it. Each one of these points of escape will be a center from which deterioration of the waterway will spread. This deterioration may or may not become sufficient to interfere with low-water navigation. I do not know that it has ever been sufficient to prevent it. If the escape of water is not very great the effect would probably never be observed by pilots when the break was opposite a deep portion of the river; for a reduction of depth from 100 feet to 60 feet would make no difference to them, though it would seriously impair the river as a drain. In the case of a large break, however, near a shoal portion of the river, the injurious effect could not fail to be observable on the low-water channel.

I could mention a great many cases where breaks in the levees have been injurious to navigation, and where the rebuilding of a levee has restored the former conditions. I will mention the Morganza Crevasse, a very large one, which was situated about 30 miles below the mouth of the Red River, on the right bank. The water that escaped through it never returned, but found its way to the Gulf by the way of the Atchafalaya.

Mr. CATCHINGS. I suppose that is true of the Nita Crevasse also?

Captain KINGMAN. Yes, sir; the water escaping through the Nita Crevasse reached the Gulf by the way of Lake Ponchartrain and the Rigolets.

This Morganza crevasse was a mile in width, and the level of its bottom was such that when the river attained the height of some 30 to 35 feet above low water, the water overflowed through the crevasses. The first break occurred here, I think in 1874, and remained open until 1884, when it was closed up, but only remained closed for a few months, when it broke again and continued as a crevasse. In the winter of 1886 and 1887 the State of Louisiana and the United States began the construction of a levee to close the opening. While the work was in progress of construction, and before the river had risen high enough to reach the base of the levee, so that its effect would be felt on the regimen of the river, I measured a number of cross-sections in the vicinity and compared them with similar cross-sections taken by the Mississippi River Commission 3 years before, in 1883. I was therefore aware of the changes that had taken place from 1883 to 1886. This was a portion of the river which had been subject to the influence of an open crevasse for a number of years, and it showed there had been a loss of effective area of cross-section of as much as 25 per cent. in the 3 years covered by the comparison, showing that the effect was a continuous and progressive deterioration of the channel. The year the levee was finished we had a flood of moderate height, but sufficient to develop the full influence of the levee. After the flood I repeated the soundings on all of the cross-sections and found that there had been a recovery of about 12½ per cent. For the next 2 years we had no water high enough to permit the levee to have any effect, and though I repeated the surveys, I found little or no change. The next year we had a very high flood, but unfortunately the levee broke. I do not know what has been the effect upon the channel since. I venture to predict, however, that an examination would show that the cross-section has again diminished. There was always water enough here for the purpose of navigation, but the crevasse was in a bend on the concave side. This caused the opposite point to project and made the bend rough and ugly. Pilots have told me that they dreaded it, and considered it one of the worst places on the lower river during low water. After the levee was built the conditions there greatly improved, and the low-water channel became entirely satisfactory. This was a case where the construction of a levee prevented injury to the channel and improved navigation. That was all that was done there, and was all that was necessary. I know many other similar cases could be pointed out where the construction of a levee was all that was required to improve the navigation of the river at the particular point. I do not know that it is necessary to say anything further on that subject.

The first and most important question in regard to the construction of a system of levees on the Mississippi River from Cairo to the forts is this: Can a system be constructed which will be able to restrain any flood likely to occur? It is, in my opinion, perfectly practicable to do so, and at a moderate expense. It is just as practicable a problem as it would be to construct a railroad from Cairo to New Orleans, which nobody doubts can be done. I think that some engineers, when asked whether a system can be constructed that will restrain any flood, have, in their answers, had several things in mind. They have had in their minds, particularly the care, or rather the lack of care, that these works when built once, ordinarily receive in time of low water. The only time that they ever do receive any repairs or any care, is in time of flood when they are greatly threatened, and then the repairs, though expensive, are hurriedly made, and are of little or no permanent value. If anybody should ask "Is it possible to build a railroad from Cairo to New Orleans?" Of course the answer would be in the affirmative; but if it were asked, "Is it possible to build a railroad from Cairo to New Orleans, capable of sustaining a heavy traffic, without ever receiving any repairs?" The answer would probably be "No." Anything exposed to the action of rain and frost, and to the work of burrowing creatures, such as crawfish and beavers, as a levee is, must be carefully looked after. The weeds must be cut, the gulleys filled, and these burrowing creatures must be killed, and their work undone. If that is done, and a moderate amount of watchfulness and care is taken, such as is exercised by railroad companies in looking after their track, it would be more than sufficient to maintain a good system of levees when once built, and to enable it to successfully resist any flood in the river that is ever likely to occur.

Mr. BOATNER. This bill proceeds upon the hypothesis that there shall be a coöperation between the State and the National Government. Have you had any trouble in securing the active coöperation of the State authorities in the construction and maintenance of levee work?

Captain KINGMAN. I never had any trouble to get the State authorities to render all the assistance which the law enabled them to render. I have sometimes thought that the people did not do all they ought to in the way of securing proper laws. I always thought it was a fault of the laws that they could not tax themselves enough. I thought at one time during the last flood that the people did not seem to realize the danger they were in. They did not come out and work hard enough in the early stages of the flood, when they had time to strengthen their levees; but as soon as they understood and appreciated the danger, they came out and worked very hard. I found that when they were convinced that the danger was real, there was never any trouble to induce them to do all they could. The next most important question to be considered in regard to a system of levees is their proper location with reference to the river bank.

This leads to the consideration of the levees from three standpoints:

(1) As works designed to protect the valleys from overflows, to improve the river as a drain for its watershed, and to reclaim land.

(2) As works designed to afford ease and safety to the navigation of the river at all stages, and to improve the water way; and (3) as works exposed to the destructive forces of the river and incapable of protecting themselves. It is impossible to properly discuss the question of the best location for a system of levees, without giving due weight to all of these considerations; and although we are now upon the subject of levees, as a means of improving the channel, yet the question of protecting this enormous valley from the destructive floods to which it is periodically exposed is of such paramount importance that it is, upon its own merits, entitled to be first considered, and in any case it ought to be considered, at least so far as to see how the conditions of best locations of a system of levees designed solely to protect land would compare with that of a system built solely to improve the channel.

For the purpose of protecting the valley from overflow every consideration of reason and economy requires that the least possible amount of levee should be made to protect the greatest possible area of land. And a perfect system from this standpoint would be one that protected all of the land subject to overflow. This clearly points to the crest of the river bank as the proper location for the levees, for they would then protect the greatest possible area from overflow. And since the banks of the Mississippi River, as is the case with all alluvial streams, are higher than points in the valley remote from the channel; in other words, since the land on each side of the river slopes away from the crest of the banks, falling, as a rule, at the rate of about 8 feet to the mile, it follows that levees placed at a distance from the river would have to be much higher than if placed on the bank, and if they were built as much as a mile away they would have to be on an average 8 feet higher than the bank levees. The bank levees along the Mississippi do not average more than 8 feet in height, therefore a mile in length of levee built a mile away from the bank would contain about three and a half times as much material as a mile of levee built on the bank, and would cost more than three times as much money. Of course there would be a saving in length in the case of levees placed a mile away from the river, because they could be made much straighter; but, in my opinion, this saving would not nearly suffice to make up for the increased height. Moreover, owing to its slope the natural drainage of the land is away from the river, and a system of levees placed a mile away from the river bank, while it would leave this wide strip of land exposed to annual overflow, it would render it utterly worthless for agriculture by cutting off all chance of draining it. This strip next to the river is naturally the best and most valuable land in the whole valley, and, in my opinion, a system of levees which requires the abandonment and destruction of at least 1,000 square miles of the best and most accessible and most productive agricultural land in the whole valley would be, to say the least, injudicious, and I doubt if it would be worth what it would cost.

Another reason is that the existing line of levees is close to the bank, and in making new ones for any purpose, it would be desirable to take advantage of what has already been done. Now as to the proper location for these works considered simply as a means of affording ease and safety to navigation, and of improving the water way. We should first consider the benefits they confer upon commerce during the high stages of the river; for the Mississippi is esentially a high-water stream.

Last season it remained above the danger line at Vicksburg for 120 days, and it is a fact, that during every high flood, though so far as depth of water is concerned, any vessel that was ever built could safely navigate the river, there is less commerce afloat and more steamboats out of commission than during the lowest stages to which the river ever falls. And the reason for this is perfectly plain. The river has become a sea, and the banks are submerged, and the ordinary landing places are entirely useless, and the boats can only receive and deliver freight at a few points where floating warehouses, or wharf boats, as they are called, are provided, and these are generally difficult of access from the land; or at a few points, where the caving of the banks has broken former levees, leaving the ends extending across the batture in such a way as to form narrow cause ways, along which freight can be carried to the main levee.

The CHAIRMAN. Then these floods are injurious in destroying the landing places of boats up and down the Mississippi?

Captain KINGMAN. They are particularly injurious when the levees are broken or are placed at long distances from the bank. If a levee is not more than 100 feet from the bank, a vessel can run its bow up to it and deliver its freight, but otherwise, it would be so difficult and dangerous to attempt to approach the levee that no steamboat man would venture to do it. It is therefore desirable that the levees should be near the bank in the interest of high water navigation. For the regulation of the river I do not think there can be any doubt as to the proper location. Captain Leach has said that the high water flow should correspond in direction with the low-water flow, and that the flow of the current should be constant in direction at all stages. This can only be secured at high stages by raising the banks artificially; in other words, by constructing a system of levees parallel and near to the crest of the natural banks. When the level of the water in the river is below its banks, the general direction of its flow is parallel to them, but when it rises above its banks it tends to assume a direction of flow parallel to the axis of its valley. If it is confined by a system of levees remote from its banks, it will assume, in the upper stratum at least, a direction generally parallel to the levees. This may often cause it at high stages to assume a direction at certain places nearly at right angles to that which it follows at low stages. This can not fail to injure, if not destroy, the low-water channel, and it must be borne in mind that the power of the river to the work is measured by a certain number of tons of water, depending upon its discharge, falling through a certain vertical distance; and since the volume of the flood is ten or twenty times greater than that of low water, it follows as a matter of course that the misdirected efforts of a great flood may do more damage to the low-water channel in 3 weeks' time than the feeble force of low-water can undo in 6 months. I should seriously question the efficacy of a system of levees placed a mile away from the banks to improve the low-water channel. To say the least, their effect would be uncertain and their benefits doubtful. I do not think they would be of very much value. Therefore we see that every consideration of utility, whether for the protection of the valley from overflow, or the reclamation of land, or the improvement of the river as a navigable channel, demands that the levees should be placed upon the crest of the river bank. There are certain practical reasons, however, why they should be placed a short distance, say 200 or 300 feet, back from the crest. This space is needed to obtain earth for the construction of the levee, for this earth should always be taken from the river side, because the succeeding floods will soon fill up the pits; but if the earth is taken from the land side the water will stand in the pits and will weaken the levee, and sometimes will cause the banks to cave or slide in.

This distance is also desirable to diminish infiltration. Unfortunately the considerations of safety and durability of the levee under the present conditions are directly opposed to those of utility. If the levee is near the river bank it is particularly exposed to injury from the waves during high water. This, however, can be largely obviated by securing a heavy growth of willows on the batture; but in addition to this, the levees in many localities would be certain to be quickly destroyed by the caving of the banks upon which they were situated. Still, after all, the safety of the levees must be regarded as a secondary consideration. If it were of the first importance, then it could be abundantly secured by building the levees back at the base of the hills; in which case the levees would be safe, but the valley would not.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there any engineering difficulty, in your judgment, in constructing levees on the bank of the stream, in protecting the bank at those points where there is erosion going on?

Captain KINGMAN. No; there would be no engineering difficulty, but there would be some expense. The great cost of the levee system to the States and to the United States has been due to the loss of levees in consequence of the caving of the river bank. Since 1882 the State of Louisiana has expended about $6,000,000 in the construction of levees, and the United States has expended about $2,500,000 for levees in the State of Louisiana, as roughly estimated. Of the $6,000,000 expended by the State, three-fourths was required for construction of levees to replace others that had caved into the river, and the new levees were not any better than those which they replaced. All the money expended by the United States was for a similar purpose. And therefore we have, out of an expenditure of more than $8,000,000, only about $1,500,000 available for the improvement of the system. If all of that money could have been used in improving the system, the State would have had as good a system of levees as it would ever require. It would have been ample to afford complete protection from overflows. I am satisfied of this from my own experience.

Mr. BOATNER. While on that line will you please state what in your opinion is the cause of the frequent caving of the bank of the Mississippi above the mouth of the Red River?

Captain KINGMAN. The slope of the river here and its consequent velocity of flow is considerable. Its banks are often composed of material easily moved by the water, and when the direction of its flow is such as to cause it to impinge upon such a bank, it cuts it away, undermining it and causing it to cave.

Mr. BOATNER. Is it due to the changes in the current?

Captain KINGMAN. It is partly due to that, and partly due to the efforts of the river to secure for itself a condition of equilibrium by attaining such development of length as would give to it a slope that would determine a velocity of current that the bank would be able to resist. There is a certain velocity required to move a certain class of material, which a less velocity will not disturb, and if it were possible for the river to secure throughout its entire length a velocity at all stages less than that required to move the material of which its banks are composed its condition would then be stable.

Digitized by Google

Mr. BOATNER. Then there would be an enormous decrease in the expense of maintaining levees?

Captain KINGMAN. Undoubtedly. That is what I have been endeavoring to point out. One of the largest levees in my district was the Kempe Levee. It is between Natchez and Vicksburg on the Tensas Front. It is around a bend that has been caving for a great many years. The soil of the bank is composed of a light material and is readily attacked by water, and the current is swift, rendered more so by recent cut-offs, which have shortened the river. For a great many years there has been a constant caving going on there. I do not know how many levees were built there by the State, but perhaps two or three.

In 1884 the United States built a levee there, costing in the neighborhood of $150,000. It was 4 miles in length and an excellent levee. It was placed 2,000 feet back from the bank. Major Stickney said that, in his opinion, it would last four years, and at the expiration of four years it would be necessary to build another; and he recommended that the bank should be protected by revetments. He estimated that a revetment would be about as costly as another levee. No money was available, and at the end of 4 years, the levee caved into the river and it was necessary to replace it by another. Another levee was built about 2,000 feet farther back, which cost about the same amount, or another $150,000. It was, of course, no better than the one that it replaced. This winter the United States is building another levee to replace a part of the last one, which has caved into the river. How long this caving will continue, and how many more levees it will be necessary to build there I do not know.

In the Kempe Bend I observed a certain condition which made a strong impression on my mind. There were two or three cypress sloughs along the bend that extended back from the bank in a direction generally perpendicular to it. They were, I suppose, the beds of old outlet bayous. The soil in these sloughs, unlike the rest of the bank, was composed of hard clay, and overgrown with large cypress trees. It resisted the action of the current much better than the rest of the bank. In the course of time these slough-beds stuck out into the river, forming a series of false points, the soft material between them having caved back so as to give the bend the form of a number of scallops.

After this recession between the clay points had progressed far enough to enable the points to mask the bank between them and protect it from the force of the current, the caving stopped, and the shape of the bend continued unchanged until one of these points would finally yield to the action of the water and break off, then the soft bank above and below the point would cave off very rapidly until the point again became salient, when the caving would again cease.

If these points could have been reënforced so as to enable them to resist the action of the water, I am satisfied the bend could have been maintained. The shore line would have been cut into scallops separated by false points, but the distance that the caving could have gone back between the fixed points would have been limited, and the bend have been held. If that was true in this bend, it seems to me it would have been true in the case of other bends. I am of the opinion that no satisfactory and useful system of levees can be constructed upon the Mississippi River which will be permanent unless the banks are protected, and at the same time I am of the opinion that the proper method of protecting the banks is by a system of artificial points or spurs placed at suitable intervals along the caving bank, and so constructed as to be fully capable of resisting themselves the full force of the current and of checking the velocity of its flow along the banks between them, and finally of completely protecting the bank when it shall have receded sufficiently to be fully masked by them. This I believe will secure a permanent bank; after this the levee system will be permanent, and the value of the riparian property enormously increased. You can understand how uncertain the value of a plantation becomes when it is liable to be cut into and perhaps destroyed by the river. The Kempe plantation was once a very large and thoroughly equipped place, having houses, cabins, barns, a cotton gin, etc., now there is nothing left of it but a small cleared field a few acres in extent. The knowledge that this may happen anywhere decreases the value of every plantation on the river.

Mr. CATCHINGS. You do not mean a deflective dike?

Captain KINGMAN. No; they would be similar to those now being built by the Mississippi River Commission at Carrollton, La. They are sloping spurs and are not intended to defect the current; they are simply intended to check the velocity of the current along the banks, and to reduce their slopes.

Mr. BLANCHARD. What is the depth of water there?

Captain KINGMAN. It is 100 to 165 feet. In building a spur, a thick strong mattress of willow brush is first sunk in such a manner as to completely cover the bank, from the low-water line out to and across the line of deepest water, and having a width up and down the stream of about 150 feet. These mats are usually about 18 inches in thickness; they are made very strong, and when sunk their surface is pretty well covered with rock. Upon this foot-mat the spur is built up of very strong thick mattresses or "cribs" as they are called. The cribs are similar in construction to the mattresses, but are 6 feet in thickness. They are filled with rock and are carefully sunk successively in place. They are given such a length and width that the completed spur shall have the proper form, that is to say, that it shall be wide on the base and narrow on the top, and have side slopes of about one on one, and the crest line shall slope downward from the low-water line at an angle not greater than one on three to the deepest part of the channel. The axis of the spur is generally perpendicular to the bank or slightly inclined upstream. It requires for one of these spurs, including the mattress, about 1,000 cords of willow brush and about 1,000 tons of rock and a proper proportion of nails, rope, and lumber.

Mr. CATCHINGS. What is the cost of them?

Captain KINGMAN. They cost about $12,000 a spur.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Do they prevent the cutting of the bank?

Captain KINGMAN. The Gouldsboro system of six spurs was completed in 1887, and since then there has been no loss of bank at that place. The condition there was different from what it would be where the land was not valuable. The spurs were placed 1,000 feet apart because it was desirable to preserve all the land possible. Repeated surveys show that the spurs are intact. As they are entirely sumerged they can not decay.

Mr. CATCHINGS. Do you think that for general purposes outside of cities the construction could be as much as 2,000 feet apart?

Captain KINGMAN. I think so, because a recession of banks of 50 or 100 feet between the spurs would not be a matter of any great importance.

Mr. CATCHINGS. And they might be constructed at smaller expense?

Digitized by Google

Captain KINGMAN. Yes, sir. Where the depth of water is less, I am inclined to the opinion that under favorable circumstances, they might be constructed for an average cost of $10,000 a spur, if the willows were abundant, and easy of access. We had to bring all the willows used at New Orleans from a great distance. The last used came from above Bayou Sara, and some of the rock came from above St. Louis. I do not think that there is any place on the river where the work need be more expensive than at New Orleans.

Mr. CATCHINGS. Do you know any other places where such spurs have been used?

Captain KINGMAN. Some were used in front of the city of Greenville, Miss., where there were caving banks, and they have proved to be perfectly satisfactory there. The spurs there were constructed differently from those at New Orleans, and were placed closer together. It was desirable and necessary to hold all the land possible. Spurs have also been successfully used in front of Memphis.

The CHAIRMAN. If spurs are less expensive and just as efficacious in preventing the caving of the banks, why not use them instead of revetments.

Captain KINGMAN. They are less expensive, but it has not yet been demonstrated to the Commission that they are as efficacious.

Mr. CATCHINGS. Does this system discontinue revetments?

Captain KINGMAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. BOATNER. Do you know anything about the effect of that revetment work at Delta Point, opposite Vicksburg?

Captain KINGMAN. I know that the revetment has been there a great many years, and it has held the bend.

Mr. BOATNER. Do you not know it is a fact that it has stopped the caving in the bend above that point?

Captain KINGMAN. I understand that caving of the bend above has ceased, or nearly ceased, but I am not sure that it is due to this work, though perhaps it is.

Mr. CATCHINGS. You suppose that these spurs could be constructed for $10,000 each, and I think it is a fair presumption. Could you give this committee an idea of the total cost of putting in these spurs from Cairo to the forts, to stop caving?

Captain KINGMAN. It would be a guess, but I will give you the best guess I can make. Suppose we would put in spurs a thousand feet apart, costing $10,000 apiece. That would be about $50,000 a mile for every mile it was necessary to protect. The distance from Cairo to the forts is something over a thousand miles. The length of the banks would therefore be about 2,000 miles.

They are not all caving banks by any means—only a small portion is. I suppose about 1 mile in 10 is a caving bank.

I should say 1 mile in 10 would be a fair estimate. Suppose there are 200 miles of river bank which is caving, the total cost would be $10,000,000 to protect them with spur dikes in the manner I have described, from Cairo to the forts. Whether that would all have to be done or not is a question. The caving seems to originate at certain points where there is a vigorous attack, and the loss of bank here, and the corresponding changes in the direction of the current seem to disturb the equilibrium and start caving in several bends below. If these initial points, where the tendency to cave originates, can be found, and the banks thoroughly protected it seems certain that the caving in the bends below will be stopped, or at least very greatly diminished.

It is the opinion of some engineers familiar with the subject that it would be entirely safe to protect every second or every third bend; indeed, it seems not improbable that if one selected bend in every five or ten was thoroughly held that at the other points the caving would stop. There are certain bends in their natural condition where navigation is good, and all that could be desired, bends whose banks do not cave; these are what we call ideal bends. It would be an injudicious thing simply to protect the banks at all points where caving was taking place without regard to the shape which the bend has assumed. The shape of the river should be studied, and it should be guided rather than forced. When the river is attempting to assume a proper form it should be encouraged. If a caving bend is too deep, so that the current can not follow it at all stages, then the middle or bight of the bend should be protected and the ends allowed to cave off so as to increase its radius of curvature; if, on the other hand, the bend is too open or flat, so that the river at certain stages tends to leave it and form a secondary bend, then the two ends should be protected and the caving allowed to continue in the middle until the radius of curvature had been sufficiently reduced.

The CHAIRMAN. Of course you must protect the banks from caving, in order to protect the levees. I observed in going down the river that the current, or channel, changed constantly or went from one side to the other, and it would strike or impinge against one bank and the water would then be thrown across to the other.

Now, you protect the bank where the stream impinges and you protect it below on the opposite side. What I want to know, is there any danger of the channel changing entirely at these points so that the protection would be of no service and the river would strike at other points and you would finally have to revet the entire bank on both sides?

Captain KINGMAN. I do not think there would be any danger of that on a thoroughly improved river; that is to say, on a river where the floods were controlled by a proper levee system, and where all of the caving bends had been revetted and given a proper form. But taking the river as it now is, if only two or three adjacent bends were protected, I should be afraid that the work might not be permanent, but that after two or three floods the points of the attack might be shifted below the protected portions. Still the influence of a single improved reach like that at Plum Point is felt in diminished caving for a long distance below.

The CHAIRMAN. Suppose that at this instant you had every caving point revetted, and there would come a flood this spring; after the water subsided would you expect to find that the river was impinging on new unprotected points?

Captain KINGMAN. No, sir; I should not. I do not see how it could change. Before the control was completed it might do so to some extent at certain special localities. A properly regulated river could not change. There are some places where the river is abnormally wide. Such places generally have a rapidly caving bank on one side and a making sand bar on the other, and this is the reason of their abnormal width, for it is not possible for the river to build up one bank as fast as it tears down the other. It may cave back 500 or 600 feet a year, leaving the old channel only partially filled. The river is trying to gain its normal width, but it can not because the rate of caving is too rapid. Finally it forms an island, and then at some stages the current is strong on one side of the island and at others it is strong on the other; the forces of the river are thus often opposed to each other, and the navigation becomes exceedingly bad. But for these caving banks I am of the opinion that the river would do all the contraction work itself that is necessary.

Mr. CATCHINGS. That would prevent the necessity for contraction work?

Captain KINGMAN. In time it would. It would be a little slow, but it would eventually do all the contraction work necessary in the river.

Mr. BOATNER. Your idea is that caving banks cause changes and disturbances in the current?

Captain KINGMAN. Yes, sir; caving banks and the want of a proper shape.

Mr. BOATNER. If, therefore, there is such a disturbance at any point, and the river has changed the direction of its current and begins to attack the bank at a point by which it formerly swept, and creates a cave, is it not the effect of that cave to produce a disturbance, the consequence of which is felt to an almost unknown distance down the river?

Captain KINGMAN Yes, sir; I have endeavored to describe that. There seems to be certain initial points where this disturbance first makes itself manifest.

Mr. BOATNER. In the case of this Kempe Bend, where there has been not less than half a million or more spent by the State, has there been a disturbance and a change of current resulting from the caving and cut-offs above?

Captain KINGMAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. CATCHINGS. The same effect is observed as the result of the cut-offs?

Captain KINGMAN. Yes, sir; it disturbs the regimen and changes the direction and force of the current.

Mr. BOATNER. Is it a fact that the river will maintain about a certain slope, and that a cut-off will shorten the river and increase its slope, and that it will cave below and above in order to recover the same slope it had?

Captain KINGMAN. It will always endeavor to regain what it has lost, and will never cease until it has done it.

Mr. BOATNER. Would it follow as a consequence if you abandoned these bends so as to let the river go through the necks and shorten its length that it will endeavor to regain its length by extensive caving below, which will destroy the levees and disturb the flow of the current?

Captain KINGMAN. Unquestionably.

Mr. BOATNER. Did it do it at Vicksburg and Palmyra Bend?

Captain KINGMAN. Yes, sir. I am quite sure that no member of the Mississippi River Commission would be in favor of allowing cut-offs to take place; on the contrary, they make use of every means at their command to prevent them.

Mr. CATCHINGS. Coming back to the protection of the bank by these spurs which you speak of, I understood you to estimate that you would put in spurs for $10,000 apiece, not more than 1,000 feet apart; but it might turn out that you would not be compelled to put in so many protection works, as many of these bends might not need protection. Experience might prove that a much less sum than you have given would accomplish all that is desired.

Captain KINGMAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. BOATNER. Are you familiar with topography of the Mississippi River near the mouth of the Arkansas River?

Captain KINGMAN. Tolerably.

Mr. BOATNER. Does any water that escapes over the western banks of the Mississippi below the mouth of the Arkansas River ever get back into the Mississippi?

Digitized by Google

Captain KINGMAN. Some of it does. The water which escapes from the Mississippi along the Tensas Front flows across the country until it comes to Bayou Tensas and Bayou Macon, down which it flows to Black River, and thence into Red River. In flowing down the valley of these small streams its velocity is greatly retarded, and is much less than in the main channel of the Mississippi, and if the quantity escaping above is sufficient it may reach the latitude of the mouth of Red River with a head several feet greater than the water in the Mississippi has at this point; then it will divide and some will flow out into the Mississippi, and the rest will go down the Atchafalaya. I have seen water pouring over the banks into the Mississippi from the valley of the Red River.

Mr. BOATNER. Have you ever seen that except in 1884?

Captain KINGMAN. I saw it this year. A great deal of water escaped into the Tensas Basin through the breaks in the levees in Arkansas and North Louisiana, and came down by the Tensas, Black, and Red Rivers; and when it reached a position near the mouth of Red River it was higher than the water in the Mississippi, and it poured out into the Mississippi through the woods and was easy to see and recognize, for it had settled and was nearly clear. We could see it extending out into the Mississippi for nearly 800 feet from the bank line.

Mr. BOATNER. That which goes into the Atchafalaya flows out into the Gulf?

Captain KINGMAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. BOATNER. My information was that there was a strong current across that swamp into the Red River?

Captain KINGMAN. So there was, in the early stages of the flood until this crevasse water reached the mouth of Red River, and then the condition was reversed. Probably for the first two months of the flood the current was strong across the country into the Red River, for there are no levees along this portion of the Mississippi.

Mr. BOATNER. In ordinary floods does the water of Atchafalaya come largely from the Mississippi?

Captain KINGMAN. It generally does unless the Red River is very high at the same time.

Mr. BOATNER. Is it only when the Atchafalaya is unable to carry the water which comes down the Ouachita that any of it would ever go into the Mississippi?

Captain KINGMAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. BOATNER. Ordinarily the high water escaping from the Mississippi would not come back, but would flow out through the Atchafalaya.

Captain KINGMAN. Provided——

Mr. BOATNER. In 1882 and 1884, during both of those floods, the levees were practically down on the Tensas front, were they not?

Captain KINGMAN. You may say they were.

Mr. BOATNER. The whole country was a vast sea, and the water was running broadcast?

Captain KINGMAN. The levees were entirely ineffective as levees.

Mr. BOATNER. And this year there was hardly any portion of the levee gone?

Captain KINGMAN. There were only a few breaks.

Mr. BOATNER. Can you state to the committee what information you have, if any, in regard to the pressure below the mouth of the Red River in 1882 or 1884 and 1890?

Digitized by Google

Captain KINGMAN. The levee below the mouth of the Red River was more severely taxed in 1890 than ever before, for the river was higher; at Morganza and Bayou Sara the water was 2½ feet higher than it had ever been before.

Mr. CATCHINGS. I wish you would talk a little about Captain Cowden's theory, and make use of any illustration or information furnished you by the last high water relating to that theory.

Mr. BOATNER. Before going any farther I want to ask you what was the difference in the proportion of the country overflowed in south and west Louisiana below the mouth of the Red River in 1882 and 1890?

Captain KINGMAN. It was very much less in 1890; but I do not know the exact proportion. I endeavored after the last flood to ascertain how much land was overflowed, and sent out a man, and also sent a great many letters of inquiry, and tried in a number of ways to get definite information; but I was unable to do so. The statements which I got were conflicting. One man would say that almost all of the country in his neighborhood was flooded; and it would appear from the statement of another that but a very small portion was submerged. I am inclined to the opinion that the overflow was very much less extensive in 1890 than in 1882.

Mr. BLANCHARD. That was the result of the better levees?

Captain KINGMAN. Yes, of better levees, and more of them.

Mr. BOATNER. There was much less overflow in 1890 than in 1882?

Captain KINGMAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. BOATNER. But in 1882 the whole of the northern part of Louisiana was overflowed, and the water was running broadcast from the Mississippi through to the Atchafalaya?

Captain KINGMAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. BLANCHARD. The fact that the area of the country overflowed in 1890 was less than it was in 1882 is the direct result of the better levee system?

Captain KINGMAN. That was the sole reason.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Is it not shown from the measurements in the Mississippi that the flood in 1890 was much larger than that of 1882 to 1884?

Captain KINGMAN. It was considerably larger. At New Orleans the discharge was more in 1890 than it was in 1882 or 1884, or at any previous time when the discharge was observed. The total flow down the valley near the mouth of Red River, including all the water that passed down between the highlands on one side and those on the other, was about 2,100,000 cubic feet per second.

Mr. BLANCHARD. A levee system 5 feet above what the levees were in 1890 would clearly protect that country?

Captain KINGMAN. It would be more than would be necessary. The system we had was almost sufficient as it was. When we consider how few breaks occurred, and that most of these were on account of defective construction rather than high water, we may consider we were almost safe, so far as height was concerned.

We had a great many miles of levee that were well above the flood in Louisiana, and the roads behind them were dry and all that could be desired. At other places the levees were low. But an average increase of elevation of 5 feet in Louisiana would be high enough to restrain any flood that would occur in the Mississippi. I do not believe levees need be so many feet above high water. They should be constructed with a view to the forces to which they are exposed. If the material is light and sandy the slopes should be made flat; if they are exposed to the action of the waves they should be given increased thickness; and if they are built across the head of long straight reaches, up which the wind may blow in storms, backing up the water and throwing heavy seas against them, then they should be given special increased height, and may often be properly built 3 or 4 feet higher than the average elevation of the line. This was the trouble at Morganza last spring. The levee was built a foot and a half above the high water of 1882. But during the severe storm which occurred at the very culmination of the flood, the water was backed up in the head of the reach until it rose to a height of 2½ feet above the 1882 mark, and consequently a foot and a half above the top of the levee. The levee had been hastily raised during the flood, but the new work was not able to resist the force of the high waves thrown against it by the storm, and it gave way in the night, and so the levee was broken.

Mr. BOATNER. What I want to get at is this. It strikes me that if there is any virtue in this outlet theory, it ought to have been developed in 1882 when the water was 150 miles wide in my district, and it escaped through that Atchafalaya country.

I would like you to state the difference in the carrying capacity and the amount of water which was delivered by the Atchafalaya at its mouth in 1882 and 1890.

Captain KINGMAN. There was very little difference.

Mr. BOATNER. In 1882 was not the country on either side of the Atchafalaya overflowed for miles?

Captain KINGMAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. BOATNER. The water was flowing wide-spread over the top of the levee?

Captain KINGMAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. BOATNER. And you say there was less country overflowed in southwest Louisiana last year, while the levees were practically intact in the northern part of the State, than in 1882, when the levees were down, and when this immense volume of water was escaping?

Captain KINGMAN. Yes, sir. Now, I want to point out the difference between overflow and discharge; it might be inferred that they were about the same thing, but they are not. Discharge is produced by confining the water to a comparatively narrow channel and permitting it to run off. When the river overflows, the water spreads through the woods and meets with trees and all sorts of obstructions which retard the velocity of its flow and greatly diminish the discharge. A great deal of water that escapes in this way never returns to the river, and never reaches the Gulf, but is held in lakes, ponds, and swamps, and finally disappears by evaporation.

Mr. BOATNER. In 1882 the levees of nearly the whole of East Carrol and Madison Parishes were down, and the water was flowing across into the Tensas and Macon, and both were high; they were pretty good streams. These were carrying water into the Ouachita River and the Black River, and these were carrying it into the Atchafalaya. These rivers were a great deal higher in 1882 than they were in 1890.

Captain KINGMAN. Yes, sir; the former were, but not the Atchafalaya.

Mr. BOATNER. I want to know, then, if there is any virtue in the outlet theory, with such an immense volume of water escaping, why it ought not to have relieved the country below the mouth of the Red River?

Digitized by Google

Captain KINGMAN. It ought, unquestionably.

Mr. BOATNER. Did it do so?

Captain KINGMAN. It did not, and never would do so. The best possible example of an outlet that we could have, and one that most resembles the one proposed by Captain Cowden and his followers is the Nita Crevasse. There was an outlet which discharged one-third of the water in the river. It divided, and the water flowed rapidly through the outlet. The waves were nearly as high as the ceiling of this room. This great body of water went dashing and rolling across the cleared and cultivated land, and to the eye seemed greater than the river below. It went across to Lake Maurepas and into Lake Ponchartrain and escaped into the Gulf. The yellow water was visible for 50 or 60 miles along the Gulf coast.

The CHAIRMAN. One-third of the flow of the Mississippi escaped in this way?

Captain KINGMAN. Yes, sir; and never returned to the Mississippi again, and we know what the effect of this loss of water upon the channel below was. We know that there was a loss of as much as 25 per cent. of the effective area of cross-sections and consequent capacity of discharge, while the reduction of the flood height was trifling, and not at all in proportion to the amount of water taken from the river.

Mr. BOATNER. Did it have any effect on the rise of the river at points above the city of New Orleans?

Captain KINGMAN. In the immediate vicinity, at College Point about 5 miles below the break, a place where we had a gauge established, it prevented the river from rising any more after the break occurred. The flood would have gone about 2 feet higher at College Point, had it not been for the crevasse.

This was the place where the greatest relief ought to have been felt. General Comstock questions my deductions and thinks that the relief afforded at this place was as much as 3 feet. There is a difference of about a foot in our conclusions. But whether the maximum relief was 2 or 3 feet, it was small in comparison with the amount of water that was escaping. The rise and fall of the river at College Point amounts to about 24 feet, and since the banks are quite steep and the channel deep, it would seem that the reduction of height below the crevasse ought to have been at first something like 8 feet. But it was not, and we know that the channel was filling up below the outlet and reducing its capacity to correspond to the amount of water that it had to carry, and we know that if this crevasse had been kept open long enough as a permanent outlet, that the channel below would in time have been no better able to carry two-thirds of the flood volume than it before was to carry the whole volume, and that then the reduction of the flood level below, by reason of this outlet, would have been zero, if indeed there was not an increase of flood height. At New Orleans the beneficial effect was about a foot. At Plaquemine, about 50 miles above the break, the effect was absolutely nothing. The river rose and fell there just as it did at points above, and the hydrograph shows no indications of the effect of the crevasse.

Mr. STOCKDALE. You say it prevented the river from rising 2 feet, 5 miles below the break?

Captain KINGMAN. Yes, sir; but it had very little effect immediately above the break.

Mr. STOCKDALE. Was that on account of the slackening of the velocity?

Captain KINGMAN. Yes, sir; one of the most marked features of a crevasse is the reduction of the velocity of the current in the river below it. I recollect that during the flood, when the Morganza levee broke, I started across the river to visit the crevasse in a small boat, with two negro men who had been rowing me about nearly every day for 3 or 4 weeks, and before we could hear the sound of the crevasse these men exclaimed, "How the current done check up," showing that the change in velocity was so great as to be readily noticed by anyone.

Digitized by Google

The CHAIRMAN. I wish you would state the effect of this Nita crevasse on the floods above.

Captain KINGMAN. It had very little effect. At Plaquemine, 50 miles above, the effect was insignificant.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Was it felt at Baton Rouge?

Captain KINGMAN. It was not felt at all at Baton Rouge, and it is not reasonable to suppose that it would have been felt there. I do not see what difference it could make at Baton Rouge what becomes of the water after it has gone 70 or 80 miles below it.

Mr. BOATNER. If it ran over a precipice it would make no difference?

Captain KINGMAN. I do not see that it would.

Mr. BOATNER. Captain Leathers represents the effect of the jetties at the mouth of the river to be that the water was higher at Cairo, and he also says that the bottom has come up about 6 feet at Natchez.

Captain KINGMAN. Captain Leathers gets causes and effects mixed. He argues that if the river rises, say 50 feet at Vicksburg, 18 feet at New Orleans and only 2 feet at the head of the passes; and if you cause the river in any way to rise 1 foot, or 50 per cent. higher at the passes, then it will necessarily go 9 feet higher at New Orleans, and 25 feet higher at Vicksburg. Now I agree with Captain Leathers to this extent, that if you raised the water a foot at the head of the passes, by pouring water into the river at Vicksburg, you would have to raise its surface something like 25 feet there, and perhaps as much as 9 feet at New Orleans; but if you raised the surface at the head of the passes, as is actually the case, by contraction work designed to increase the scour, the effect could not possibly extend but very few miles up the stream. The effect is as different, in the two cases, as that of pushing and pulling on a rope.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Was not the Bonnet Carré crevasse open for many years?

Captain KINGMAN. It was.

Mr. BLANCHARD. During the time it was open were there not some disastrous overflows in the valley of the Mississippi?

Captain KINGMAN. Yes, sir. It was closed about 1885.

Mr. BLANCHARD. It was open for 10 years.

Captain KINGMAN. Yes, for a number of years. It had been closed when I went down there.

Mr. BOATNER. It was open during the disastrous floods of 1882 and 1884?

Captain KINGMAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. BLANCHARD. It was an immense crevasse?

Captain KINGMAN. It was.

Mr. BLANCHARD. I am told that it poured such enormous quantities of water into Lake Ponchartrain that it drove out the oysters and salt-water fish?

Captain KINGMAN. It did.

The CHAIRMAN. The present system of levees, as I understand you, is generally on the banks of the stream?

Captain KINGMAN. From Baton Rouge to New Orleans the levees are all very near the river bank; above this they are sometimes built at considerable distances from the river.

Digitized by Google

The CHAIRMAN. You advise their construction as near the bank as possible for the purpose of protecting the greatest amount of land from overflow; and you believe that the nearer they are constructed to the channel the more beneficial the effect would be on low-water navigation?

Captain KINGMAN. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. I would like to know if it is your opinion, as an engineer, that it would improve high-water navigation to have a system constructed of a sufficient height and strength to hold the flood water?

Captain KINGMAN. I think it would.

The CHAIRMAN. Would it scour the bottom of the river?

Captain KINGMAN. I think so.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you not think that scouring takes place at low water instead of high water?

Captain KINGMAN. At certain localities it does, but I think there is very much more erosion of the bottom at high water than at low water. At certain places, as described by General Comstock, where at high water the river has an abnormally large water way, in which, of necessity, the velocity of the current is less than its average velocity, it then deposits a portion of its suspended material, and tries, in obedience to the law which governs it, to reduce its water way to the average size. The material forms a sand bar across the river, and, as the water falls, there finally comes a stage when the area of water way over this bar is less than that of the average section of the river at that stage. The fall is then concentrated on the bar, and the velocity finally becomes great enough to cut a small channel through it, the material being dropped in the deep places below. This is the kind of scour that takes place at low water. It does not amount to much; it does not increase the carrying capacity of the river and adds nothing to its value as a drain; it is simply the effort of the low-water river to undo some of the mischief that the misdirected powers of the flood have wrought.

The CHAIRMAN. Have you made any effort to ascertain where the velocity of the stream is the greater, at the surface or at the bottom?

Captain KINGMAN. Yes, sir. It is greatest near the surface.

The CHAIRMAN. In what ratio does the velocity decrease as you go down?

Captain KINGMAN. I could not give you that. The mean velocity is found at about six-tenths of the depth.

The CHAIRMAN. If the velocity grows less the nearer you get to the bottom of the stream, would not the velocity of the river during a flood be less at the bottom than during low water?

Captain KINGMAN. No, sir; because the mean velocity is so much greater during a flood that it would more than make up for the increase of depth.

The CHAIRMAN. In other words, the velocity of the water on the bottom of the channel, when the river is at a flood, would not be less than the velocity at a low stage?

Captain KINGMAN. No, sir; not in general. At some particular locality it might.

The CHAIRMAN. In your judgment the velocity on the bottom of the channel would be greater at high water than during low water?

Captain KINGMAN. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Have you made any estimates of the cost of the construction of this system of levees as perfectly as has been indicated of sufficient height and strength to hold flood waters?

Digitized by Google

Captain KINGMAN. I think somewhere about $9,000,000 would be ample for that purpose.

The CHAIRMAN. And when once completed, what expenditures would be necessary annually to preserve them in good condition?

Captain KINGMAN. I should suppose $200,000 or $300,000 per annum would be sufficient. It might vary with different years. After a very unfavorable year, when the levees had been severely taxed, it might require a greater sum.

The CHAIRMAN. Could not the State and local authorities, if necessary, keep them in repair after completion at a much less annual expense than they are now subjected to?

Captain KINGMAN. They could at a very small fraction of the present expense. It would not be a severe tax. If they devoted the same time and effort to the care of the levees that the inhabitants of New York State do to fighting the snow in winter they could keep them in perfect condition.

Mr. BRICKNER. You said a while ago that when the river was full, and in the case of floods when it got to the top of its banks it flowed out and spread over the country, and the levee system if it were built in the shape of the river, would cause the stream to continue its regular flow. Without that I suppose there would be bars made in the river?

Captain KINGMAN. I think that would be the tendency.

Mr. BRICKNER. Is there any system known that will prevent these bars from forming in the channel without levees?

Captain KINGMAN. I know of none.

The CHAIRMAN. You spoke a while ago of the effect of this crevasse, where one-third of the flow of the Mississippi was discharged through it, and that it had no perceptible effect on the flood waters above. Would you think it possible to construct an outlet system which would prevent overflows in the river above it?

Captain KINGMAN. I do not think that if you would divert the entire water of the river into some other direction, or if it were to pour over a precipice it could have any considerable effect 50 miles above. I do not see how it possibly could.

Mr. STOCKDALE. When that water went into the Lake Ponchartrain and through the Rigolets into the Gulf, I understand it flowed with considerable velocity?

Captain KINGMAN. Yes, sir; it did.

Mr. STOCKDALE. I know from observation that this crevasse injured and threatened to destroy the fish and oyster industry along there; now, can you tell in what direction this water flowed after it reached the Gulf?

Captain KINGMAN. I think the tendency of the water would be toward the deep water of the Gulf. I think if it had continued long enough it would have opened up a sort of channel for itself, something like its present one.

Mr. STOCKDALE. The water is not deep in Lake Pontchartrain?

Captain KINGMAN. No, sir; it would soon fill up the lake with deposits, make a number of channels through it, forming islands, upon which willows would grow.

Mr. BOATNER. The mouth of the river now is the nearest point to deep water from a point opposite Lake Borgne?

Captain KINGMAN. I am of the opinion that it is.

Digitized by Google

Mr. BOATNER. I believe it is conceded that the Mississippi built its banks below that point?

Captain KINGMAN. Yes, sir; the banks are of its own formation.

Mr. BOATNER. If the river were diverted at that point, would not one of two consequences follow; either the river would have to cut out a channel to deep water, or if it did not do that, the deposit of sediment which would be held where the water of the river met the water of the Gulf would eventually close that opening?

Captain KINGMAN. I think the latter would be what would happen.

Mr. BOATNER. What is the average depth of the Mississippi River from the point opposite Lake Borgne to the Head of the Jetties?

Captain KINGMAN. I should suppose that a line drawn along the deepest portion would show an average of 130 feet. The mean depth would be less, probably 60 feet.

Mr. BOATNER. I would ask you if the river itself is not deeper than any portion of the Gulf on either side of it, within a distance of, say, half a mile of the river?

Captain KINGMAN. It is very much deeper.

Mr. BOATNER. Then the water in the sea opposite these banks is much shallower than in the bed of the river?

Captain KINGMAN. It is very much shallower.

The CHAIRMAN. In your judgment, what effect would it have on the jetties to divert any considerable portion of the waters by an outlet?

Captain KINGMAN. I think it would impair the usefulness of the jetties. The condition there now is one of equilibrium. We have just enough water to maintain the channel through them in its present condition. If any portion of the water were taken away, what was left would be insufficient, and shoaling in the channel would certainly result, which would tend to impair the navigable water-way.

The CHAIRMAN. In your judgment it would destroy the efficacy of the works at the jetties?

Captain KINGMAN. Yes, sir; if the quantity diverted was large.

Mr. STOCKDALE. What is the difference between the Mississipp's surface height at low-water mark and tide level?

Captain KINGMAN. It varies; the Gulf tide is only about 2 feet. On the lower part of the river extreme low water is about the same as mean Gulf level. It is 2½ feet higher at Red River. At New Orleans the tide rises a little when the river is very low. It even rises slightly at the mouth of the Red River.

There was one point which I do not wish to omit, and that is to say, that I do not think it would be advisable to have a levee system below the forts. When you get down to the forts, the water in the river is but little above the water in the Gulf, and the land is about as liable to be overflowed by salt water as by fresh water.

I should say that it would not be desirable to extend the levees below the forts.

Mr. STOCKDALE. How far are the forts above the mouth of the river?

Captain KINGMAN. Thirty or forty miles. I also am of the opinion that, in the interest of channel improvement the levees should be made continuous on both sides of the river between Vicksburg and Baton Rouge, and should be kept on lines parallel to the general direction of the river. If money was not available for this, then much good could be done by some spur levees built out from the hills, and carried along the axes of the points, so as to prevent the water in time of flood from flowing parallel to the hills, and compel it to conform to the general direction of the river. But since the question of protecting large areas of land near the river is so important, I would recommend, that this work be deferred until all of the large basins are completely and satisfactorily closed.

Digitized by Google

IMPROVEMENTS OF THE MISSISSIPPI RIVER,
Washington, D. C., January 9, 1891.

The committee met at 10 a. m.

Present, the chairman (Mr. Burrows), and Messrs. Stockdale, Boatner, and Brickner; also Hon. T. C. Catchings, a Representative from the State of Mississippi.

STATEMENT OF JUDGE R. S. TAYLOR, MEMBER OF THE MISSISSIPPI RIVER COMMISSION.

The CHAIRMAN. You are a resident of the State of Indiana, I believe?

Mr. TAYLOR. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. And you are connected with the Mississippi River Commission?

Mr. TAYLOR. Yes, sir; I am, and have been a member of the Commission since 1881.

The CHAIRMAN. Have you visited the Mississippi River as a member of that Commission at different times?

Mr. TAYLOR. I have, very frequently. I have been over the whole length of it within a few weeks, from St. Louis to the Gulf.

The CHAIRMAN. Are you familiar with all the plans for its improvement?

Mr. TAYLOR. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. The matter we have directly in hand is the question of the necessity of constructing levees in connection with the other works or methods adopted by the Commission for the improvement of the Mississippi River, and we would be glad to have your views upon that question, as to the necessity of constructing levees throughout the entire length of the river as a means for the help of low-water navigation of the stream.

Mr. TAYLOR. At the time that I became a member of the Commission, that subject was under active discussion in that body itself, in Congress, and in the country at large. It was made the subject of careful investigation by the Commission by every means which was within its power. Wherever crevasses occurred, or had occurred, under such circumstances that light would be thrown upon the subject by surveys and measurements of the river channel, that course was taken. The result of all the discussion and examination was that the conclusion was reached by the Commission, and embodied in its reports to Congress from year to year, that the complete improvement of the channel for navigation required the control of the flood discharge of the river, as well as the low-water discharge. I think that subject has been settled in the Commission by the judgment of a large majority of its members, as not more than one or two at one time have taken a different view for 10 years past.

The CHAIRMAN. Of how many members does the Commission consist?

Mr. TAYLOR. Seven members.

The CHAIRMAN. And you say that certainly 5 of the 7 believe levee construction to be essential to the improvement of navigation?

Mr. TAYLOR, Yes, sir; I think I may say that is true at all times since I have been a member of the Commission. The observations which were detailed by Captain Kingman yesterday in relation to the Nita Crevasse have been made over and over again at other crevasses and on other occasions for 10 years past, and there has never been a single instance in which they have failed to disclose the same sort of result. There has never been a crevasse that has failed to diminish the cross section or available bed of the river below the crevasse, where measurements have been made. There was an old crevasse at Bonne Carre, not many miles above New Orleans, made some time about 1874. It had partially closed up. It had been a great crevasse, but an immense volume of drift had floated in and made a great dam across the crevasse, so that its discharge was probably in 1882 less than it had been at first; but still the discharge continued at less than flood stage of the river. It was closed about 1885 by the joint action of the State of Louisiana, a railroad company, and the Commission. Before the closure of the crevasse a survey was made of the river below it, and another within a year afterwards, and it was found that the closing of the crevasse increased the cross section of the river below about 15 per cent., and that was an old crevasse which had been open for at least 10 years.

Mr. CATCHINGS. You say that when you first noticed the process of closure by the river it was still going on?

Mr. TAYLOR. Yes, sir.

Mr. CATCHINGS. And it would have closed itself in time?

Mr. TAYLOR. It would have closed itself in time. It would have taken a long time, however. It was only a short distance to Lake Pontchartrain, and it had reached a point at which the discharge was less, and consequently the process of closure slower; but undoubtedly it would have healed itself in time. A large part of the space occupied by the crevasse had reached the point at which willows were growing upon it. When that point is reached the deposit of sediment goes on more rapidly.

Mr. BRICKNER. You think it would have been closed without the driftwood?

Mr. TAYLOR. It would not have been closed for a long time without the drift. It could have closed only by filling up with soil, and that is a slow process.

Mr. BRICKNER. Continual overflow would have taken place?

Mr. TAYLOR. I expect it would not have closed itself in that way until it had filled up Lake Pontchartrain.

Mr. STOCKDALE. I understand that it had raised the swamp about a foot?

Mr. TAYLOR. Yes, sir; it raised it more than that near the river.

Mr. STOCKDALE. And made a pass near the railroad?

Mr. TAYLOR. Yes, sir. With regard to the effect of levees upon the channel at low water, it is difficult to make a precise statement of the relation between the control of the flood volume and the low-water channel. To my mind, the whole process of reasoning was always a very short one, and something like this: The Mississippi River makes itself, in every particular from Cairo to the Gulf. It makes its channel partly by scour and partly by piling up the earth on the sides. Its power to do this depends upon the volume and velocity of its water. It is a bigger river at low water than other rivers because it is a bigger river at high water than others. Its high-water stage is the time when it does the work, and makes the channel through which the low-water river flows. It seems to me that any practical method of improving the river must rest upon a careful study of its own natural methods, and an imitation of them just as far as possible by artificial appliances.

In the changes which have been brought about in the upper valley and along the bank of the river itself, artificial conditions have been introduced which have in great degree changed the operation of the natural forces of the river. In a state of nature, the banks of the river were covered with a very dense growth of trees and underbrush, which formed filters which rapidly removed the sediment from the overflowing water, and so built up the banks along the river pretty nearly to the level of its present ordinary floods. I think it would have been found, if the subject could have been investigated at that time, that the natural banks of the river were very nearly upon the surface of its ordinary floods, just like the surface of a sea marsh. Of course there would be extraordinary floods which would overtop the banks somewhat. I can not help believing that the clearing the forests and underbrush from the banks has interfered with the river's natural process of channel making and that the building of levees is only a restoration of the natural conditions of the river itself. It is giving back to the river in the form of artificial banks what has been taken away by cutting down the forests and clearing away the brush.

The CHAIRMAN. Have the floods in recent years been more disastrous than formerly?

Mr. TAYLOR. They have been greater in volume, and would have been much more disastrous had it not been for the protection of the levees. I do not think there can be any question that the improvement of the upper valley of the Mississippi has contributed, and is now contributing, to increase the floods in the river. I think it is impossible to doubt that.

I grew up in Indiana, in a part of the State which is tributary to the Mississippi, and which is flat, and was in my early days covered with a heavy growth of forests. It was our usual experience at that time to have a thin layer of water on more than half the surface of the land from the close of winter until late in the spring. The ground was covered with a thick layer of leaves, and the surface of the land was so nearly level that the rain and snow laid on the ground for months. We did not expect to find dry land in the level woods until, perhaps, in May. I have watched the progress of that part of the State. It is now pretty well cleared off. It has been drained, and the water that falls upon the land now disappears within a few days after it falls.

It was estimated by our county auditor within a few years past that 1,600 miles of drain had been made in one year in the county in which I live. That process has been going on with great rapidity in Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, and all the States in the basin of the Mississippi River. That causes the surplus water of the winter and spring to be delivered to the Mississippi with greater rapidity than it would have been delivered in the course of nature. Taking these two causes together, the increase in the rapidity with which the surplus water is drained from the valley and turned into the channel, and the clearing of the banks of the lower river, it seems to me that the increase of floods in recent years is fully accounted for. We are changing the conditions under which the river does its work, and to restrain its floods by levees is simply going back to the order of nature.

The CHAIRMAN. How would you construct these levees with reference to the bank of the stream to produce the most desirable results?

Mr. TAYLOR. I suppose that will have to be reached by a compromise between advantages and difficulties in two directions. The places where they are the most desirable and most beneficial, both for the protection of the lands and improvement of the channel, is right upon the river bank, following its course as closely as possible. If it were possible to put them there without unreasonable expense, that would be the way to do the work, beyond a doubt. On the other hand, the difficulty of maintaining levees near to the bank in the upper parts of the river is very great, in consequence of the danger of their destruction by the caving of the banks. To adopt the other course, and place them so far away from the river bank as to insure their safety against caving, would leave out a great deal of the best land, and in a great measure defeat the purpose of levees in respect to the concentration of the flood in the channel. In order to have the best effect upon the channel, the flood ought to follow the same course, as nearly as possible, as the low water does. It does not seem to me that either of these courses can be adopted by any hard and fast rule. As much as you can say, I think, is, that they ought to be placed as near to the bank as you can place them with safety, taking all things into account.

The CHAIRMAN. You say there are some difficulties in the Upper Mississippi in the way of placing the levees on the bank. What are those difficulties?

Mr. TAYLOR. They arise from a number of causes. The banks of the upper river are generally composed of a coarse material which crumbles away easily. As you go below Red River the soil changes. It is of a finer material, more compact, and harder, and caves more slowly. Then the velocity of the stream changes very much. The fall decreases as you go downward. What is still more important, is that in the upper parts of the river the rise and fall extends through a range of 40 to 50 feet, while in the lower parts the oscillation diminishes to nothing at the Gulf.

The CHAIRMAN. Would not the building of revetments on the banks of the stream in the Upper Mississippi tend to protect the banks from caving?

Mr. TAYLOR. Certainly. You probably would have to put in revetments in some places in all parts of the stream, in order to be secure against caving. In the upper parts, in order to build levees upon the bank, you would have to protect them by revetment along a good deal of its course; not all.

The CHAIRMAN. If you build the levees back from the bank in the Upper Mississippi, say half a mile or a mile, if you please, if there were any great erosion going on, you would have to protect against that, in order to protect the levee?

Mr. TAYLOR. Yes, sir; in places. So much depends upon circumstances that you can not state any general rule. There are places in the Upper Mississippi River where levees would be safe within 1,000 feet for 10 years, while at other places they would not be safe within 2,000 feet for 2 years. In determining their distance from the river, reference will have to be had to all these circumstances. In some places for long distances they can be brought quite near the river, and in other places they will have to stand back quite a considerable distance, unless the banks in front are protected.

Mr. BOATNER. At places there are low banks, a kind of batture, between the high land and the river. In such places the levee can be placed on the high bank of the river.

Mr. TAYLOR. Nothing but an entire reversal of the river's curves would produce caving in a case like that.

Mr. CATCHINGS. There are two other factors; first, that by keeping near the river you can make use of the levees already existing, and second, the expenses would be less, as the land would be higher.

Mr. TAYLOR. Yes, sir; looking to the question of economy alone, there are some places where it would undoubtedly be wise to go to a very considerable expense in protecting the bank in order to make the levee safe. There is such a place at Lake Concordia. Lake Concordia is an old, abandoned bed of the river, and extends a number of miles back, and the land around it is of the finest character. It is elevated and rich, and occupied by some of the finest cotton plantations of the South. The land between the lake and the river is high, but perhaps only 2,000 feet wide. It is now occupied by a levee, but there is caving going on a short distance above it. If the caving is allowed to go on until it cuts into the lake, there is no resort except to build a new line of levee behind the lake at a large expense and great loss of valuable land. There is a case where, without doubt, it would be wise economy to protect the bank, even at a large expense. We have at Lake Bolivar, in Mississippi, exactly a similar case. There was a high and expensive piece of levee between the old lake and the river, and to let that go would require a new line behind the lake, which would be very expensive. We have spent $125,000 for the protection of that bank, and expect to spend more.

Mr. BOATNER. Has the Commission directed revetment work to be put in there?

Mr. TAYLOR. Yes, sir.

Mr. BOATNER. And also at Lake Concordia?

Mr. TAYLOR. We have not commenced work at Lake Concordia.

Mr. BOATNER. Did you make any estimate of how much it would cost?

Mr. TAYLOR. No; not any close estimate.

Mr. BOATNER. I tried to get that in the bill, but I could not do it.

Mr. TAYLOR. I am free to say that that is a point where the principle of protecting the levee has strong application.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you think there is any difficulty in the way of constructing a system of levees of sufficient width and strength to hold the flood waters of the river?

Mr. TAYLOR. I agree entirely with Captain Kingman in the statement which he made yesterday that the flood of last year was, if not the largest in all of its aspects, the next to the largest which is on record, and that the levees as they then were were almost sufficient to hold that flood.

The CHAIRMAN. Have you at any time made an estimate of the probable cost of constructing such a system of levees?

Mr. TAYLOR. Such an estimate was made by the Commission at its last meeting, and is embodied in a report recently transmitted to the Secretary of War.

The CHAIRMAN. What was the date of that report?

Mr. TAYLOR. December 1, 1890.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you remember the conclusions, and the result of that estimate as to cost?

Mr. TAYLOR. It was made up in several parts, and I am not sure that

Digitized by Google

I retain in my mind all the figures. I have not referred to that subject since making up the report; but I can give you my recollection.

The CHAIRMAN. I do not care for the various items, but only the sum total.

Mr. TAYLOR. My remembrance is that the estimate was for a system having an average grade of 5 feet above the highest known water from Cairo to the Gulf, and that the total amount, excluding the St. Francis front, was $12,000,000. We had before us the materials for making a reasonably close estimate as to all that part of the river except the St. Francis front. As to that, we did not have as accurate and reliable data as for the rest of it. There are no continuous lines of levee upon that front. The laws of Missouri provide no methods of taxation, so far as I am aware, for the construction of levees, and we have never found it possible to enlist any considerable amount of interest or activity in the work of building levees among the people of that part of the river. My remembrance is that our estimate of the expenses of building levees in that part of the river, of the same grade, was $4,000,000.

The CHAIRMAN. That was at the St. Francis front?

Mr. TAYLOR. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Would you think it advisable for the National Government to carry this work on exclusively, or in coöperation with the States bordering on them?

Mr. TAYLOR. Well, that depends somewhat upon what is meant by the word "advisable."

The CHAIRMAN. I mean whether, if the National Government should complete the work alone, the people would not be indifferent to the work; and if done in connection with riparian owners, would it not be more advantageous and more certain to be kept up?

Mr. TAYLOR. Upon that subject I have very decided opinions, based upon some pretty extended experience. When the Commission began its work, it undertook as objective points the closure of the Yazoo front and the Tensas front. The reasons for that rested partly in the fact that there were at that time already extensive lines of levees in those districts, and there was a considerable amount of readiness and means on the part of the people to assist in the work. Along those fronts there was a good deal of bad navigation. The channels wanted improving along there. Above those parts of the river, along the St. Francis front, there was no possibility, apparently, of securing any efficient local coöperation. Below those parts of the river, although the local communities were strong and active, there was no bad navigation.

The question of building levees was always left by Congress in a way to throw a certain sort of peculiar responsibility upon the Commission. The appropriation acts—I think without exception after the first one—contained a clause forbidding the expenditure of money in building levees for the protection of lands from overflow; but always with a proviso attached, that the Commission might expend the money in building levees if it were necessary in its judgment as part of its plan to deepen the channel. The Commission always informed Congress in its reports that it was a part of its plan to deepen the channel by building levees, and so felt at liberty to expend part of the money appropriated in that way where there was most reason to believe that it would have the most effect in deepening the channel. It would not do any good to the channel, or at least very little good, to build a short and detached line of levee. There was not much to be gained except by a complete closure of an entire front. Those fronts on the Mississippi River are each nearly 300 miles long. The St. Francis is almost exactly that; the Yazoo is a little more, and the Tensas and Atchafalaya are also a little more. To build 300 miles of levee with the means at our disposal was impossible, and hence there was no way for us to do anything in that direction, except to put such means as we had in combination with means to be raised by the communities on the banks. We adopted at the beginning, and followed up continuously, the policy of expending so much money as we had to expend in the erection of levees in those places, everything else being equal, where we could get the largest local assistance. I am clearly of the opinion that that policy has worked out very great good for the whole valley.

The flood of 1882 left the people of the valley in a state of almost entire despair. It had overflowed the valley from Cairo to the Gulf. Our examinations made after that flood showed crevasses made to the extent of about 83 miles. The people were about ready to give up and quit the valley. In the summer following that flood Congress made an appropriation of $4,123,000. Out of that we expended $1,200,000 upon the levees. The prospect of that aid stimulated the people to the most extraordinary exertions. I think that as a whole the people of the Yazoo and the Tensas fronts did all that they possibly could do. That policy was pursued steadily from 1882 to 1890. The Commission during that entire time expended about $3,000,000 upon levees, and the people raised and expended nearly $9,000,000. The result was that the levees were put in better condition than they ever had been before, and the proof of that is to be found in the fact that the great flood of 1890 did comparatively little damage.

The CHAIRMAN. Within what time did the people contribute $9,000,000?

Mr. TAYLOR. Since the flood of 1882.

The CHAIRMAN. They have contributed to the construction of levees between $8,000,000 and $9,000,000 since then?

Mr. TAYLOR. Yes, sir; since then. I think the people are better off for having made those contributions than they would be if the Government had done all the work. It has given them somewhat of a sense of self-reliance, a higher public spirit, and more nerve and energy than they ever had before. They have learned to fight floods with more energy than they ever displayed before. There was never before in the history of the country anything like such a contest made as during the last flood. The people patroled hundreds of miles of levee for days and weeks, fighting the rising flood to the last inch, and saved themselves by it.

The CHAIRMAN. And that was done by the people themselves?

Mr. TAYLOR. By the people themselves? When the water reached the top of the levee they would add a few inches—a sand-bag line.

The CHAIRMAN. They were fighting for their lives and their homes?

Mr. TAYLOR. Yes, sir; fighting for their lives, their homes, and their property. I think that any appropriation made by Congress for building levees on the Mississippi River ought to be coupled with the condition that the communities interested should also contribute. To say what method of contribution shall be provided is a very difficult matter. I do not think it could be done by any fixed rule of proportion. The means of the people to contribute vary exceedingly. If you take a country like the Yazoo Basin, which extends back 40 miles from the river and which is filled with population, they can contribute proportionately ten times as much in the Laconia circle, where the area which can be protected is small and the levee is very expensive. I do not think that any just apportionment could be made otherwise than by the judgment of some Department of the Government having discretion to act according to the equities and the circumstances of each particular case.

Mr. BOATNER. Would you recommend any change of the policy which has heretofore prevailed?

Mr. TAYLOR. I do not think that any other method is possible.

The CHAIRMAN. Should it be left to the Commission or not?

Mr. TAYLOR. I do not know that that is for me to say. It is not a responsibility to be desired. I only say that it would have to be in the hands of some impartial tribunal representing the Government.

The CHAIRMAN: What do you think of this provision of the bill?

Which said sum shall be expended, under the direction of the Secretary of War, in accordance with the plans, specifications, and recommendations of the Mississippi River Commission, approved by the Chief of Engineers: Provided, That not more than three millions of dollars shall be expended during any one year: Provided further, That the said works shall be constructed and protected in co-operation with the riparian States and local authorities.

Could that be made more definite?

Mr. TAYLOR. I do not know that it could. I suppose that the effect of a proper construction of it would be to give to the Secretary of War absolute discretion as to how much of the appropriation he would spend in this part and how much in that part; and that it would authorize him to be guided in the exercise of that discretion by such equities as he might consider should control.

The CHAIRMAN. Would you empower him to withhold any expenditure in the States bordering on the river if the inhabitants and riparian owners did not contribute anything?

Mr. TAYLOR. I should think so. That is just what has been done always without any particular authority of law.

Mr. BRICKNER. You think that is the best policy?

Mr. TAYLOR. I do not think that any other could be adopted.

Mr. CATCHINGS. I would add these words, "Shall be constructed in the discretion of the Secretary of War." There might be cases where a little gap would be needed.

Mr. BOATNER. Coöperation of the authorities does not always mean money contributions.

Mr. CATCHINGS. That is what it might mean.

Mr. BOATNER. It might in some instances; and in others it might be that other kinds of coöperation might be required not involving money; for instance, granting right of way or police assistance.

Mr. CATCHINGS. The Government has never acquired any rights of way for its levees.

Mr. BOATNER. I was going to ask Judge Taylor if he did not think it would be advisable to incorporate a provision in the bill requesting, or demanding, of the States that they should cede jurisdiction to the Government over such ground as was necessary for the construction of these levees, and to incorporate a provision making it a criminal offense. for anyone to cut or interfere with the levees.

Mr. TAYLOR. So far there has not been found any practical necessity for that. There has never been any friction between the Government and the people in regard to that.

Mr. BOATNER. There was an important levee cut this last year in Arkansas.

Mr. TAYLOR. To that extent there was friction between the Government and the fellow that cut that levee. I was not thinking of that, but of the right of way.

Digitized by Google

Mr. BOATNER. There is a conflict of right of way now in my district. The engineer there has laid out a levee, or marked one, and a contract was made. A party who owns a little piece of ground, 40 or 50 acres, sold it nominally to a citizen of another State, and he has gone into court and enjoined the construction of that levee.

Mr. TAYLOR. Enjoined the officer of the Government?

Mr. BOATNER. I think so. At any rate, he could have enjoined the officer of the Government.

Mr. TAYLOR. What I meant was this: that so far as I am aware the people of the riparian localities have always manifested the utmost friendliness and willingness to coöperate in respect to the matter of the location of levees, or as to police supervision, or right of way. I I am not aware that we have ever had any trouble in that respect.

Mr. BOATNER. A contumacious individual might give trouble and delay.

Mr. TAYLOR. That is true, and I can see how it might, in entering upon an extensive system of levee construction, be desirable for the United States Government to have certain jurisdiction.

Mr. CATCHINGS. Rights of way have been acquired by the Government through levee boards. Levee boards have condemned property, if necessary, and paid for it. The Government has never paid a cent for the right of way.

Mr. TAYLOR. I think not.

The CHAIRMAN. Are all these levees built on private lands?

Mr. CATCHINGS. All of them. There have been regular condemnatory proceedings.

Mr. BOATNER. In Louisiana, the State has the right of way over any and all lands.

Mr. TAYLOR. I believe the laws of Louisiana do not recognize any right of private property owners as standing in the way of the construction of levees.

Mr. BOATNER. The United States court has held that a party shall be paid for ground occupied by levees.

The CHAIRMAN. It is not usual for a resident owner of land to give it up, I suppose?

Mr. BOATNER. There have been only about two cases of contumacy.

Mr. CATCHINGS. The Government has a right to condemn it. If it is wild land, the right of way is granted; but in some cases thousands of dollars of damage might be inflicted upon land.

Mr. BOATNER. If the injury is not caused by the caving off of the other levee.

Mr. CATCHINGS. The courts have taken a different view of it; and owners have been paid thousands of dollars.

The CHAIRMAN. These are built without getting the right of way in any case.

Mr. STOCKDALE. The owner gets paid for his property.

Mr. TAYLOR. The justice of paying private citizens for property taken for levee purposes is proper and perfectly plain.

The CHAIRMAN. Before the levee is constructed, the right of way is obtained?

Mr. TAYLOR. It is in Mississippi, but not in Louisiana.

The CHAIRMAN. Have you built levees there on private lamds?

Mr. TAYLOR. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. May you not have a suit brought for damages?

Digitized by Google

Mr. TAYLOR. We have done just what the State authorities have done.

Mr. BOATNER. According to the laws of Louisiana, at an early period levees were constructed according to specifications of the levee inspector, and the party was compelled to repair them whenever directed to do so by the levee inspector. If he failed to comply, they were repaired by the inspector at his cost, and it operated as a first lien, or mortgage, on the property. According to the law of that State, all property which was acquired was acquired subject to that provision in reference to constructing and maintaining levees. The whole line of levees from the mouth of Red River down to New Orleans was constructed by the riparian owners.

The CHAIRMAN. Have you studied the system of what is known as Captain Cowden's outlets?

Mr. TAYLOR. I have.

The CHAIRMAN. I would like you to give your judgment to the committee as to what effect it would have upon the navigation of the stream, and whether it would relieve the flood waters to any considerable extent?

Mr. TAYLOR. I think by this time it has become as clear as anything can be that an outlet in the sense in which that word is commonly used, will not only afford very little and temporary relief in a limited location, but will in the end greatly aggravate the mischief which it is designed to prevent. It is easy to see how, when a river is brimful and the water is pouring down from above, that a man's first thought would be to give relief by letting the water out. The error I think grows out of the fact that people fail to remember that a flood in the Mississippi is not merely water, but a mixture of water and earth, and that the earth is contained in the water in transportation in such quantities that if you do not hurry it along with all the energy which the river has, it will very soon stop up the river's pathway.

I made a little calculation some time ago which surprised me very much, although I have been familiar with the subject for a number of years. If you could take the Mississippi River in its ordinary flood and stretch a filter across it which would remove all the sediment from the water without obstructing its flow, you would build a solid dam across the river 1 foot thick in 8 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. From the bed of the river up?

Mr. TAYLOR. From the bottom of the river clear to the top—a foot thick in 8 minutes. Enough sediment goes by in 8 minutes to make a dam a foot thick clear across the river. There is no way to keep the river from being stopped up except to hurry that material along. The very moment you do anything to weaken the carrying capacity of the river it begins to let its load fall, and so block up its own pathway.

The CHAIRMAN. Then the putting in of a cut-off would lessen the velocity of the current?

Mr. TAYLOR. Outlet, you mean?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes, an outlet would lessen the current below, and the river would deposit this sediment?

Mr. TAYLOR. It would begin to let the load fall right away. There is no doubt about that.

Mr. BOATNER. Has any instance been known in which that was not the fact?

Mr. TAYLOR. Not one.

The CHAIRMAN. Then the outlet system would have the tendency to fill up the river below?

Digitized by Google

Mr. TAYLOR. Yes, sir; and by the time the next flood came it would rise higher than it ever did before with the same discharge. If you were to split the Mississippi into two rivers, the two could not carry the water as well as one does now. If you could divide it into twenty-five rivers they could not carry the water as well as the one now does.

Mr. BRICKNER. It would lose its proportionate strength, would it not?

Mr. TAYLOR. Yes, sir. The old maxim of "in union there is strength" is not so clearly exemplified in anything else as it is in the case of moving water.

The rain that falls on a field flows over its surface without making a visible impression. Concentrate the rain in one spot, and it will plow a canal. If you turn the hose of a fire engine upon a man, it will knock him down, but if you split it up into spray it will only give him a bath. There is no way to carry the water of the Mississippi to the sea better than it is being carried to-day.

There was a point which came out in Captain Kingman's testimony yesterday that I would like to speak about a moment. It is in regard to the various forms of revetments and their respective merits. The history of the work of revetment in the operations of the Commission would be interesting if there were time to state it. When the work was first begun the plan proposed comprised revetments for caving banks where necessary, contraction works at abnormally wide places, and levees to restrain the flood volume. When the work was begun, we had before us no experience which was applicable to the case, except work which had been done in the upper Mississippi, between St. Louis and Cairo, and some work on the Missouri.

In laying out the work at Plum Point and Lake Providence, the engineers of the Commission adopted such methods as seemed reasonably certain to produce the results which were desired, based upon experience which had been acquired in the upper river. I do not think I cast any reflection upon the engineers in saying that the result has proved that those methods of construction were not quite adequate to the case. It has been demonstrated by experience (and I do not know how else it could have been found out) that the methods of making bank revetments which had proved sufficient elsewhere were not sufficient in the lower parts of the river. The same methods of construction which were applied with entire success at Horsetail Bar, below St. Louis, have proved to be insufficient at Plum Point and Lake Providence. It is necessary that mattresses shall be wider and stronger, and that the work shall be more thorough. This part of the work first done failed in some instances to stand the pressure which was brought to bear upon it.

It was natural, I suppose, that the Commission should try first such forms of construction as promised the desired results with the least cost. As it became apparent that stronger and costlier forms must be used they were adopted. This part of the work was just fairly under way, when there was a discussion of the subject in the public prints and in Congress, which produced the impression in Congress that the work of revetment was unwise; and in the appropriation bill next passed the Commission was forbidden to make use of that method of improvement. The result was that that part of the work had to be abandoned for a couple of years, and a good deal that had been done was lost. Some important results that had been obtained and others that were within reach, were also lost. More mature consideration of the subject, I think, induced the removal of that impression in regard to that part of the work, and it was taken up again, and has since been applied in a more thorough and effective, but at the same time in a more expensive manner. Three forms of revetment have been tried. The first used is what is called the "continuous mattress," which consists of a heavy, strong fabric made of poles and brush laid down continuously upon the surface of the bank under the low-water line, the protection above that being by riprap work of stone. The second form is known as the "discontinuous mattress," which consists of mattresses laid down for 500 or 1,000 feet, with a vacant space of similar length, and then another piece of mattress, and so on. The third form consists of spur dikes placed at intervals of 500 to 1,000 feet or more. I think there is no doubt that the surest form of revetment is the heavy, continuous mattress. In using it the bank is graded to a flat slope and the mattresses, from 200 to 300 feet wide, are put down with the upper edges close to the surface of low water, and the bank above this, pretty nearly to the top, is covered with stone riprap to the depth of about 10 inches.

I think that that kind of work can be made to hold any caving bank on the river, unless it may be a freshly built sand bar. But it is an expensive form of work. With the view of endeavoring to reach the same results with less expense the other forms have been tried. Neither has been tried long enough, or under a sufficient variety of circumstances, to demonstrate just to what extent it will be safe to use it. I think a great deal will depend upon the character of the soil and the locality.

Spurs have been used in New Orleans Harbor and seem to have been an entire success. There we have a foundation of fine, old, hard deposit to build spur dikes upon. They have also been tried at Greenville, and apparently with entire success. The bank at that place is also a good bank to hold in that way. It is an old cypress swamp, which consists usually of pretty fine and hard material. The bank changes in its character above Greenville to one of coarser material and looser texture. When I was there a few weeks ago the caving was going on in the upper part of the bank above Greenville at a rapid rate. The spurs at the upper end of the work that has been done had been attacked, and one or two of them seemed to be in some danger. The Commission directed at that place that some mattress work should be put down to protect the flanks of the spurs, and that additional spurs should be put in above those already there.

Prior to going down the river we had directed the protection of a caving bank at the narrow neck of land in the second bend above Greenville by spurs. There is a bend there at which a cut-off is threatened very seriously, and at which such an event would do incalculable damage. Above the city of Greenville there is a series of remarkable bends. The river has apparently followed one channel without deviation for a great many years, and has reached a condition of unusual stability. The channel has always been an excellent one for navigation. If one of these bends should be cut off it would induce a fall in the river within a distance of perhaps a quarter of a mile of perhaps 6 or 8 feet.

Mr. BRICKNER. A fall of water or fall of slope?

Mr. TAYLOR. A fall of slope; and it would increase the velocity both above and below to such an extent that it is almost certain that other cut-offs would follow; and I do not think any man could foresee where the injury would stop. When the Commission visited the place a few weeks ago the danger seemed to be so imminent that we were afraid to risk spurs. We walked across the neck and examined the ground carefully, and we determined to put in the very best kind of continuous revetment, and allotted for that purpose $300,000. A larger use of spurs has not been made because there have been only a few places where the Commission felt that it could risk them.

I am of opinion that it will be the policy of the Commission hereafter to use spur dikes in localities where they seem to be applicable and where a little chance of failure can be taken. But when you put in spur dikes at less distances than 1,000 feet you do not gain very much upon the cost of continuous revetment. If you put them as far apart as 1,000 feet you take the chances of the river's making pockets between them so deep that it will become difficult, and perhaps impossible, to keep the spurs themselves from being flanked and carried out. The river will eat in between the spurs some distance—that is expected; but just how far you can not know in advance. An embarrassment which attends all this work is that a good deal of it is necessarily experimental. And the experiments are so costly, and take so long to try, that engineers necessarily feel stongly inclined to take the safe side, as far as possible. I think we shall find (in fact we have found) that certain points on the river are the keys of the situation for long distances below them; and I believe that the final solution of the problem will be found in the correct analysis of the relation between the different parts of the river and the holding of the fundamental points by works of revetment. When that is done I think that time and nature will do the rest. I believe that a greater amount of patience for the development of results will save a great deal of money. You can improve a bad reach pretty quickly by expending a large sum of money upon it, or you can improve it at much less expense by putting in a little work at the proper places and waiting for results to come about.

The CHAIRMAN. If the river were left to itself I suppose it would make several of these cut-offs?

Mr. TAYLOR. There is no doubt about that.

The CHAIRMAN. If it should do that would it not straighten the stream, increase the current, and improve the navigation?

Mr. TAYLOR. It would injure it, I think.

The CHAIRMAN. Why?

Mr. TAYLOR. The effect of a cut-off is to increase the velocity of the water very greatly, and cause caving for many miles below and above, and the vast masses of sand and earth that are torn out of the banks in this process of caving are carried just a little way and dropped on the bars. And it is those bars which impede navigation.

The CHAIRMAN. This increase of current occasioned by the cut-off would increase the caving below and above, and thereby injure navigation, you think?

Mr. TAYLOR. Very much. There is not a mile in the Mississippi River, from Cairo to the Gulf, where the channel has remained in the same place for 2 years that there is not perfectly good navigation.

Mr. CATCHINGS. When cut-offs take place the slope is very much greater?

Mr. TAYLOR. Very much. It may be 15 miles around a bend, and there may be 6 inches of fall to the mile all the way round. If the neck is a quarter of a mile wide, the fall that was distributed round the bend is suddenly concentrated in that quarter of a mile.

Mr. CATCHINGS. The caving will go on until this slope has been equalized?

Mr. TAYLOR. The effect of a cut-off is first to cut a very deep channel right through the space where the breach is made. Then the current is so much quickened above and below that caving goes on with increased rapidity until the river regains its length by making new bends.

Mr. BOATNER. Do not disturbances and changes more than increased velocity cause this increased caving after cut-offs?

Mr. TAYLOR. A cut-off at the neck of a bend makes a new current at right angles to the line of the old one. The mischief done by a cut-off is by no means confined to the locality.

Mr. BOATNER. Does the caving occasioned by the disturbances and changes in the current result from the cut-off above?

Mr. TAYLOR. It results from changes in the direction of the current, and the increase of velocity. Both causes operate. You have a changed current, and an increased velocity at the same time.

Mr. STOCKDALE. What data have you about the length of the river after these cut-offs? From observations of the last 34 years there ought to have been a shortening of the river of at least 150 miles.

Mr. TAYLOR. That subject was investigated several years ago, and all the data then available was brought together, old maps and records compared, and the conclusion arrived at was that the length of the river had not materially changed. The length has remained substantially the same.

Mr. STOCKDALE. What is the influence of the caving?

Mr. TAYLOR. The effect is greater below, but it is also felt above for a number of miles.

Mr. CATCHINGS. Do not the people all through the Mississippi River Valley have a great and intense concern in this question of floods?

Mr. TAYLOR. Yes, sir.

Mr. CATCHINGS. It is the thing which the people talk about more than anything else. They have paid great consideration to this subject, so far as I have observed. Various plans and projects have been tried from time to time, and the effect noticed?

Mr. TAYLOR. Certainly.

Mr. STOCKDALE. And they are people of uncommon intelligence?

Mr. TAYLOR. Yes, sir; many of them.

Mr. CATCHINGS. So far as your acquaintance with public opinion in the Mississippi Valley is concerned, is it your judgment that they are practically unanimous that the outlet theory is a humbug and a fallacy?

Mr. TAYLOR. I do not know of any other opinion upon the subject among intelligent and thoughtful men.

Mr. CATCHINGS. And if the people believed that that would give them relief from overflows, they would adopt it?

Mr. TAYLOR. Yes, sir; I should think so.

Mr. BOATNER. Do you mean and do you think that that is the opinion of the people in the valley?

Mr. TAYLOR. So far as my acquaintance goes I may say that I have never met an intelligent man in my life, with whom I have discussed the subject, who was in favor of outlets, except gentlemen in the North, who were entirely unfamiliar with the conditions, and who thought of the Mississippi River as a stream of pure water, and did not take into account at all, from want of knowledge of the subject, the action of the depositing sediment.

Mr. BOATNER. The opinion is entertained only by those who do not know nothing about it?

Mr. TAYLOR. Yes, sir; people who are not familiar with the conditions.

Adjourned.
